EUROPEAN NATIONS feverishly building airplanes for attack, also prepare protection against enemy planes.

In England about forty million people locked up in great cities and small crowded islands will be provided, every one, at public expense, with masks to keep out poison gas, to be worn while they hurry to the nearest gas proof refuge.

WHETHER THIS free distribution of British masks will apply to the independent south of Ireland is not stated. The British government, always careful to refer to the king as king of northern Ireland may trust Devalera to take care of his own.

IN GERMANY, Italy, to a less degree in France and in far off Japan, the public has long been trained to listen for the bombardment alarm and seek instantly the nearest refuge. The most modern gas proof refuges are constructed two stories up in the air; heavier-than-air poison gases seek the lower levels and a refuge below ground might be more dangerous than the open air.

GERMANY, ALWAYS thorough, blandly ignoring the foolishly constructed war-provoking Versailles Treaty are refortifying the Island of Heligoland, constructing there, according to British authorities, what will be the most powerful military fortifications and airbase in Europe.

Heligoland is only four hundred miles from the British coast. Bombing planes located there would not only control the Baltic, but menace all shipping engaged in supplying Britain with food and raw materials.

In addition to refortifying Heligoland on a greater scale than ever, the Germans are fortifying the Island of Sylt, farther to the northeast, just south of the Danish frontier. Furthermore the British government is informed that:

"In the islands of Borkum, Juist, Nordeney, Langevoog, Spiekeroog and Wangeroog thousands of tons of concrete are being laid down both for fortifications and for aeroplane landing grounds.

"Visitors are debarred from coming anywhere near these northern coasts with the exception of a few pleasure resorts.

"On all these islands as well as along the coast of the mainland from Emden round to Bremerhaven at the mouth of the Weser, there is extraordinary activity on the part of the German air force. The whole area resembles a gigantic pool covered with gnats, so large is the number of men at work."

WHILE CONSTRUCTING her "largest and most strongly defended military air and naval base in Europe," Germany is constructing "huge underground flying-boat hangars" that will protect fighting aircraft from enemy bombardments.

MERCURY HITS 101 DEGREES IN MONROE

For the third successive day, Monroe yesterday sweltered under a temperature that went above 100 degrees. Yesterday's high was 101, according to Miss Katie Key, government weather observer. A similar maximum was recorded by the Natural Gas company's thermometer at the city hall.

A brief but cooling rain fell here yesterday afternoon and the temperature dropped rapidly. The rain was not believed widespread and was not sufficient to aid crops materially, observers said.

Some hope of continued relief from the heat wave was seen last night in today's weather forecast which said: "Unsettled, scattered thundershowers in east portion."

Maximum temperatures reported last night by the Associated Press were:

HAND GRENADE SHIPMENT FOR SPANIARDS SEIZED

BRUSSELS, Aug. 8.—(AP)—Five hundred tons of hand grenades were seized today by the government from the Antwerp agent of a German armament firm.

The munitions were reported consigned to Spain on a steamer bound for Brazil.

A similar shipment recently was sent to Portugal, the newspaper Nation said, reported, after the necessary permits required by law had been obtained.

REP. ZIONCHECK'S DEATH DECLARED CAUSED BY WORRY

KINSMAN DESCRIBES HOW CONGRESSMAN SLEW SELF

Speaker Bankhead Appoints House Committee To Attend Last Rites

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 8.—(AP)—The five-story death dive of Rep. Marion A. Zioncheck, Washington's sensation-stirring congressman, was attributed by friends tonight to worry over a psychiatrist's advice that he take a long rest from politics.

The playboy congressman dashed from a desk in his campaign headquarters yesterday, leaped out a window and plunged to his death on the sidewalk below under the horrified eyes of his bride, waiting for him in a parked automobile.

Friends who refused to permit use of their names intimated Zioncheck was about to undergo more institutional treatment but had been given permission to attend one last political meeting.

"He thought he could show his friends that he was all right," said County Prosecutor Warren G. Magnuson, a candidate for the Democratic congressional nomination.

The friends said Zioncheck's case had been diagnosed as depressive melancholia and that the family had been warned not to leave him unattended when he was having spells of depression.

Zioncheck was sitting in his newly opened fifth floor campaign office writing a note when his brother-in-law, William Nadeau, arrived there last night to take him to a political meeting.

Nadeau said he looked over Zioncheck's shoulder and observed that the note was incoherent. He urged the congressman to get ready for the meeting.

"I helped him on with his coat," Nadeau said, "and asked him if he had a hat. He pointed to the top of a

MISSING AIRSHIP REPORTED FOUND

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, Aug. 8.—(AP)—John Hajdukovich, prospector, flew here today with word he and two companions found the Arthur F. Hines plane, missing with Pilot Hines and three passengers almost a year, on a barren mountain range 175 miles east of here.

Bearing the motor plate from the plane he said was found on the mountains, Hajdukovich told of discovering the ship burned and only a few bones remaining.

The numbers of the plate checked with those of the orange-winged ship in which Hines, Mr. and Mrs. John Lonz and Alton Nordale, all of Fairbanks, took off from Dawson August 19, 1935, to Fairbanks.

Their ship vanished en route and an airplane search in which many of Alaska's famous aviators joined failed to disclose it.

Hajdukovich said he, Bill McConn and Carl Tweiten found the plane at about 5,000 feet elevation on the range rising from the Healy river.

CONNER BLAMED FOR LOSS OF TAX FUNDS

CALHOUN CITY, Miss., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Sen. Pat Harrison, seeking re-election, charged in a speech here today that his opponent, former Gov. Sennett Conner, "is responsible for loss by the state of tax funds through gasoline bootlegging and racketeering."

Senator Harrison said Conner refused the request of a committee which called upon him during the final legislative session of his administration asking that a recommendation be made for investigation of reported gasoline tax evasions.

Declaring that "it was suggested to Conner that the collection of more than $2,000,000 might be effected, in a probe of reported gasoline tax evasions," Harrison said his opponent "turned down the suggestion and refused to make the recommendations to the legislature."

'THE VANISHING REDSKIN'

Bent on spreading the philosophy of world peace by means of "feathers instead of bullets," Woody Hockaday (above), the "feather man" from Wichita, Kas., who calls himself "Chief Pow Wow," invaded the war department building in Washington and scattered feathers all over the office of Harry H. Woodring, assistant secretary of war. "Chief Pow Wow" vanished inside the walls of a hospital for mental observation following his peculiar antics in the dignified offices of Mr. Woodring. APPROVAL GIVEN OLD AGE PLANS

Federal Security Board Okehs Louisiana Program For Old Age Help

BATON ROUGE, La., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Louisiana's plans for old age assistance and aid to dependent children have been approved by the social security board in Washington, according to a telegram received today at the office of Gov. Richard W. Leche.

The approval means no immediate outward change in the administration of old age assistance, said Harry J. Early, director of the state emergency relief administration.

The state ERA is the agency charged with the responsibility of continuing in effect assistance to the needy aged and aid for dependent children in every parish in the state until the new state department of public welfare, created at the last regular session of the legislature, becomes operative following the adoption of a constitutional amendment in November.

The constitutional amendment and the legislation going with it make

KING EDWARD OFF ON HIS VACATION

His majesty, incognito as the Duke of Lancaster, established a precedent as the first British king to fly abroad.

He will board the Nahlin "somewhere in the Adriatic sea." The exact route of the cruise was kept secret.

The crew of 50 on the yacht wore new uniforms from caps to shoes. They were pledged to secrecy.

On the $1,390,000 boat, the king is expected to sail leisurely through the islands of the Dalmatian archipelago off the coast of Yugoslavia, across the waters from the heel of Italy's boot.

Two British destroyers will accompany the royal party, which will be absent from England about a month.

JOSEPH GOTTLIEB, STATE BANKER, DIES AT CAPITAL

BATON ROUGE, La., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Joseph Gottlieb, well-known in Louisiana banking and financial circles for a half century, died here at 1:50 o'clock this morning at the age of 74 years.

Gottlieb returned to Baton Rouge from a vacation on the Mississippi gulf coast Wednesday suffering from what he thought to be a cold. Yesterday afternoon it was found that he was breathing poorly from a condition of asthma and was taken to a sanitarium where he was placed in an oxygen tent. He died 10 hours later.

HOWELL SELECTED AS ARMS EXPERT

Receives Appointment By Guerre As Instructor On State Police Force

BATON ROUGE, La., Aug. 8.—(AP)—The appointment of R. J. Howell, for 15 years New Orleans representative of a firearms company, as firearms instructor in the department of state police was announced today by Brig.-Gen. Louis F. Guerre, superintendent of the department.

Howell gave his first lecture on firearms last night, speaking before the police of the fourth state police district and will deliver lectures to the officers in the other districts.

Howell will also have charge of the registration of machine guns, gas guns and bombs and rifles and shotguns with barrels 20 inches in length or less, as required by an act of the legislature passed in 1934.

The state police have inaugurated a system of daily report bulletins to be made to sheriffs and peace officers giving names of individuals wanted for crime and other information and are asking the fullest cooperation with local authorities in matters of reporting crimes and recovered stolen goods.

2 RUSSIAN FLIERS ARE FORCED DOWN

SEATTLE, Aug. 8.—(AP)—Nicholas Sokoloff, representing Amtorg, Russian trading agency, said tonight the Russian fliers, Sigismund Levanevsky and Victory Levchenkozn en route to Siberia via Alaska, were forced down by poor visibility at Bella Bella, B. C., at 3 p.m. (5 p.m., C. S. T.) today.

They planned to resume their hop to Juneau, Alaska, tomorrow morning, weather permitting, he said.

The Russians, in a new low-winged Vultee monoplane, took off from the Sand Point naval air base on Lake Washington here today at 10:26 a.m.

They had a tail wind and had hoped to reach Juneau, 900 miles away, by 5 p.m.

Bella Bella is more than 300 miles north of Vancouver, B. C., in an isolated coastal region and is without telephone, telegraph or wireless connection with the outside world.

SLAYER OF WIFE'S LOVER GIVEN FREEDOM ON BOND

VICKSBURG, Miss., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Louis Mize, 24-year-old oil company employe, was released under $3,500 bond today after a preliminary hearing on a murder charge, growing out of the slaying July 31, of Martin W. Decelle, baker, whom Mize charged with "breaking up" his home.

Scenes immediately preceding the shooting were re-enacted from the witness stand by Sheriff Joseph Ring of Warren county, Deputy Sheriff Thomas Byrd and Harry Austin, Jr., taxicab driver, all eye witnesses who stood by helplessly as Mize fired two bullets into the body of Decelle, found sitting in an automobile on a lonely road with Mize's wife.

DEMOCRATIC FOES OF NEW DEAL LAY PLANS FOR FIGHT

Group Renounces Roosevelt But Doesn't Endorse Either Candidate

FORMER SENATOR REED TO HEAD NEW ORGANIZATION

Plans Announced For Sending Speakers 'Into Every State In The Union'

By Richard L. Turner
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

DETROIT, Aug. 8.—(AP)—A new political organization to be known as "the National Jeffersonian Democrats," was formed here today in an effort to rally anti-New Deal Democrats into active opposition to the re-election of President Roosevelt.

While renouncing President Roosevelt, the conference did not endorse any other candidate.

At the head of the new organization is James A. Reed, Democratic former senator from Missouri, who announced plans for sending speakers "into every state in the union," and for machinery roughly paralleling that of the two major parties. Reed emphasized, however, that the organization was not a "new party."

The organization was effected at a meeting attended by more than 40 Democrats opposed to President Roosevelt. Preceding its formation a subcommittee drafted a declaration of opposition to Mr. Roosevelt, asserting the group would not support him for re-election and soliciting the cooperation of others "if they feel that our conclusions are sound."

A number of those who participated have publicly declared their support for Alf M. Landon, the Republican nominee, but southern opposition developed and there was no outright group endorsement of the Kansas governor.

Leadership for the meeting here was furnished by Reed, Joseph B. Ely, former governor of Massachusetts; Bainbridge Colby, secretary of state under President Wilson, and Henry

HOLLY RIDGE MAN DROWNING VICTIM

College Student From Delhi Identifies Body Of Fred Whittington

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 8.—(AP)—The body of a young man pulled from the Mississippi river here Thursday was identified today by a friend as that of Fred Whittington, Jr., 21, of Holly Ridge, Richland parish, the police reported.

Identity was made by James C. Jackson, of Delhi, La., a local college student. Jackson told police that Whittington formerly worked in the Louisiana oil fields and that he had seen him on the street here several days ago.

A note found on the wharf and turned over to the police was signed "Fred Whittington" and stated that he was going to commit suicide by jumping into the river.

AREA PHARMACISTS TO MEET TUESDAY

About 75 members of the fifth district organization of the Louisiana State Pharmaceutical association will attend a meeting here next Tuesday at Hotel Virginia.

The program of the meeting will begin with lunch at noon, to be followed by a business session at 1 p.m. Following the business session a social hour will be held, with refreshments being served.

During the business session the pharmacists will discuss a congressional act which is to govern the price of drugs and which was passed by the last session of congress. The pharmacists also will discuss the Louisiana fair trade act.

FIRST LINCOLN PARISH COTTON BALES GINNED

The first bales of cotton produced in Lincoln parish this year were ginned Saturday morning at Ruston and Choudrant. Both bales were purchased on behalf of the Anderson-Clayton company. The bale at Ruston was ginned at the Lomax Lumber company and was bought by C. G. Latimer at a price of 13 cents a pound. The bale at Choudrant was ginned at O'Neal's gin, and was bought by T. C. Pipes. The price paid for the Choudrant bale was unavailable.

DEMOTED FOR PROBING G-MEN

Because of an "ill-advised" investigation of department of justice agents, these two prominent secret service officials were demoted by Treasury Secretary Morgenthau. Grady Boatwright (left) was dropped from chief of the St. Paul bureau to a field post. Joseph Murphey (right), a veteran of 35 years, was demoted from assistant chief of the secret service to chief of a bureau. (Associated Press Photos—Copyright Harris-Ewing)

SLASH IN COTTON NOT UNEXPECTED

Unable to reflect marketwise the government's estimate of 12,481,000 bales because the local futures market had closed for the week-end, brokers and spot merchants watched the quotations on the Chicago board of trade.

The $1.50 a bale decline in that center according to informed sources was approximately what was expected.

The majority of the trade was waiting the Liverpool response to the government's report on Monday.

Most of the trade was surprised to find that the drouth in the southeast had caused such small damage to the yield in the Carolinas, Georgia and Alabama.

Another unlooked for development was the fact that Arkansas, also reportedly threatened with drouth, was raising a much better crop than last year.

Crop commentators found another significant development in the sharp upturn in the yield per acre reported for the different states.

MEMBERS OF BURNED SHIP'S CREW SAVED

NANTUCKET, Mass., Aug. 8.—(AP)—The five-man crew of the schooner Massasoit, destroyed by fire off this island, was brought ashore today by the schooner Ivanhoe of New Bedford.

Roy Nickerson, engineer, said the crew abandoned ship after fire broke out in the 70-foot schooner's engine room.

As the crew stood by in a dory there was a terrific explosion and the boat burst into flames.

Later the Ivanhoe picked them up, Nickerson said, and they stayed by the burning schooner until 10:30 p. m. when the Ivanhoe had to proceed here to put a sick fisherman ashore.

The coast guard cutter Argo and coast guard planes searched the waters about the burning boat last night for the crew without success.

WILSON REPORTS GOOD CROPS IN THIS REGION

BATON ROUGE, La., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Splendid crops are in prospect for the major portion of north Louisiana, says Harry D. Wilson, commissioner of agriculture and immigration, who has returned from a trip through the state. The single exception to the good crop conditions is in the extreme northwest portion of the state, he said.

"I never saw the farmers in a better frame of mind," Wilson commented. "Warehouses and compresses, which have been permitted to run down since 1928, are being repaired. Everybody seems in good spirits."

VALENTINO'S FIRST WIFE IN FILM JOB

She was Adrienne Matzenauer, 22, daughter of Mme. Margaret Matzenauer, Metropolitan Opera star.

Miss Acker got the role in "Camille" with Greta Garbo, that the young singer was scheduled to play.

It was to have been Miss Matzenauer's debut in pictures.

"And I worked so hard for it," she said. "I've studied music and acting to prepare myself. Then, at the last moment——"

She said she felt ill yesterday morning, but at the appointed hour she was on the "set" in costume and makeup. All the time, she said, she felt herself growing weaker. Suddenly, she collapsed. A studio physician ordered her taken to the hospital where blood transfusions were given for an abdominal ailment.

CENTENNIAL WILL HONOR CITY OF MONROE TODAY

Reservations were made by rail and plane Saturday, and many others were planning to go by automobile. Preparations to "show Monroe people a big time" were reported at the Centennial Frontier headquarters. The newspapers of Fort Worth, which have been "playing up" Monroe for the past week, are expected to give a large amount of space to the advantages and attractions of this city in their editions today in recognition of the Monroe observance.

MOROCCANS MOVE NORTHWARD AFTER CROSSING STRAITS

SUCCESSES CLAIMED BY FORCES OF COMMUNISTS

France Continues Patient Efforts To Obtain Non-Interference Pact

(By Associated Press)

Far to the north, in the Guadarrama mountains, brother Fascist fighters pounded incessantly at the semi-circle of steel which was the Liberal government's challenge to an army determined to capture the capital city.

Loyalists responded in kind, shell for shell, and Madrid Leftist headquarters asserted its victories were widespread and decisive, that the rebel cause was a lost cause.

The Leftist regime listed success upon success throughout Spain to bolster its claim of imminent general victory.

Yet, on the north-central front, Gen. Emilio Mola began moving reinforcements up to the Guadarrama front. He prepared the terrain and took stock of ammunition and guns, for his objective was to join hands with Gen. Francisco Franco's troops from the south—men ferried across the Straits of Gibraltar under gunfire—for a final, smashing attack on Madrid.

Rebel communiques said Franco's legions were drawing northward steadily. Edging north, they related, a column under General Denito captured Siguenza and Alcolea. Still another under Colonel Castejon took Alendralejo. Insurgents under Colonel Ascencion took Merida, cutting the railroad line from Badajoz to Madrid.

But the government slashed without quarter at the rebels on three fronts. Flames lighted by loyalist warships razed Algeciras, southern, rebel-held seaport. Government dispatches described deadly attacks in the province of Huesca, between Zaragoza and the French border.

Reports conflicted. The government said it had suppressed a Fascist revolt in Badajoz province, said by the rebels to be well dominated by them. Moreover, the government announced steady advances in the mountains between Madrid and the rebel-held territory toward the Bay of Biscay.

On the diplomatic front France continued patient efforts to obtain an eight-power general non-intervention accord, so Spain could settle its problems alone. Crossing the Czechoslovakian border, apparently bound for Berlin, was former King Alfonso of Spain.

The German foreign office, in the face of reports that Alfonso was bound for conferences with Chancellor Hitler and possibly with Foreign Minister Ciano of Italy, said it knew nothing of the former monarch's movements.

France urged Hitler and Premier Mussolini to discard their reservations and support neutrality to prevent a threat of European war. The German government approved the idea in principle, but Germany wanted a guarantee that Soviet Russia would keep its fingers out of Spain.

From London to Calais flew King Edward of Great Britain, there to entrain for a trip across the continent to the Adriatic sea and a month's vacation. Some concern over his travels developed because of European unrest.

5 PERSONS INJURED AS BOILER BURSTS

TALCO, Tex., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Five persons, including a small girl, were injured, one seriously, when a boiler exploded on an oil lease tonight near the Talco school.

"Shorty" Dykes, a fireman, was burned seriously; Noel Wedsworth, a welder, was cut and bruised; the eight-year-old girl, whose name was not learned, was cut on the head, and two negroes were struck by flying pieces of iron as the boiler was hurled about 200 feet.

All except Wedsworth, who worked on the well, were passing by the lease at the time of the blast.

An electric power line was blown down and the town was thrown into darkness.

CONNER BLAMED FOR LOSS OF TAX FUNDS

CALHOUN CITY, Miss., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Sen. Pat Harrison, seeking re-election, charged in a speech here today that his opponent, former Gov. Sennett Conner, "is responsible for loss by the state of tax funds through gasoline bootlegging and racketeering."

Senator Harrison said Conner refused the request of a committee which called upon him during the final legislative session of his administration asking that a recommendation be made for investigation of reported gasoline tax evasions.

Declaring that "it was suggested to Conner that the collection of more than $2,000,000 might be effected, in a probe of reported gasoline tax evasions," Harrison said his opponent "turned down the suggestion and refused to make the recommendations to the legislature."

'THE VANISHING REDSKIN'

Bent on spreading the philosophy of world peace by means of "feathers instead of bullets," Woody Hockaday (above), the "feather man" from Wichita, Kas., who calls himself "Chief Pow Wow," invaded the war department building in Washington and scattered feathers all over the office of Harry H. Woodring, assistant secretary of war. "Chief Pow Wow" vanished inside the walls of a hospital for mental observation following his peculiar antics in the dignified offices of Mr. Woodring. APPROVAL GIVEN OLD AGE PLANS

Federal Security Board Okehs Louisiana Program For Old Age Help

BATON ROUGE, La., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Louisiana's plans for old age assistance and aid to dependent children have been approved by the social security board in Washington, according to a telegram received today at the office of Gov. Richard W. Leche.

The approval means no immediate outward change in the administration of old age assistance, said Harry J. Early, director of the state emergency relief administration.

The state ERA is the agency charged with the responsibility of continuing in effect assistance to the needy aged and aid for dependent children in every parish in the state until the new state department of public welfare, created at the last regular session of the legislature, becomes operative following the adoption of a constitutional amendment in November.

KING EDWARD OFF ON HIS VACATION

His majesty, incognito as the Duke of Lancaster, established a precedent as the first British king to fly abroad.

He will board the Nahlin "somewhere in the Adriatic sea." The exact route of the cruise was kept secret.

The crew of 50 on the yacht wore new uniforms from caps to shoes. They were pledged to secrecy.

On the $1,390,000 boat, the king is expected to sail leisurely through the islands of the Dalmatian archipelago off the coast of Yugoslavia, across the waters from the heel of Italy's boot.

Two British destroyers will accompany the royal party, which will be absent from England about a month.

JOSEPH GOTTLIEB, STATE BANKER, DIES AT CAPITAL

BATON ROUGE, La., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Joseph Gottlieb, well-known in Louisiana banking and financial circles for a half century, died here at 1:50 o'clock this morning at the age of 74 years.

Gottlieb returned to Baton Rouge from a vacation on the Mississippi gulf coast Wednesday suffering from what he thought to be a cold. Yesterday afternoon it was found that he was breathing poorly from a condition of asthma and was taken to a sanitarium where he was placed in an oxygen tent. He died 10 hours later.

HOWELL SELECTED AS ARMS EXPERT

Receives Appointment By Guerre As Instructor On State Police Force

BATON ROUGE, La., Aug. 8.—(AP)—The appointment of R. J. Howell, for 15 years New Orleans representative of a firearms company, as firearms instructor in the department of state police was announced today by Brig.-Gen. Louis F. Guerre, superintendent of the department.

Howell gave his first lecture on firearms last night, speaking before the police of the fourth state police district and will deliver lectures to the officers in the other districts.

Howell will also have charge of the registration of machine guns, gas guns and bombs and rifles and shotguns with barrels 20 inches in length or less, as required by an act of the legislature passed in 1934.

The state police have inaugurated a system of daily report bulletins to be made to sheriffs and peace officers giving names of individuals wanted for crime and other information and are asking the fullest cooperation with local authorities in matters of reporting crimes and recovered stolen goods.

2 RUSSIAN FLIERS ARE FORCED DOWN

SEATTLE, Aug. 8.—(AP)—Nicholas Sokoloff, representing Amtorg, Russian trading agency, said tonight the Russian fliers, Sigismund Levanevsky and Victory Levchenkozn en route to Siberia via Alaska, were forced down by poor visibility at Bella Bella, B. C., at 3 p.m. (5 p.m., C. S. T.) today.

They planned to resume their hop to Juneau, Alaska, tomorrow morning, weather permitting, he said.

The Russians, in a new low-winged Vultee monoplane, took off from the Sand Point naval air base on Lake Washington here today at 10:26 a.m.

They had a tail wind and had hoped to reach Juneau, 900 miles away, by 5 p.m.

Bella Bella is more than 300 miles north of Vancouver, B. C., in an isolated coastal region and is without telephone, telegraph or wireless connection with the outside world.

SLAYER OF WIFE'S LOVER GIVEN FREEDOM ON BOND

VICKSBURG, Miss., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Louis Mize, 24-year-old oil company employe, was released under $3,500 bond today after a preliminary hearing on a murder charge, growing out of the slaying July 31, of Martin W. Decelle, baker, whom Mize charged with "breaking up" his home.

Scenes immediately preceding the shooting were re-enacted from the witness stand by Sheriff Joseph Ring of Warren county. Deputy Sheriff Thomas Byrd and Harry Austin, Jr., taxicab driver, all eye witnesses who stood by helplessly as Mize fired two bullets into the body of Decelle, found sitting in an automobile on a lonely road with Mize's wife.

Group Renounces Roosevelt But Doesn't Endorse Either Candidate

FORMER SENATOR REED TO HEAD NEW ORGANIZATION

Plans Announced For Sending Speakers 'Into Every State In The Union'

By Richard L. Turner
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

DETROIT, Aug. 8.—(AP)—A new political organization to be known as "the National Jeffersonian Democrats," was formed here today in an effort to rally anti-New Deal Democrats into active opposition to the re-election of President Roosevelt.

While renouncing President Roosevelt, the conference did not endorse any other candidate.

At the head of the new organization is James A. Reed, Democratic former senator from Missouri, who announced plans for sending speakers "into every state in the union," and for machinery roughly paralleling that of the two major parties. Reed emphasized, however, that the organization was not a "new party."

The organization was effected at a meeting attended by more than 40 Democrats opposed to President Roosevelt. Preceding its formation a subcommittee drafted a declaration of opposition to Mr. Roosevelt, asserting the group would not support him for re-election and soliciting the cooperation of others "if they feel that our conclusions are sound."

A number of those who participated have publicly declared their support for Alf M. Landon, the Republican nominee, but southern opposition developed and there was no outright group endorsement of the Kansas governor.

Leadership for the meeting here was furnished by Reed, Joseph B. Ely, former governor of Massachusetts; Bainbridge Colby, secretary of state under President Wilson, and Henry

HOLLY RIDGE MAN DROWNING VICTIM

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 8.—(AP)—The body of a young man pulled from the Mississippi river here Thursday was identified today by a friend as that of Fred Whittington, Jr., 27, of Holly Ridge, Richland parish, the police reported.

Identity was made by James C. Jackson, of Delhi, La., a local college student. Jackson told police that Whittington formerly worked in the Louisiana oil fields and that he had seen him on the street here several days ago.

A note found on the wharf and turned over to the police was signed "Fred Whittington" and stated that he was going to commit suicide by jumping into the river.

The first bales of cotton produced in Lincoln parish this year were ginned Saturday morning at Ruston and Choudrant. Both bales were purchased on behalf of the Anderson-Clayton company. The bale at Ruston was ginned at the Lomax Lumber company and was bought by C. G. Latimer at a price of 13 cents a pound. The bale at Choudrant was ginned at O'Neal's gin, and was bought by T. C. Pipes. The price paid for the Choudrant bale was unavailable.

Joseph Murphey (right), a veteran of 35 years, was demoted from assistant chief of the secret service to chief of a bureau. (Associated Press Photos—Copyright Harris-Ewing)

SLASH IN COTTON NOT UNEXPECTED

Unable to reflect marketwise the government's estimate of 12,481,000 bales because the local futures market had closed for the week-end, brokers and spot merchants watched the quotations on the Chicago board of trade.

The $1.50 a bale decline in that center according to informed sources was approximately what was expected.

The majority of the trade was waiting the Liverpool response to the government's report on Monday.

Most of the trade was surprised to find that the drouth in the southeast had caused such small damage to the yield in the Carolinas, Georgia and Alabama.

Another unlooked for development was the fact that Arkansas, also reportedly threatened with drouth, was raising a much better crop than last year.

Crop commentators found another significant development in the sharp upturn in the yield per acre reported for the different states.

MEMBERS OF BURNED SHIP'S CREW SAVED

NANTUCKET, Mass., Aug. 8.—(AP)—The five-man crew of the schooner Massasoit, destroyed by fire off this island, was brought ashore today by the schooner Ivanhoe of New Bedford.

Roy Nickerson, engineer, said the crew abandoned ship after fire broke out in the 70-foot schooner's engine room.

As the crew stood by in a dory there was a terrific explosion and the boat burst into flames.

Later the Ivanhoe picked them up. Nickerson said, and they stayed by the burning schooner until 10:30 p. m. when the Ivanhoe had to proceed here to put a sick fisherman ashore.

The coast guard cutter Argo and coast guard planes searched the waters about the burning boat last night for the crew without success.

WILSON REPORTS GOOD CROPS IN THIS REGION

BATON ROUGE, La., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Splendid crops are in prospect for the major portion of north Louisiana, says Harry D. Wilson, commissioner of agriculture and immigration, who has returned from a trip through the state. The single exception to the good crop conditions is in the extreme northwest portion of the state, he said.

"I never saw the farmers in a better frame of mind," Wilson commented. "Warehouses and compresses, which have been permitted to run down since 1928, are being repaired. Everybody seems in good spirits."

ISAACMAN HEADS MONROE DEALERS

L. A. Lay And Ted Madsen Are Other Officials Of Electrical Group

At a meeting of the electrical appliance dealers of Monroe, held in the office of William D. H. Rodriguez, commissioner of finance and public utilities, Joe Isaacman was elected chairman of the new organization which is being formed among the dealers to cooperate with the city in promoting a greater use of electric current among local consumers. L. A. Lay was elected vice-chairman and Ted Madsen, electrical sales representative of the city power and light department, was chosen executive secretary.

A name for the new organization is to be chosen after the conclusion of a contest now being conducted which will close Monday night. The person submitting the best title for the group will be awarded $10, contributed by the members of the new association. Suggested titles are being received by the electrical editor of The World and News-Star.

At the meeting Friday afternoon the three executive officers were instructed to name a board of four directors who will serve with the officers as an executive committee. The members of the board will be chosen from various electrical firms. Thir-

VALENTINO'S FIRST WIFE IN FILM JOB

Miss Acker got the role in "Camille" with Greta Garbo, that the young singer was scheduled to play.

It was to have been Miss Matzenauer's debut in pictures.

"And I worked so hard for it," she said. "I've studied music and acting to prepare myself. Then, at the last moment——"

She said she felt ill yesterday morning, but at the appointed hour she was on the "set" in costume and makeup. All the time, she said, she felt herself growing weaker. Suddenly, she collapsed. A studio physician ordered her taken to the hospital where blood transfusions were given for an abdominal ailment.

CENTENNIAL WILL HONOR CITY OF MONROE TODAY

Today and tomorrow will be observed as "Monroe days" at the Centennial Frontier in Fort Worth. A large number of local people are expected to visit the Frontier City for the occasion. Reservations were made by rail and plane Saturday, and many others were planning to go by automobile. Preparations to "show Monroe people a big time" were reported at the Centennial Frontier headquarters. The newspapers of Fort Worth, which have been "playing up" Monroe for the past week, are expected to give a large amount of space to the advantages and attractions of this city in their editions today in recognition of the Monroe observance.

MOROCCANS MOVE NORTHWARD AFTER CROSSING STRAITS

France Continues Patient Efforts To Obtain Non-Interference Pact

(By Associated Press)

Far to the north, in the Guadarrama mountains, brother Fascist fighters pounded incessantly at the semi-circle of steel which was the Liberal government's challenge to an army determined to capture the capital city.

Loyalists responded in kind, shell for shell, and Madrid Leftist headquarters asserted its victories were widespread and decisive, that the rebel cause was a lost cause.

The Leftist regime listed success upon success throughout Spain to bolster its claim of imminent general victory.

Yet, on the north-central front, Gen. Emilio Mola began moving reinforcements up to the Guadarrama front. He prepared the terrain and took stock of ammunition and guns, for his objective was to join hands with Gen. Francisco Franco's troops from the south—men ferried across the Straits of Gibraltar under gunfire—for a final, smashing attack on Madrid.

Rebel communiques said Franco's legions were drawing northward steadily. Edging north, they related a column under General Denito captured Siguenza and Alcolea. Still another under Colonel Castejon took Alendralejo. Insurgents under Colonel Ascencion took Merida, cutting the railroad line from Badajoz to Madrid.

But the government slashed without quarter at the rebels on three fronts. Flames lighted by loyalist warships razed Algeciras, southern, rebel-held seaport. Government dispatches described deadly attacks in the province of Huesca, between Zaragoza and the French border.

Reports conflicted. The government said it had suppressed a Fascist revolt in Badajoz province, said by the rebels to be well dominated by them. Moreover, the government announced steady advances in the mountains between Madrid and the rebel-held territory toward the Bay of Biscay.

On the diplomatic front France continued patient efforts to obtain an eight-power general non-intervention accord, so Spain could settle its problems alone. Crossing the Czechoslovakian border, apparently bound for Berlin, was former King Alfonso of Spain.

The German foreign office, in the face of reports that Alfonso was bound for conferences with Chancellor Hitler and possibly with Foreign Minister Ciano of Italy, said it knew nothing of the former monarch's movements.

France urged Hitler and Premier Mussolini to discard their reservations and support neutrality to prevent a threat of European war. The German government approved the idea in principle, but Germany wanted a guarantee that Soviet Russia would keep its fingers out of Spain.

From London to Calais flew King Edward of Great Britain, there to entrain for a trip across the continent to the Adriatic sea and a month's vacation. Some concern over his travels developed because of European unrest.

5 PERSONS INJURED AS BOILER BURSTS

TALCO, Tex., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Five persons, including a small girl, were injured, one seriously, when a boiler exploded on an oil lease tonight near the Talco school.

"Shorty" Dykes, a fireman, was burned seriously; Noel Wedsworth, a welder, was cut and bruised; the eight-year-old girl, whose name was not learned, was cut on the head, and two negroes were struck by flying pieces of iron as the boiler was hurled about 200 feet.

All except Wedsworth, who worked on the well, were passing by the lease at the time of the blast.

WILL SHIP SUGAR IN COTTON BAGS

Tests Reveal Lint Containers More Serviceable Than Jute

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 8—(Special)—The never ending search of the federal government for new uses of cotton, one of the nation's most important products, has again been successful.

The latest result is a cotton bag in which to package raw sugar, which has been designated by technologists of the bureau of agricultural economics, in cooperation with North Carolina State college.

The bag is to be put through a series of practical tests in transporting raw sugar from Hawaii to refineries in California, in comparison with sugar bags made of jute. All jute used in this country is imported—chiefly from India.

Cotton bags cost more than jute, but bureau officials believe that this disparity in cost may be overcome by developing a cotton fabric that can be re-used three or more times.

Laboratory tests have demonstrated that the new cotton bag is much more durable than the sugar bags made of jute. The cotton bag will be cheaper than the jute if it can be used three times, since usually jute bags are used only once.

The bureau's technologists designed and developed a machine for making drop strength tests on the bags. When dropped a distance of slightly more than five feet the cotton bag lasted more than 1,700 drops before it broke, but the jute bags could withstand only 185 jolts.

Ten thousand cotton bags will be used by the Hawaiian Sugar association in making test shipments of raw sugar from Hawaii to California. The bureau will have a representative in Hawaii and one in California to study in detail the manner in which bags of sugar are handled from the time they are packed in Hawaii to their arrival in the California refineries.

Officials estimate that if cotton can displace the jute bagging commonly used in packaging Hawaiian raw sugar, it would provide an outlet for about 10,000 bales of cotton a year. If all imports of raw sugar were packaged in cotton bags the consumption of cotton would be increased by about 50,000 bales a year.

CHAPTER VIII

Ann went to the steak roast with Bill Ware and Lefty Ponds. Aimee, the hostess, in her amiable way, cornered Bill and made him help with the fire. It was a task he enjoyed. There had been six years since he had last experienced the clear tang of the north woods. After so long in a city office, the kindling of a flame under the stars with pine sticks was an incredible adventure.

Ann watched him closely as he attended to the fire. The tired lines under his eyes seemed somehow to have been erased. In the reddish glow his white face was like that of a blond Viking, looking over a brazier of coals on the prow of a ship.

He had dressed for the part of the fire-tender. He wore an old gray flannel shirt and dungarees. His feet were encased in a species of ancient sandal. In front of the flames his open throat was like a rugged column.

It was a revelation to Ann. The office worker had vanished, and William Ware had become a romantic personage in his own right, like that Viking she imagined. When he rolled up his sleeves she saw well-developed muscles in his arms. Evidently he kept fit in the city.

He helped Ann with her steak. When, at the start, she burned a finger, he sat cross-legged beside her and showed her how to cook the steak on a forked stick over the coals. Lefty was lackadaisical at his job; he let his steak burn to a crisp.

At intervals Ann saw Bill's eyes following the languid young bond salesman who had somehow monopolized her for this evening. She remembered Bill's hurt look when he had first seen her with another man at the hotel. But Bill hadn't had a chance to talk with her alone.

• • •

He got his chance when Ann walked down to the sandy beach to rub sand in the skillet and clean it—this being regarded as a feminine job. Bill caught up with her, as she dipped her hands into the sands.

"Let me do that," he said, his eyes shining with the glint of the moonlight on the water. When he reached for the skillet his hand brushed against hers.

A moment later, busily scouring the vessel with sand, he turned and said, "Who is that guy you're with? I mean—what is he?"

"I think he sells bonds, or something of the sort," she said.

"Oh!"

"He used to play football at Princeton. That is, before he was married."

"I used to box at college. It was a small middle-western school. But you say he 's married?" Bill faced her with large, hurt eyes.

"But—but he's married!" Bill murmured incredulously. He continued, his eyes still wide, "But you don't go out with him? Not dates?"

Something in Ann rebelled. Perhaps Bill, in his gray flannel shirt and dungarees, seemed a bit callow beside the breezy Lefty Ponds. She said, "What gives you the right to be shocked at anything I do? I don't seem to recall—"

"Oh, I'm sorry!" Something of his hurt was revealed in his face. "I didn't mean to be presumptuous."

• • •

He turned to the skillet again and, silent, scoured it to shining radiance. Ann got up and went back to the fire, and joined Lefty Ponds.

Lefty asked, "who is the boy friend with whom you've been exchanging confidential words?"

"Oh, just a boy I met in the travel office back in the city," she said. "He sold me this vacation. He thinks he goes with it."

Lefty was a little indignant. "Well, he had cheek, I must say! He talked as though he had known you a million years."

"I think he means well," Ann said. "And I don't think he's had much time for the amenities—the little things he should know about courtship and girls."

"Well, tell him not to practice on you," Lefty said hotly. "This was to be my evening with you. Let's leave this crowd and go on some place else."

"No, No," Ann said. "I couldn't do that. That would be selfish. This is the hotel party. We have to be loyal."

Lefty tossed a stone into the fire. "Just as you say," he told her. "Can't we take a stroll down the lake shore and then come back?"

Ann eyed him with a knowing smile. "You think a lot of yourself, don't you?" she said. But she smiled when she said it. "I have no doubt that you are attractive to a lot of women. You are ruthless."

Lefty laughed. "Not when my wife is around! But don't get a rise out of me. I'll just stick around. I like you. I like your reserve. And please, don't be so exclusive!"

• • •

After Lefty had gone to his room, Ann stood on the veranda and watched the moonlight on the water. Lefty had asked them to go to a night club but for some inexplicable reason she didn't want to go. She knew Bill Ware couldn't afford such things, and she didn't want to embarrass him.

Bill had gone to the boathouse dock to talk to Ralph Spring, the boatman. He wanted to hire a canoe for two weeks.

Bill came up the path as Ann was ready to go upstairs. His voice detained her. "Don't go in, please!" he said.

She stood in the path of the moonlight on the porch, and Bill merely stood there, thinking how beautiful she was.

"I'm sorry—about tonight," Ann said.

"Oh, I'm sorry!" he amended. "Perhaps it was selfish of me. I make breaks all the time—with girls. I guess it's the old work-aday harness chafing me. But I'll get free of it for two weeks." He squared his shoulders, and again she looked at the startling white throat. The moonlight painted his bare head with gold.

"You are going to enjoy this mountain air," she said. "Do you like to climb?"

"Will you?" he said eagerly. "I mean—will you climb a mountain with me? I've just rented a canoe for the two weeks, and I intend to go in for everything. Get fit for the old grind again. Feel like a man. How about tomorrow?"

"I'm sorry. I promised to go sailing on St. Regis lake with a boy. It'll take all day."

"With that married man?" Bill asked hotly. "With Lefty—?"

"Oh, that lad!" Bill said, and his spirits fell. "I talked to him—at the office. Playboy. I sold him this vacation." He laughed, a little ruefully. "Now I wish I had sent him to the seashore. But look here—" He realized his bluntness had taken her away from him again, that his presumption had repelled her. "It is selfish of me, I guess. Perhaps every man is selfish about the girl he loves."

Then it was out. Bill Ware, on his first night away from the job in the city, had made this formal declaration.

Ann looked up at him, her face troubled. He was gazing at her as if he expected her to vanish in the air and be forever lost to him.

"But, Bill, I didn't know—" There was nothing she could say. She hadn't dreamed this boy regarded her in such a light. They had met so casually in the travel office. He was just another boy in the workaday canyons of the city. There hadn't seemed to be any romance connected with him.

"Perhaps I'd better listen to you some more," Ann went on, regaining her poise. "How about climbing a mountain—the day after tomorrow?" she said.

"Sold!" Bill replied, in his best business manner.

MRS. HAMILTON NAMED A DEPUTY

Newly Appointed Clerk Of Court Issues Statement Of Appreciation

In a public statement issued Saturday night, W. F. Thurmon, who was named in an interim appointment Friday as clerk of the parish court to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Pat S. Hamilton until an election shall be called by Governor Leche, expressed his appreciation of the honor, and pledged that the affairs of the office would be continued as they were during the administration of the late clerk. He said that he had appointed Mrs. Hamilton a deputy clerk and that she would receive his entire salary until an election is held. The statement follows:

"Permit me to assure the citizenship in general and the many friends of Mr. Hamilton that I appreciate deeply the loss this parish has sustained. I am fully aware of the responsibilities entrusted and the confidence imposed in me by the honorable judges of the fourth judicial court in selecting me to fill the vacancy caused by the death of my true and loyal friend, Pat S. Hamilton.

"May I state at this time that if the law had permitted the appointment of anyone other than a deputy clerk or if Mrs. Pat S. Hamilton had been a deputy clerk, I would not have considered accepting this appointment over her.

"Inasmuch as the law requires the appointing of a deputy, I wish to assure everyone of the same polite and courteous treatment that they were in the habit of receiving from Mr. Hamilton and his employes; that every employe of the clerk's office will be maintained in his present position; that I have already sworn in Mrs. Pat S. Hamilton as a deputy clerk and she shall receive my entire salary as clerk of this honorable court until an election is held.

FIVE PERSONS HURT

FIRST EAST CARROLL BALE

LAKE PROVIDENCE, La., Aug. 8.—(Special)—The first bale of 1936 cotton ginned in East Carroll parish was grown by Frank James, ward six farmer. It weighed 569 pounds and sold for 15 cents a pound. Mr. James has 100 acres of land planted in cotton and expects to make a bale to the acre.

It is thought that efforts to reduce the air resistance to planes eventually will result in placing the motors completely within the wings.

WILL SHIP SUGAR IN COTTON BAGS

Tests Reveal Lint Containers More Serviceable Than Jute

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 8.—(Special)—The never ending search of the federal government for new uses of cotton, one of the nation's most important products, has again been successful.

The latest result is a cotton bag in which to package raw sugar, which has been designated by technologists of the bureau of agricultural economics, in cooperation with North Carolina State college.

The bag is to be put through a series of practical tests in transporting raw sugar from Hawaii to refineries in California, in comparison with sugar bags made of jute. All jute used in this country is imported—chiefly from India.

Cotton bags cost more than jute, but bureau officials believe that this disparity in cost may be overcome by developing a cotton fabric that can be re-used three or more times.

Laboratory tests have demonstrated that the new cotton bag is much more durable than the sugar bags made of jute. The cotton bag will be cheaper than the jute if it can be used three times, since usually jute bags are used only once.

The bureau's technologists designed and developed a machine for making drop strength tests on the bags. When dropped a distance of slightly more than five feet the cotton bag lasted more than 1,700 drops before it broke, but the jute bags could withstand only 185 jolts.

Ten thousand cotton bags will be used by the Hawaiian Sugar association in making test shipments of raw sugar from Hawaii to California. The bureau will have a representative in Hawaii and one in California to study in detail the manner in which bags of sugar are handled from the time they are packed in Hawaii to their arrival in the California refineries.

Officials estimate that if cotton can displace the jute bagging commonly used in packaging Hawaiian raw sugar, it would provide an outlet for about 10,000 bales of cotton a year. If all imports of raw sugar were packaged in cotton bags the consumption of cotton would be increased by about 50,000 bales a year.

EXEMPTIONS SOUGHT

HOMER, La., Aug. 8.—(Special)—Seventeen hundred and thirty-nine applications for homestead exemptions were filed with the assessor of Claiborne parish for 1936, as compared with 1,558 for 1935.

SMOKES APLENTY SOLD AS TOBACCO AUCTIONS OPEN

Tobacco, row on row, jammed warehouses in 15 Georgia cities as the first 1936 auctions got underway, with generally high prices prevailing. Heavy offerings made it impossible to find room for some of the weed and vacant buildings were pressed into service. Here is the interior of a tobacco-crowded warehouse at Valdosta. CHAPTER VIII

Ann went to the steak roast with Bill Ware and Lefty Ponds. Aimee, the hostess, in her amiable way, cornered Bill and made him help with the fire. It was a task he enjoyed. There had been six years since he had last experienced the clear tang of the north woods. After so long in a city office, the kindling of a flame under the stars with pine sticks was an incredible adventure.

Ann watched him closely as he attended to the fire. The tired lines under his eyes seemed somehow to have been erased. In the reddish glow his white face was like that of a blond Viking, looking over a brazier of coals on the prow of a ship.

He had dressed for the part of the fire-tender. He wore an old gray flannel shirt and dungarees. His feet were encased in a species of ancient sandal. In front of the flames his open throat was like a rugged column.

It was a revelation to Ann. The office worker had vanished, and William Ware had become a romantic personage in his own right, like that Viking she imagined. When he rolled up his sleeves she saw well-developed muscles in his arms. Evidently he kept fit in the city.

He helped Ann with her steak. When, at the start, she burned a finger, he sat cross-legged beside her and showed her how to cook the steak on a forked stick over the coals. Lefty was lackadaisical at his job; he let his steak burn to a crisp.

At intervals Ann saw Bill's eyes following the languid young bond salesman who had somehow monopolized her for this evening. She remembered Bill's hurt look when he had first seen her with another man at the hotel. But Bill hadn't had a chance to talk with her alone.

* * *

He got his chance when Ann walked down to the sandy beach to rub sand in the skillet and clean it—this being regarded as a feminine job. Bill caught up with her, as she dipped her hands into the sands.

"Let me do that," he said, his eyes shining with the glint of the moonlight on the water. When he reached for the skillet his hand brushed against hers.

A moment later, busily scouring the vessel with sand, he turned and said, "Who is that guy you're with? I mean—what is he?"

"I think he sells bonds, or something of the sort," she said.

"Oh!"

"He used to play football at Princeton. That is, before he was married."

"I used to box at college. It was a small middle-western school. But you say he 's married?" Bill faced her with large, hurt eyes.

"But—but he's married!" Bill murmured incredulously. He continued, his eyes still wide, "But you don't go out with him? Not dates?"

Something in Ann rebelled. Perhaps Bill, in his gray flannel shirt and dungarees, seemed a bit callow beside the breezy Lefty Ponds. She said, "What gives you the right to be shocked at anything I do? I don't seem to recall—"

"Oh, I'm sorry!" Something of his hurt was revealed in his face. "I didn't mean to be presumptuous."

* * *

He turned to the skillet again and, silent, scoured it to shining radiance. Ann got up and went back to the fire, and joined Lefty Ponds.

Lefty asked, "who is the boy friend with whom you've been exchanging confidential words?"

"Oh, just a boy I met in the travel office back in the city," she said. "He sold me this vacation. He thinks he goes with it."

Lefty was a little indignant. "Well, he had cheek, I must say! He talked as though he had known you a million years."

"I think he means well," Ann said. "And I don't think he's had much time for the amenities—the little things he should know about courtship and girls."

"Well, tell him not to practice on you," Lefty said hotly. "This was to be my evening with you. Let's leave this crowd and go on some place else."

"No, No," Ann said. "I couldn't do that. That would be selfish. This is the hotel party. We have to be loyal."

Lefty tossed a stone into the fire. "Just as you say," he told her. "Can't we take a stroll down the lake shore and then come back?"

Ann eyed him with a knowing smile. "You think a lot of yourself, don't you?" she said. But she smiled when she said it. "I have no doubt that you are attractive to a lot of women. You are ruthless."

Lefty laughed. "Not when my wife is around! But don't get a rise out of me. I'll just stick around. I like you. I like your reserve. And please, don't be so exclusive!"

* * *

After Lefty had gone to his room, Ann stood on the veranda and watched the moonlight on the water. Lefty had asked them to go to a night club but for some inexplicable reason she didn't want to go. She knew Bill Ware couldn't afford such things, and she didn't want to embarrass him.

Bill had gone to the boathouse dock to talk to Ralph Spring, the boatman. He wanted to hire a canoe for two weeks.

Bill came up the path as Ann was ready to go upstairs. His voice detained her. "Don't go in, please!" he said.

She stood in the path of the moonlight on the porch, and Bill merely stood there, thinking how beautiful she was.

"I'm sorry—about tonight," Ann said.

"Oh, I'm sorry!" he amended. "Perhaps it was selfish of me. I make breaks all the time—with girls. I guess it's the old work-aday harness chafing me. But I'll get free of it for two weeks." He squared his shoulders, and again she looked at the startling white throat. The moonlight painted his bare head with gold.

"You are going to enjoy this mountain air," she said. "Do you like to climb?"

"Will you?" he said eagerly. "I mean—will you climb a mountain with me? I've just rented a canoe for the two weeks, and I intend to go in for everything. Get fit for the old grind again. Feel like a man. How about tomorrow?"

"I'm sorry. I promised to go sailing on St. Regis lake with a boy. It'll take all day."

"With that married man?" Bill asked hotly. "With Lefty—?"

"Oh, that lad!" Bill said, and his spirits fell. "I talked to him—at the office. Playboy. I sold him this vacation." He laughed, a little ruefully. "Now I wish I had sent him to the seashore. But look here—" He realized his bluntness had taken her away from him again, that his presumption had repelled her. "It is selfish of me, I guess. Perhaps every man is selfish about the girl he loves."

Then it was out. Bill Ware, on his first night away from the job in the city, had made this formal declaration.

Ann looked up at him, her face troubled. He was gazing at her as if he expected her to vanish in the air and be forever lost to him.

"But, Bill, I didn't know—" There was nothing she could say. She hadn't dreamed this boy regarded her in such a light. They had met so casually in the travel office. He was just another boy in the workaday canyons of the city. There hadn't seemed to be any romance connected with him.

"Perhaps I'd better listen to you some more," Ann went on, regaining her poise. "How about climbing a mountain—the day after tomorrow?" she said.

"Sold!" Bill replied, in his best business manner.

ROAD AID ASKED

HOMER, La., Aug. 8.—(Special)—At a meeting of the Claiborne parish police jury Wednesday, resolutions were passed asking the state to take over many of the parish roads, or improve them soon.

MRS. HAMILTON NAMED A DEPUTY

Newly Appointed Clerk Of Court Issues Statement Of Appreciation

In a public statement issued Saturday night, W. F. Thurmon, who was named in an interim appointment Friday as clerk of the parish court to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Pat S. Hamilton until an election shall be called by Governor Leche, expressed his appreciation of the honor, and pledged that the affairs of the office would be continued as they were during the administration of the late clerk. He said that he had appointed Mrs. Hamilton a deputy clerk and that she would receive his entire salary until an election is held. The statement follows:

"Permit me to assure the citizenship in general and the many friends of Mr. Hamilton that I appreciate deeply the loss this parish has sustained. I am fully aware of the responsibilities entrusted and the confidence imposed in me by the honorable judges of the fourth judicial court in selecting me to fill the vacancy caused by the death of my true and loyal friend, Pat S. Hamilton.

"May I state at this time that if the law had permitted the appointment of anyone other than a deputy clerk or if Mrs. Pat S. Hamilton had been a deputy clerk, I would not have considered accepting this appointment over her.

"Inasmuch as the law requires the appointing of a deputy, I wish to assure everyone of the same polite and courteous treatment that they were in the habit of receiving from Mr. Hamilton and his employes; that every employe of the clerk's office will be maintained in his present position; that I have already sworn in Mrs. Pat S. Hamilton as a deputy clerk and she shall receive my entire salary as clerk of this honorable court until an election is held.

FIVE PERSONS HURT

TALLULAH, La., Aug. 8.—(Special)—Five persons en route from Mexico to Kings Mountain, N. C., were injured when their car plunged into a ditch four miles west of here late Thursday. The accident was caused by the driver's losing control of the car. The victims were given treatment at a clinic here. They were W. P. Herndon, L. L. M. Archer, B. P. Dickerson, F. F. Herndon and W. A. Williamson.

FIRST EAST CARROLL BALE

LAKE PROVIDENCE, La., Aug. 8.—(Special)—The first bale of 1936 cotton ginned in East Carroll parish was grown by Frank James, ward six farmer. It weighed 569 pounds and sold for 15 cents a pound. Mr. James has 100 acres of land planted in cotton and expects to make a bale to the acre.

It is thought that efforts to reduce the air resistance to planes eventually will result in placing the motors completely within the wings.

TIPS ON "MAKING UP" FOR GLASSES

If proper attention is given to makeup, eyewear will not detract in the least from the loveliness of a woman's appearance. Care must be used in applying rouge. Apply it lightly near the eyes. The shadow cast by glasses will deepen the color in the upper areas of the cheeks. For beauty of the eyes use the right kind of glasses.

FIRM ANNOUNCES NEW DEPARTMENT

Special Gas Appliance Unit Features Kelvinator Equipment At St. John's

The St. John Electric company, 211 DeSiard street, announces the opening of its special gas appliance department featuring Kelvinator gas ranges and appliances.

Some of the features comprise multiple wall oven construction, removable oven bottom, perfected heat regulator, automatic lighter, deep drawn burner trays, and spring-hinged top cover.

The design is modernistic with exterior finish of full porcelain. The cooking top surface is of acid-resisting substance that insures long life. The interior width of every oven is full 16 inches. There is ample insulation.

These are only a few of the more important features of the new ranges and the public is cordially invited to call and make inspection.

The management has secured trained experts in the gas appliance department and states that it will be a pleasure to aid the public with a new service that is vital to every home. Adjustments for regulation for repairs of anything that burns gas can now be obtained here and those in charge anticipate that the announcement will meet with the widest popularity.

WATER SYSTEM IMPROVED

BONITA, Aug. 8.—(Special)—Improvements on the town water system have been completed. A 250-foot deep well was drilled, furnishing an adequate supply of good water. The tank was also rebuilt and repainted and the pumps are now undergoing repairs. It is expected that all three-quarter-inch water lines will be replaced with two-inch pipe in the near future.

TIPS ON "MAKING UP" FOR GLASSES

If proper attention is given to makeup, eyewear will not detract in the least from the loveliness of a woman's appearance. Care must be used in applying rouge. Apply it lightly near the eyes. The shadow cast by glasses will deepen the color in the upper areas of the cheeks. For beauty of the eyes use the right kind of glasses.

Futility Of Arguing

Perhaps one of the most futile things on earth is argument. It seldom does any good. It often causes hard feelings and ends in anger. That's about all it ever does accomplish.

Every person, with any brains at all, thinks he has used them, and arrived at his own unshakable opinions. Argument with some one else, stubbornly sure he is as right as you are, doesn't often change you an iota, so why should you expect it to change him? Why should either of you think that mounting anger, because each one can not convince the other, would do a particle of good?

It was Voltaire, in his controversy with Helvetius, who once wrote to his opponent: "I wholly disagree with what you have said, and I will defend to the death your right to say it." That is the broad-minded, sensible way to look at it. Everyone does have a right to his own opinion, and a right to express it. So, if you heartily disagree with him, why deny him that right? All you need do to avoid argument about it is to grant him that right, and not try to talk him out of it into your way of thinking. You also have the right to think and talk as you feel, but when you know and see he doesn't agree with you, you can always change the subject, or hold your tongue. Even if you succeed in gaining your point in an argument, keep in mind that the old couplet is eminently true, that "a man convinced against his will, is of the same opinion still."

Some people seem to think it would be showing the white feather to abandon argument; that it would be a betrayal of one's own convictions. But it isn't at all. Good breeding demands that much of us, at least, especially in social contacts. It taboos discussions about religion, politics and all other controversial subjects, just because they are likely to degenerate into fierce arguments that frequently hurt feelings. It simply isn't polite to brawl, and brawling is what it too often amounts to.

The pest and nuisance who loves argument for its own sake, we have with us always. He is invariably, violently partisan, though he seldom knows why, and loves to say something that will start an argument. Perhaps he looks on it largely as a sort of exercise for his own tongue and wits, and he usually is pretty bitter, saying things best left unsaid, once he has baited some one else into taking up the cudgels for the other side. But even he can be squelched by ignoring him and refusing to become involved with him.

He will not and can not argue by himself, and if cold-shouldered long enough will finally see he is wasting his time and desist. No matter how much one may have a right to his own opinion, who, after all, really cares what it is? It is valuable mostly to him, alone, and the best thing he can do with it is to keep it sacredly his. Airing doesn't make it any more securely his, and it's the one thing he can be entirely selfish about. He needn't share it with anyone unless he wants to.

COURTING AND MARRYING

The claimed discovery of the Scotch scientist, who announced recently that, contrary to popular belief, opposites do not attract each other in matters of courting and marrying, seems to put an entirely new face on the whole institution of matrimony.

According to this savant, we really are attracted in courting and marrying by those who are most like ourselves. If that is true, matrimony at once seems put on a higher plane than it has been assumed to occupy throughout the ages. Human-kind's opinion of itself being what it is, what greater compliment could the average person pay his mate than by marrying him or her, as the case may be? According to the Scotchman's theory, marriage really starts off on a basis of mutual admiration even more fundamental and compelling than almost any of us had thought was possible.

What we can not understand, however, if why, if the Scotchman is right, marriage was so much more stable an institution in those lavender-scented days when the swain was wont to begin the courtship by groaning to himself and others, "I'm not half good enough for her." Under the theory of like attracting likes, he really was setting up the proposition that "She's not half good enough for me," which would seem to have been a poor foundation for matrimonial alliance that, nevertheless, usually lasted at least until the golden wedding.

And, on the other hand, why all the divorce mills in this present age, when marriage seems to be so largely a matter of mutual condescension and implies, if likes attract likes, the practical ultimate in mutual flattery?

However, the scientist may have based his theory on observations confined to his native Scotland, where, we are led to suppose, no thorough-going Scotchman ever took a lass to wife unless assured she was as like him as possible in the value she would place upon a shilling.

There must be moments when Doc Townsend stops "martyring" long enough to wonder how much of the swag some of the birds he has lately started to chum with will want.

There is a divinity that shapes our ends, and the odds are 50 to 1 that you can't quote the rest of it correctly.

THE LOVE WE KNOW

I did not know that love could be so quiet.
I thought love made a loud, flambuoyant show,
When I was young and selfish thoughts ran riot;
But now I know
That love can be true friendship, glorifying
The whole world with its sane and steady glow;
Serene as lamplight, warm as suns, undying—
The love we know!

Study In Contrasts

By BRUCE CATTON

One stretches for 3,000 miles between the United States and Canada. The other runs a shorter distance between France and Spain.

Along the American-Canadian frontier there is peace; peace so firmly established, so taken for granted, that there are no guns to enforce it, and no one ever stops to think that it is anything especial in the way of a blessing.

On the Franco-Spanish border there are guns, tension, and watchfulness. From below the Pyrenees come the crackle of firearms and the smoke of battle; on the mountains, anxious guards peer to the south, and to the north French statesmen try to make out the shape of things to come in the battle smoke.

It is quite within the bounds of possibility that the question of life or death for some millions of healthy young Europeans will hinge on what happens in Spain in the next few months.

• • •

There is a contrast between these two frontiers which goes far deeper than the mere fact that one border is fortified and the other is not. That fact is merely a symbol; back of it there are two utterly dissimilar conceptions of the way human society can be conducted.

The American conception is that of a world in which men will get along very well together if they are just left alone and allowed to work out their own salvation according to their lights.

It begins with the assumption that the human race is made up of men of good will, reasonable men who will find and take the better course if they have a chance to look for it.

The European conception is the reverse. It must have walled boundaries to divide man from man. It does not admit that there are enough good things in the world to go around, but suggests that only a few fortunate groups can get them—from which it follows, logically, that the good things must be fought for.

It assumes that men must be led, whether they like it or not. Its only end is the rule of the mailed fist.

• • •

The one conception sees man as a creature of infinite possibilities, and his history as an endless progression from good to better. The other sees him as a blind brute who will relapse into savagery if he is not constantly cuffed into good behavior.

Or, if you wish to boil it all down—democracy flourishes in America while overseas it is in dire peril of extinction. And with all its faults, its inconsistencies, and its blunders, democracy is the way of hope for mankind. It calls for freedom—freedom between man and man, and between nation and nation—and it assumes that that man is worthy of it.

It is a noble assumption and a great hope. Americans and Canadians have no more sacred duty than to preserve it.

Their magnificent frontier, which runs free of suspicion and fear from sea to sea, marks a road to the fulfillment of the race's grandest dream.

SO THEY SAY

I have never heard a Canadian refer to an American as a "foreigner." He is just an "American." And, in the same way, in the United States Canadians are not "foreigners," they are "Canadians." That simple little distinction illustrated to me better than anything else the relationship between our two countries.—Franklin D. Roosevelt, on Canadian trip.

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON
ALL ITEMS SELF-EXPLANATORY.
(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

I have been impressed lately with the complacency of the aged. I refer to men and women past 60. They are the least concerned by the alarms of the world. It might be said they are nearing the home stretch and it does not matter.

But I do not think that's the answer. The truth is nothing is so terrifying as old age want. It strikes among them with the greatest cruelty. Youth is resilient, can take its trouncings and bound back with a hop, skip. Age loses much of its elasticity.

I'm inclined to believe the hopefulness of the aged is a refining of experience. Only the other day I talked to a fine old school gentleman of 74. He has taken several financial drubbings, the worst in 29 with the rest of us, and was left only a few thousands.

His future if he lives much longer is not bright, for he is past the age of useful work and has no relatives to support him. Yet he is no forecaster of American doom. He has seen too much devastation by panic, drouth, wars and what-nots and has found that somehow things turn out all right.

"There have been three times in my life," he said, "when I would not have given a scrub acre in the middle of the Mojave for America or her prospects. Each time my fears were foolish, just as so many are today. The dream is passing and soon we shall be back in the sunshine again."

But what started me on this valetudinarian vein was this little essay plucked from a letter from a lady of 81, living in New Orleans. Among other things she said: "It is a gloriously cheerful morning. I have been working a little in my garden and was impressed with the way the flowers lifted up their beautiful faces to the sun for warmth, health and life. I like to think of a God that spreads his gentle presence in just the same way for those who look up to Him.

"This may be a little old fashioned for the modern thought, but the idea has sustained hope and faith for many generations before us. Everybody about me is taut with anxiety. I have but a little while left, but I am confident my children and grandchildren will be taken care of by a Providence that has taken care of the generations now dust.

"All in the world we need just now is just a little mountain-moving faith. And faith is such a blessed and simple thing. I cannot understand why we ever lose it."

We have been hearing the whine of youth and middle age for some time. Perhaps we had better cup an ear a little to the cheerfulness of the aged.

Sudden thought: There is no excitement in sleeping any more, since they fix slats so they won't fall out of bed.

And I like Uncle Ezra's observation: "They say you can't fool a horsefly, but one lit on my radiator cap the other morning."

Mark Leuscher announces that the D'Oyley Carte Opera company is returning to give New York some more of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas. And in the first night audience as usual will be Miss Ada Littlejohn, who has not missed a premiere of the D'Oyley troupe in 30 years. She came over from England on the last visit and is coming again this fall. She is the most ardent Gilbert and Sullivan fan in the world. One of the most enthusiastic in America is Alexander Woollcott, who rarely ever misses a performance.

The swift change in the Childs places is one of the restaurant surprises. They used to be hurry-up quickies—flapjacks and bean soup havens. Today many social affairs of real Registerites are given in them. The haughtiest one is in the Savoy Plaza hotel building. People coming in from their country places have been giving many dinners there this summer.

Ed Sullivan tells of lounging on the beach at Atlantic City with a group of pallid Broadwayites, trying to soak up a little healthful sunshine. A fellow Broadwayite, passing in a push chair, called out: "If anyone tells you guys you look well, slug him!"

Garbo, Dietrich & Co., and their disciples of the Slow Cow School of acting, including several male cows, all bore me. What's a face for? Only to turn slowly and gaze? A face should dance and sparkle with animation. One sits impatiently for the slow cows, waiting for them to happen. I'll take Bette Davis.

Never mind about Woodrow Wilson and the Indian Dialect. O. K. was first popularized by an old comedy back in the '80's. It was full of initials and it started the old P.D.Q. Girls used say C.Y.K. also for "Consider yourself kissed." And in Grandma's day that was considered hot stuff. Compilers of dictionaries file away all neologisms and slang interpretations for ten years. If any survive they get in the new editions. Ninety per cent perish,—and deservedly. I hear that only about three slang phrases of the present era will survive.

Your Health

By Dr. Morris Fishbein

In the daily routine of any office we soon meet certain persons who are afflicted with the condition commonly called "nerves." They are easily excited, quite irritable, and disturbed about the temperature, a draft, the sunlight, or some other minor physical factor.

Everybody knows that weakness of sight or of hearing may seriously interfere with the ability of a person to make good in employment, but few people realize that emotional instability may be even a more serious factor in relation to working conditions.

Two people may be of equal intelligence, as was pointed out recently at a meeting of the Industrial Health Research board of Great Britain, yet one will be moody, resentful of criticism, frightened of his superiors, and self-distrustful, while the other will be optimistic, adaptable, anxious to advance, and full of initiative.

The difference in the temperament of these two people may mean the difference between their success and failure.

• • •

The motion pictures have repeatedly depicted the reactions of subordinates when they were called "on the carpet" or summoned for an interview in the head office.

One type prepares for the worst knocks on the door timidly, and walks in with knees shaking. Another may be moderately apprehensive at first, but when the interview actually begins, is quite capable of taking care of himself.

Executives of experience promptly recognize the emotional condition of the person concerned, and this recognition has much to do with the outcome of such interviews.

A survey of workers in an industrial plant in Great Britain revealed 17 girls out of 49 without any nervous symptoms. Of the girls studied, some were able to adjust themselves to noise, some had slight symptoms of nervousness in the presence of unusual noise, and some had severe symptons. A group of 156 men gave results exactly like those of the women.

When studies were made of absence from work, it was found that the nervous individuals were much more likely to lose time from their work for slight causes than those who were not nervous.

It is, of course, quite possible to adjust working conditions to the temperament of the employe concerned. For example, in a certain industry there were two typists of equal intelligence and of equal ability. The physical health of the two was about the same.

Nevertheless, one had an apparent fear of observation and simply could not work while other people looked on. When she worked in a room alone, her speed and quality of work was as good as, or better than, that of the other typist.

The first girl, who could work under any circumstances, however, was a more useful employe, because of her adaptability to the work of the institution concerned.

While "nerves" are largely an emotional attitude and to some extent a reflection of the constitution of the person concerned, there is plenty of evidence to indicate that good mental hygiene applied in such cases will bring about improvement in quieting and controlling the person and that it is well worth developing from an economic point of view, as well as from that of efficiency.

Behind The Scenes In Washington

WASHINGTON.—The chief aim of the national drouth committee, chairmaned by Rural Electrification Administrator Morris L. Cooke, will be to recommend a permanent land plan for the drouth area for the president's presentation to congress.

Committee members privately agree that the most important thing to be accomplished is a considerable reduction in dry land farming, especially in the Dakotas, Montana, Wyoming and other sections of the "dust bowl."

The committee is practically certain to propose a large program of land acquisition by the government which would reture millions of acres from dry farming and turn it into grazing land which would be opened to grazing associations.

The next most important recommendation probably will be for a program of water conservation, especially with respect to small streams and ponds.

Congress would have to appropriate the money. Need created by the drouth has already made it obvious that available relief, funds of WPA and the resettlement administration can't last beyond January, at the most optimistic estimate.

It seems likely that by November everybody will be admitting that one of the first jobs of the next congress will be to run through next June—as well as to decide whether it wants to embark on the recommended land program.

Seriousness of the drouth situation has become especially intensified lately with ruin of corn crops, especially in Nebraska.

Tugwell in Spotlight

The drouth has put Resettlement Administrator Rex Tugwell very much back on the map, after it had appeared that the RA was due for extinction and it had been said that Tugwell would be kept out of sight during the campaign.

The RA has become the backbone of the drouth relief effort. It is able to make grants and loans to relieve rural distress, whereas WPA can only provide work and has been unable to go so quickly into action.

Also, more than 40 per cent of resettlement's 9,500,000-acre submarginal land purchase program is placed in the drouth area, which means about $14,000,000 spent for land—most of it paid to families which want to relocate.

Furthermore, resettlement has done a heavy job of land use planning and research which should prove invaluable to any committee considering a permanent program. Relatively ignorant in the 1934 drouth, the government now knows all about the land in the drouth area, what it is good for, and whether various sections ought to be used for ranching, dry farming, or continuous crop farming.

The RA has worked closely with state planning boards, especially in the Dakotas, Montana and Wyoming, discovering the areas where there are too many persons for the land to support.

John Lewis Balks

Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady, striving to the last to avert a complete break between the A. F. of L. and its member unions in the committee for industrial organization, secretly approached Chairman John L. Lewis with an offer from certain members of the A. F. of L.'s executive council.

If the C. I. O. would disband, Lewis and the labor leaders allied with him could go ahead under A. F. of L. auspices and organize workers in the steel, automobile, rubber, cement and aluminum industries on an indstrial union basis.

"I am accepting no proposition with a pistol at my head," replied Lewis.

Futility Of Arguing

Perhaps one of the most futile things on earth is argument. It seldom does any good. It often causes hard feelings and ends in anger. That's about all it ever does accomplish.

Every person, with any brains at all, thinks he has used them, and arrived at his own unshakable opinions. Argument with some one else, stubbornly sure he is as right as you are, doesn't often change you an iota, so why should you expect it to change him? Why should either of you think that mounting anger, because each one can not convince the other, would do a particle of good?

It was Voltaire, in his controversy with Helvetius, who once wrote to his opponent: "I wholly disagree with what you have said, and I will defend to the death your right to say it." That is the broad-minded, sensible way to look at it. Everyone does have a right to his own opinion, and a right to express it. So, if you heartily disagree with him, why deny him that right? All you need do to avoid argument about it is to grant him that right, and not try to talk him out of it into your way of thinking. You also have the right to think and talk as you feel, but when you know and see he doesn't agree with you, you can always change the subject, or hold your tongue. Even if you succeed in gaining your point in an argument, keep in mind that the old couplet is eminently true, that "a man convinced against his will, is of the same opinion still."

Some people seem to think it would be showing the white feather to abandon argument; that it would be a betrayal of one's own convictions. But it isn't at all. Good breeding demands that much of us, at least, especially in social contacts. It taboos discussions about religion, politics and all other controversial subjects, just because they are likely to degenerate into fierce arguments that frequently hurt feelings. It simply isn't polite to brawl, and brawling is what it too often amounts to.

The pest and nuisance who loves argument for its own sake, we have with us always. He is invariably, violently partisan, though he seldom knows why, and loves to say something that will start an argument. Perhaps he looks on it largely as a sort of exercise for his own tongue and wits, and he usually is pretty bitter, saying things best left unsaid, once he has baited some one else into taking up the cudgels for the other side. But even he can be squelched by ignoring him and refusing to become involved with him.

He will not and can not argue by himself, and if cold-shouldered long enough will finally see he is wasting his time and desist. No matter how much one may have a right to his own opinion, who, after all, really cares what it is? It is valuable mostly to him, alone, and the best thing he can do with it is to keep it sacredly his. Airing doesn't make it any more securely his, and it's the one thing he can be entirely selfish about. He needn't share it with anyone unless he wants to.

COURTING AND MARRYING

The claimed discovery of the Scotch scientist, who announced recently that, contrary to popular belief, opposites do not attract each other in matters of courting and marrying, seems to put an entirely new face on the whole institution of matrimony.

According to this savant, we really are attracted in courting and marrying by those who are most like ourselves. If that is true, matrimony at once seems put on a higher plane than it has been assumed to occupy throughout the ages. Human-kind's opinion of itself being what it is, what greater compliment could the average person pay his mate than by marrying him or her, as the case may be? According to the Scotchman's theory, marriage really starts off on a basis of mutual admiration even more fundamental and compelling than almost any of us had thought was possible.

What we can not understand, however, if why, if the Scotchman is right, marriage was so much more stable an institution in those lavender-scented days when the swain was wont to begin the courtship by groaning to himself and others, "I'm not half good enough for her." Under the theory of like attracting likes, he really was setting up the proposition that "She's not half good enough for me," which would seem to have been a poor foundation for matrimonial alliance that, nevertheless, usually lasted at least until the golden wedding.

And, on the other hand, why all the divorce mills in this present age, when marriage seems to be so largely a matter of mutual condescension and implies, if likes attract likes, the practical ultimate in mutual flattery?

However, the scientist may have based his theory on observations confined to his native Scotland, where, we are led to suppose, no thorough-going Scotchman ever took a lass to wife unless assured she was as like him as possible in the value she would place upon a shilling.

There must be moments when Doc Townsend stops "martyring" long enough to wonder how much of the swag some of the birds he has lately started to chum with will want.

There is a divinity that shapes our ends, and the odds are 50 to 1 that you can't quote the rest of it correctly.

THE LOVE WE KNOW

I did not know that love could be so quiet.
I thought love made a loud, flamboyant show,
When I was young and selfish thoughts ran riot;
But now I know
That love can be true friendship, glorifying
The whole world with its sane and steady glow;
Serene as lamplight, warm as suns, undying—
The love we know!

Study In Contrasts

By BRUCE CATTON

One stretches for 3,000 miles between the United States and Canada. The other runs a shorter distance between France and Spain.

Along the American-Canadian frontier there is peace; peace so firmly established, so taken for granted, that there are no guns to enforce it, and no one ever stops to think that it is anything especial in the way of a blessing.

On the Franco-Spanish border there are guns, tension, and watchfulness. From below the Pyrenees come the crackle of firearms and the smoke of battle; on the mountains, anxious guards peer to the south, and to the north French statesmen try to make out the shape of things to come in the battle smoke.

It is quite within the bounds of possibility that the question of life or death for some millions of healthy young Europeans will hinge on what happens in Spain in the next few months.

* * *

There is a contrast between these two frontiers which goes far deeper than the mere fact that one border is fortified and the other is not. That fact is merely a symbol; back of it there are two utterly dissimilar conceptions of the way human society can be conducted.

The American conception is that of a world in which men will get along very well together if they are just left alone and allowed to work out their own salvation according to their lights.

It begins with the assumption that the human race is made up of men of good will, reasonable men who will find and take the better course if they have a chance to look for it.

The European conception is the reverse. It must have walled boundaries to divide man from man. It does not admit that there are enough good things in the world to go around, but suggests that only a few fortunate groups can get them—from which it follows, logically, that the good things must be fought for.

It assumes that men must be led, whether they like it or not. Its only end is the rule of the mailed fist.

* * *

The one conception sees man as a creature of infinite possibilities, and his history as an endless progression from good to better. The other sees him as a blind brute who will relapse into savagery if he is not constantly cuffed into good behavior.

Or, if you wish to boil it all down—democracy flourishes in America while overseas it is in dire peril of extinction. And with all its faults, its inconsistencies, and its blunders, democracy is the way of hope for mankind. It calls for freedom—freedom between man and man, and between nation and nation—and it assumes that that man is worthy of it.

It is a noble assumption and a great hope. Americans and Canadians have no more sacred duty than to preserve it.

SO THEY SAY

I have never heard a Canadian refer to an American as a "foreigner." He is just an "American." And, in the same way, in the United States Canadians are not "foreigners," they are "Canadians." That simple little distinction illustrated to me better than anything else the relationship between our two countries.—Franklin D. Roosevelt, on Canadian trip.

NEW YORK Day by Day by O. O. McIntyre

I have been impressed lately with the complacency of the aged. I refer to men and women past 60. They are the least concerned by the alarms of the world. It might be said they are nearing the home stretch and it does not matter.

But I do not think that's the answer. The truth is nothing is so terrifying as old age want. It strikes among them with the greatest cruelty. Youth is resilient, can take its trouncings and bound back with a hop, skip. Age loses much of its elasticity.

I'm inclined to believe the hopefulness of the aged is a refining of experience. Only the other day I talked to a fine old school gentleman of 74. He has taken several financial drubbings, the worst in 29 with the rest of us, and was left only a few thousands.

His future if he lives much longer is not bright, for he is past the age of useful work and has no relatives to support him. Yet he is no forecaster of American doom. He has seen too much devastation by panic, drouth, wars and what-nots and has found that somehow things turn out all right.

"There have been three times in my life," he said, "when I would not have given a scrub acre in the middle of the Mojave for America or her prospects. Each time my fears were foolish, just as so many are today. The dream is passing and soon we shall be back in the sunshine again."

But what started me on this valetudinarian vein was this little essay plucked from a letter from a lady of 81, living in New Orleans. Among other things she said: "It is a gloriously cheerful morning. I have been working a little in my garden and was impressed with the way the flowers lifted up their beautiful faces to the sun for warmth, health and life. I like to think of a God that spreads his gentle presence in just the same way for those who look up to Him.

"This may be a little old fashioned for the modern thought, but the idea has sustained hope and faith for many generations before us. Everybody about me is taut with anxiety. I have but a little while left, but I am confident my children and grandchildren will be taken care of by a Providence that has taken care of the generations now dust.

"All in the world we need just now is just a little mountain-moving faith. And faith is such a blessed and simple thing. I cannot understand why we ever lose it."

We have been hearing the whine of youth and middle age for some time. Perhaps we had better cup an ear a little to the cheerfulness of the aged!

Sudden thought: There is no excitement in sleeping any more, since they fix slats so they won't fall out of bed.

And I like Uncle Ezra's observation: "They say you can't fool a horsefly, but one lit on my radiator cap the other morning."

Mark Leuscher announces that the D'Oyley Carte Opera company is returning to give New York some more of the Gilbert and Sullivan operas. And in the first night audience as usual will be Miss Ada Littlejohn, who has not missed a premiere of the D'Oyley troupe in 30 years. She came over from England on the last visit and is coming again this fall. She is the most ardent Gilbert and Sullivan fan in the world. One of the most enthusiastic in America is Alexander Woollcott, who rarely ever misses a performance.

The swift change in the Childs places is one of the restaurant surprises. They used to be hurry-up quickies—flapjacks and bean soup havens. Today many social affairs of real Registerites are given in them. The haughtiest one is in the Savoy Plaza hotel building. People coming in from their country places have been giving many dinners there this summer.

Ed Sullivan tells of lounging on the beach at Atlantic City with a group of pallid Broadwayites, trying to soak up a little healthful sunshine. A fellow Broadwayite, passing in a push chair, called out: "If anyone tells you guys you look well, slug him!"

Garbo, Dietrich & Co., and their disciples of the Slow Cow School of acting, including several male cows, all bore me. What's a face for? Only to turn slowly and gaze? A face should dance and sparkle with animation. One sits impatiently for the slow cows, waiting for them to happen. I'll take Bette Davis.

Never mind about Woodrow Wilson and the Indian Dialect. O. K. was first popularized by an old comedy back in the '80's. It was full of initials and it started the old P.D.Q. Girls used say C.Y.K. also for "Consider yourself kissed." And in Grandma's day that was considered hot stuff. Compilers of dictionaries file away all neologisms and slang interpretations for ten years. If any survive they get in the new editions. Ninety per cent perish.—and deservedly. I hear that only about three slang phrases of the present era will survive.

Your Health

By Dr. Morris Fishbein

In the daily routine of any office we soon meet certain persons who are afflicted with the condition commonly called "nerves." They are easily excited, quite irritable, and disturbed about the temperature, a draft, the sunlight, or some other minor physical factor.

Everybody knows that weakness of sight or of hearing may seriously interfere with the ability of a person to make good in employment, but few people realize that emotional instability may be even a more serious factor in relation to working conditions.

Two people may be of equal intelligence, as was pointed out recently at a meeting of the Industrial Health Research board of Great Britain, yet one will be moody, resentful of criticism, frightened of his superiors, and self-distrustful, while the other will be optimistic, adaptable, anxious to advance, and full of initiative.

The difference in the temperament of these two people may mean the difference between their success and failure.

* * *

The motion pictures have repeatedly depicted the reactions of subordinates when they were called "on the carpet" or summoned for an interview in the head office.

One type prepares for the worst knocks on the door timidly, and walks in with knees shaking. Another may be moderately apprehensive at first, but when the interview actually begins, is quite capable of taking care of himself.

Executives of experience promptly recognize the emotional condition of the person concerned, and this recognition has much to do with the outcome of such interviews.

A survey of workers in an industrial plant in Great Britain revealed 17 girls out of 49 without any nervous symptoms. Of the girls studied, some were able to adjust themselves to noise, some had slight symptoms of nervousness in the presence of unusual noise, and some had severe symptons. A group of 156 men gave results exactly like those of the women.

When studies were made of absence from work, it was found that the nervous individuals were much more likely to lose time from their work for slight causes than those who were not nervous.

* * *

It is, of course, quite possible to adjust working conditions to the temperament of the employe concerned. For example, in a certain industry there were two typists of equal intelligence and of equal ability. The physical health of the two was about the same.

SINGLE VARIETY COTTON ADVISED

Southern Planters Warned Against Using Many Kinds Of Seed

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 8.—(Special)—Wide-spread adoption of the one-variety cotton program which is proving so successful in the Texas blackland area was forecast today by United States agriculture department officials as they warned cotton growers throughout the south to use caution in buying seed claimed to produce "bigger and better" cotton.

It is a frequent occurrence for the cotton producer to buy "novelty" seed stocks only to find in the fall that he has bought a "gold brick," C. B. Doyle, bureau of plant industry, United States department of agriculture, declared today.

Not that the farmer is advised against paying a premium for good seed, says Doyle, but that he should attempt to obtain some information as to the "pedigree" of the variety before he buys.

In Texas—where growers in the blackland area are undertaking the largest one-variety community, expected eventually to include some 5,000,000 acres—cost of production, which is influenced more by high lint yields than any other factor, and spinning quality have become the basis of varietal selection. Less attention is paid to claims of lint percentage, size of boll, size of leaf and other minor characteristics so often stressed by some seed salesmen.

Realizing that the greatest difficulties in maintaining pure seed stock come from field and gin mixing, farmers of Gonzales county, Tex., have started a program of obtaining pure seed and keeping it pure by all growing one variety.

"They did not organize to promote any particular kind of seed," Saunders reports, "but to supply themselves with the best pure seed at the lowest possible cost. It had already been demonstrated in the county that purity of good seed stock could be maintained indefinitely under isolated conditions, where ginning was confined to one variety."

The Gonzales county farmers perfected a simple organization in which each of the cotton communities organized and appointed a chairman. The community chairman formed a county board whose duties it was to select a variety of seed and distribute the seed to member communities at cost.

The county committee arranged for the community best situated to plant the first of 1,000 bushels of pure seed, Saunders said. The committee figured that this 1,000 bushels of seed would produce about 10,000 bushels the following year which would give each of the 23 communities 435 bushels. Another season would give each community sufficient quantities to plant the entire acreage.

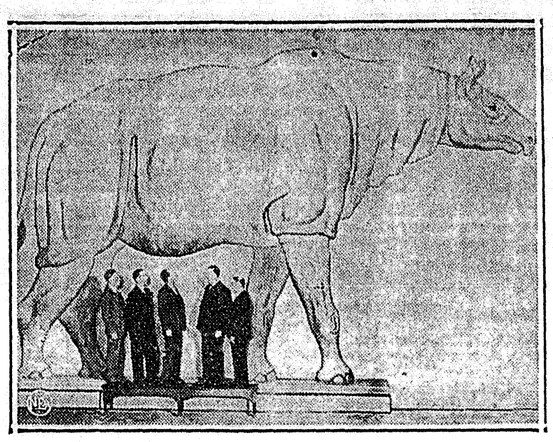

Each grower in the county would pay 10 cents a bushel over the oil mill price for planting seed which would furnish the county community with ample funds to maintain and distribute the pure seed to each grower in the county.

In fact, Gonzales county plan is so simple and workable that the Texas Blackland Cotton association, members of which represent growers producing fully one-third of the huge Texas crop, has adopted it for its five-million acre one-variety venture. This work has the support of a state coordinating committee composed of representatives of the state extension service, the state experiment station, the state department of vocational agriculture, and the bureau of plant industry of the United States department of agriculture.

Seed stock of Rogers' Acala already has been selected for the association and the same manner of progressive distribution will be carried out so that in three years it will be possible for all growers in the area, including Gonzales county, to produce this variety.

This will eliminate "hit or miss" methods of seed selection. As the proved sire has become the standard for improving the dairy herd, proved seed is becoming the standard by which cotton growers will be assured good cotton crops under favorable conditions.

A life-size restoration of the largest land mammal known to science—the Baluchitherium—has been added to the American Museum of Natural history in New York. A member of the hornless rhinoceros family it inhabited the Gobi desert region 25,000,000 years ago. So huge was it, the restoration dwarfs the five museum executives viewing it. The Baluchitherium was a creature that well might have dumbfounded even such a dinosaur-taming chap as Alley Oop, hero of The World's famed comic strip.

PRIZE RADIO WON BY LOCAL WOMAN

"This is the first time I ever won anything in my life," Mrs. G. A. Bennett, 710 North Second street, Monroe, exclaimed yesterday when it was explained to her that the beautiful new radio delivered to her home was hers—a prize she won for submitting one of the best letters entered in the Camay—RCA Victor contest.

The radio was delivered to the Bennett home by W. M. Culp of Culp Music shop, 124 South Grand street, RCA Victor dealer.

Mrs. Bennett's prize is a radio with a "magic eye, magic brain," and metal tubes. Mr. Culp explained to her and other members of the family how the RCA Victor features were developed in years of research in the laboratories of the Radio Corporation of America, and explained the vital importance of these features in modern radio reception.

A number of friends of the Bennett family called to see the radio and hear programs received by it. The flood of music brought forth expressions of commendation. The beauty of the cabinet of matched walnut veneers also was a subject of general approval.

SINGLE VARIETY COTTON ADVISED

Southern Planters Warned Against Using Many Kinds Of Seed

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 8.—(Special)—Wide-spread adoption of the one-variety cotton program which is proving so successful in the Texas blackland area was forecast today by United States agriculture department officials as they warned cotton growers throughout the south to use caution in buying seed claimed to produce "bigger and better" cotton.

It is a frequent occurrence for the cotton producer to buy "novelty" seed stocks only to find in the fall that he has bought a "gold brick," C. B. Doyle, bureau of plant industry, United States department of agriculture, declared today.

Not that the farmer is advised against paying a premium for good seed, says Doyle, but that he should attempt to obtain some information as to the "pedigree" of the variety before he buys.

In Texas—where growers in the blackland area are undertaking the largest one-variety community, expected eventually to include some 5,000,000 acres—cost of production, which is influenced more by high lint yields than any other factor, and spinning quality have become the basis of varietal selection. Less attention is paid to claims of lint percentage, size of boll, size of leaf and other minor characteristics so often stressed by some seed salesmen.

Realizing that the greatest difficulties in maintaining pure seed stock come from field and gin mixing, farmers of Gonzales county, Tex., have started a program of obtaining pure seed and keeping it pure by all growing one variety.

"They did not organize to promote any particular kind of seed," Saunders reports, "but to supply themselves with the best pure seed at the lowest possible cost. It had already been demonstrated in the county that purity of good seed stock could be maintained indefinitely under isolated conditions, where ginning was confined to one variety."

The Gonzales county farmers perfected a simple organization in which each of the cotton communities organized and appointed a chairman. The community chairman formed a county board whose duties it was to select a variety of seed and distribute the seed to member communities at cost.

The county committee arranged for the community best situated to plant the first of 1,000 bushels of pure seed, Saunders said. The committee figured that this 1,000 bushels of seed would produce about 10,000 bushels the following year which would give each of the 23 communities 435 bushels. Another season would give each community sufficient quantities to plant the entire acreage.

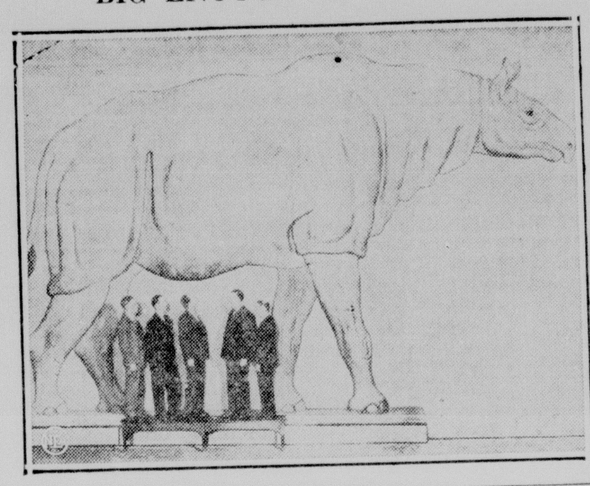

Each grower in the county would pay 10 cents a bushel over the oil mill price for planting seed which would furnish the county community with ample funds to maintain and distribute the pure seed to each grower in the county.

In fact, Gonzales county plan is so simple and workable that the Texas Blackland Cotton association, members of which represent growers producing fully one-third of the huge Texas crop, has adopted it for its five-million acre one-variety venture. This work has the support of a state coordinating committee composed of representatives of the state extension service, the state experiment station, the state department of vocational agriculture, and the bureau of plant industry of the United States department of agriculture.

Seed stock of Rogers' Acala already has been selected for the association and the same manner of progressive distribution will be carried out so that in three years it will be possible for all growers in the area, including Gonzales county, to produce this variety.

This will eliminate "hit or miss" methods of seed selection. As the proved sire has become the standard for improving the dairy herd, proved seed is becoming the standard by which cotton growers will be assured good cotton crops under favorable conditions.

BIG ENOUGH TO GIVE ALLEY OOP A SHOCK

A life-size restoration of the largest land mammal known to science—the Baluchitherium—has been added to the American Museum of Natural history in New York. A member of the hornless rhinoceros family it inhabited the Gobi desert region 25,000,000 years ago. So huge was it, the restoration dwarfs the five museum executives viewing it. The Baluchitherium was a creature that well might have dumbfounded even such a dinosaur-taming chap as Alley Oop, hero of The World's famed comic strip.

MEDICAL SOCIETY MEETING PLANNED

Preliminary Steps Taken For Program At Annual State Convention

Preliminary steps toward the entertaining of the 1937 meeting of the Louisiana State Medical society in Monroe were taken on Friday night when a special meeting of the Ouachita Parish Medical society, of which Dr. J. H. Pankey is president, was held at St. Francis sanitarium.

The following general advisory committee was named: Dr. F. C. Bennett, Dr. J. Q. Graves, Dr. A. G. McHenry, Dr. C. P. Gray and Dr. R. W. O'Donnell.

Dr. D. T. Milam was named general chairman. He will name sub-chairmen for all committees required and each of these in turn will name the physicians with whom they are to work.

Hotel Frances was selected as headquarters for the convention. The women's auxiliary has yet to meet and select its headquarters.

The convention promises to be the largest of the kind ever held, more than 500 delegates and their friends being expected to attend.

Not only will the medical meeting be in session here, there also will be three other groups that will meet simultaneously with the holding of the convention. These will be the Louisiana Pedriatric society, the Louisiana Coroners' society and the Louisiana Obstetrical society. The last is a new group recently formed.

It was stated here Saturday that by having commitees named and plans made at an unusually early date, it will be possible to have every detail given proper attention. The matter of the exhibits of latest appliances will be extensive and with plans made in advance, blueprints can be prepared and many spaces arranged for in advance of the convention. In this way a considerable part of the cost of the entertainment of the physicians can be met.

Sports will receive attention. Golf and skeet matchs will be scheduled, and numerous other entertainments are in prospect. Those in charge state that the convention will prove probably the biggest of its kind that has ever been held in north Louisiana.

TOWN TO CELEBRATE ARRIVAL OF POWER

The opening of the new electric line of the Louisiana Power and Light company from Chenlere into Chatham and Eros will be formally celebrated Tuesday at 8 p.m., in Chatham, according to announcement made by A. O. Evans, district manager of the company here.

REBELS AIM AT MADRID GOAL

Goal of rebels driving southward from the Guadarrama mountains, Madrid, capital of Spain, is shown on this map, on which principal points of interest, railway stations, and public institutions are indicated. Madrid's history dates back to the tenth century, when it was a Moorish outpost. It was captured by the Spaniards in 1083 and afterward grew rapidly. It was made the royal residence in 1560 by Philip II.

MEETINGS HELD

JENA, La., Aug. 8.—(Special)—Meetings were held over the parish this week to discuss the proposed purchase of a terracing machine to be used by the farmers of the parish by the LaSalle Parish Police jury. Farm Agent J. V. Hinton was the leading fighter for the deal, which he said would increase the farmer's acreage production and also help the land itself. Mr. Hinton held the meetings to get the reaction of the farmers themselves.

The second largest bell in the world is located at the University of Chicago.

PLYMOUTH STANDS UP BEST...IN VALUE, PERFORMANCE, LOOKS

PLYMOUTH BRINGS highest used car prices... is in biggest demand...according to dealers.

Of "All Three" Plymouth Commands Highest Prices for Year-old Models—is Most in Demand!

WHEN NEW, "All Three" low-priced cars cost about the same. But it's different after they've been driven a year or more... and are offered as used cars:

Plymouth models command top prices, are most in demand. Dealers everywhere confirm this... declare it costs less to recondition year-old Plymouths. The reason is, Plymouth is built and engineered to take it ... to give long, trouble-free performance.

Great engineering gives Plymouth an uncommonly quiet, simple, 6-cylinder "L-head" engine...with the tremendous power of highest compression (6.7 to 1) using ordinary gas...the economy of calibrated ignition... full-length water jackets and directional circulation. Plymouth owners report 18 to 24 miles per gallon...lowest oil and upkeep costs of any low-priced car.

Most important of all...safety! Plymouth is still the only one of "All Three" with both a Safety-Steel Body and double-action Hydraulic Brakes.

This is not a used car ad. But these facts about used cars prove: Plymouth stands up best. So be sure to compare "All Three" before you buy a new car. And be sure to drive the big, smart Plymouth. See your De Soto, Chrysler or Dodge dealer. PLYMOUTH DIVISION OF CHRYSLER CORPORATION.

MEDICAL SOCIETY MEETING PLANNED

Preliminary Steps Taken For Program At Annual State Convention

Preliminary steps toward the entertaining of the 1937 meeting of the Louisiana State Medical society in Monroe were taken on Friday night when a special meeting of the Ouachita Parish Medical society, of which Dr. J. H. Pankey is president, was held at St. Francis sanitarium.

The following general advisory committee was named: Dr. F. C. Bennett, Dr. J. Q. Graves, Dr. A. G. McHenry, Dr. C. P. Gray and Dr. R. W. O'Donnell.

Dr. D. T. Milam was named general chairman. He will name sub-chairmen for all committees required and each of these in turn will name the physicians with whom they are to work.

Hotel Frances was selected as headquarters for the convention. The women's auxiliary has yet to meet and select its headquarters.

The convention promises to be the largest of the kind ever held, more than 500 delegates and their friends being expected to attend.

Not only will the medical meeting be in session here, there also will be three other groups that will meet simultaneously with the holding of the convention. These will be the Louisiana Pedriatric society, the Louisiana Coroners' society and the Louisiana Obstetrical society. The last is a new group recently formed.

It was stated here Saturday that by having commitees named and plans made at an unusually early date, it will be possible to have every detail given proper attention. The matter of the exhibits of latest appliances will be extensive and with plans made in advance, blueprints can be prepared and many spaces arranged for in advance of the convention. In this way a considerable part of the cost of the entertainment of the physicians can be met.

Sports will receive attention. Golf and skeet matchs will be scheduled, and numerous other entertainments are in prospect. Those in charge state that the convention will prove probably the biggest of its kind that has ever been held in north Louisiana.

APPROVAL GIVEN OLD AGE PLANS

permanent a system of old age security, aid for dependent children, aid for needy blind and other forms of relief heretofore carried on by the emergency relief administration.

The plans filed with the social security board and approved by it, it was disclosed, were for the fourth quarter of the federal fiscal year ending June 30. It was explained that approval at Washington means that the state ERA has met every requirement of the social security board with respect to state-wide operation, efficiency and effectiveness of administration.

Approval of the plans means that the federal government will participate with the state in the cost of relief for the needy aged, the federal government bearing one-half the cost of relief, the state one-fourth and the parish one-fourth and that the government will pay one-third the cost of caring for dependent children, the parish and the state each contributing one-third. The government in addition will make available five per cent of its share for assisting the payment of administration costs.

Mr. Early pointed out today that the state relief funds from the luxury and other taxes will not be available until late in November or early in December and that in the interim the state's participation will have to come from a corporation franchise tax allocation, limited to $275,000, which will become available beginning next month.

Sour milk will remove iron rust from white goods.

ONE INNOCENT Englishman in the commons, asked whether Germany had consulted the British government before starting her war like undertakings, which is "funnier" than anything in London punch. The dictators Stalin, Mussolini, Hitler do not believe in "consulting" anybody. Consulting is a specialty of the United States government which consults England before building a new cruiser or even tilting up guns on its battle ships, to increase their range.

The innocent Englishman's question caused smiles in the house of commons, but it was a natural question; Englishmen realize, with difficulty, that since the arrival of the aeroplane, Britannia no longer "rules the waves;" those old fashioned waves of water are no longer important.

Whoever rules the air waves will rule the world hereafter if Uncle Sam doesn't make that discovery for himself, it will be unpleasantly forced upon him some day, when air visitors from Asia or Europe come to enlighten him.

WHEN YOU READ history, and the biographies of those that lived long ago, you are inclined to feel that men have degenerated. Where is the Crillon, the Du Guesclin of today, where is the equal of Michelangelo working with great power when past eighty years of age, of Titian, who died with his genius at his height when the plague killed him at ninety?

Men no longer possess in youth the fighting power, or in old age the mental power, that they once had.

It may comfort them to know that other animals have also dwindled. Scientists of southern Idaho have dug up ancient cats that died before the ice age. One is half way between the ferocious sabre-tooth tiger and the modern cat. The other is a "true cat."

The human race, at least, has seen no drop as far as that from the sabre-tooth tiger to the house cat.

CREWS WORK HASTILY TO CURB BURNING OIL WELL

SILSBEE, Tex., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Oil well crews hastily labored at building a new derrick today for a directional well which might check the wildly-burning Republic Brooks No. 1, which has spewed blazing crude for two days.

Operators planned to drill into the wild well's production sand in an effort to halt the menacing oil and gas flow.

The Republic also was building a water station on the Neches river at Bearman's Bluff near here. Four miles of pipe line were being laid to conduct water to the well. It was hoped water could be pumped into the inferno by Monday night.

The flame had widened out today and the crater circling the well was about 75 feet wide.

DEATHS

Formerly of Shreveport, Mr. Hanchey, before coming to Homer, was connected with the Louisiana board of health. He took an active interest in civic affairs of this city.

Funeral arrangements were to be made in Shreveport.

Mr. Hanchey is survived by his widow and a son, C. W. Hanchey, Jr., both of whom reside in Shreveport.

book case. I turned my back to get the hat and he started for the window.

"I yelled, 'Hey, Marion! Don't do that! Wait a minute!' and ran after him. He tore off his coat and dived out the window. I missed him by a few feet."

Zioncheck's body somersaulted to the pavement and landed almost at the feet of his bride, the former Rubye Louise Nix.

Mrs. Zioncheck ran to the spot where the crushed body lay and collapsed.

While friends and associates as well as political opponents expressed regret over the tragedy, city officials offered to arrange a public funeral but there was no immediate response from the grief-stricken bride, who remained in seclusion. The house of representatives' sergeant-at-arms said in Washington she had informed him funeral services will be held Tuesday.

News of the spectacular tragedy was kept from the congressman's ailing mother, Mrs. Frances Zioncheck, at whose insistence, Zioncheck recently said, he decided to run for reelection after once having announced he would not be a candidate.

Speaker William Bankhead appointed a congressional committee to attend the last rites for the 35-year-old representative.

In Washington J. Edgar Hoover, head of the justice department bureau of investigation, said federal officers would not inquire into the death.

County Coroner Otto H. Mittlestadt pronounced the death apparently a case of suicide. He said an inquest would be held Friday.

Nadeau said Zioncheck appeared in good spirits only an hour before the tragedy. He related, however, that Zioncheck recently had been despondent.

Nadeau said the congressman had written a letter to a psychiatrist, Dr. Edward D. Hoedemaker, at the family's request.

"Dr. Hoedemaker had told me there was nothing wrong about Zioncheck—as far as being insane and all that," said Nadeau. "But he told me Marion was terribly depressed and that I should watch him.

"After I read that note I sat down with him for ten minutes trying to buoy him up. Soon he was laughing and in good spirits."

Coroner Mittlestadt said the note read:

"My only hope in life was to improve the condition of an unfair economic system that held no promise to those that all the wealth or even a decent chance to survive let alone live—"

Zioncheck worked his way through high school and the University of Washington. He entered politics via the law. He was elected congressman in 1932 and reelected in 1934.

Until last New Year's day he was known in Washington as studious and quiet.

Last New Year's eve he created a minor sensation by taking possession of an apartment house telephone switchboard and ringing all the telephones in the place.

Twice he was arrested for speeding. His marriage in April was followed by a honeymoon trip to Puerto Rico, where he figured in several escapades. He finally was confined in a Washington institution for mental observation but was transferred to a similar institution in Maryland.

SLASH IN COTTON NOT UNEXPECTED

Arkansas and Louisiana reported the second and third highest indicated out-turn.

Trade sources were reticent about predicting whether 12,500,000 bales of cotton could be absorbed in world markets at the current 12-cent level.

OUACHITA CROP MAY BE REDUCED

Due to unfavorable weather conditions, cotton leaf worms and boll weevils, many farmers of Ouachita parish are less optimistic over prospects for a good cotton crop this year than they were three weeks ago, according to E. R. Strahan, agricultural agent for this parish.

Mr. Strahan has made a complete tour of inspection over Ouachita parish during the past week and has found that cotton crops have deteriorated considerably the last few days. One of the larger producers of the parish said he estimates his cotton production this season will be 20 per cent lower than he expected. Another told the agent his crop will produce 25 per cent less than he expected ten days ago.

Due to the dry weather, a good deal of cotton, especially on the west side of the Ouachita river, is opening prematurely, Mr. Strahan said.

The leaf worm situation seems to be well in hand at the present, but if another infestation breaks out within the next few days, serious damage may result because of a shortage of calcium arsenate, which is used to poison the worms. A good rain would help the situation and would permit the planting of fall feed and food crops, but without rain the cotton crop is expected to continue to deteriorate, Mr. Strahan said.

permanent a system of old age security, aid for dependent children, aid for needy blind and other forms of relief heretofore carried on by the emergency relief administration.

The plans filed with the social security board and approved by it, it was disclosed, were for the fourth quarter of the federal fiscal year ending June 30. It was explained that approval at Washington means that the state ERA has met every requirement of the social security board with respect to state-wide operation, efficiency and effectiveness of administration.

Approval of the plans means that the federal government will participate with the state in the cost of relief for the needy aged, the federal government bearing one-half the cost of relief, the state one-fourth and the parish one-fourth and that the government will pay one-third the cost of caring for dependent children, the parish and the state each contributing one-third. The government in addition will make available five per cent of its share for assisting the payment of administration costs.

Mr. Early pointed out today that the state relief funds from the luxury and other taxes will not be available until late in November or early in December and that in the interim the state's participation will have to come from a corporation franchise tax allocation, limited to $275,000, which will become available beginning next month.

CURTIS LIKES GIANTS

Don Curtis, veteran St. Louis Cardinal scout who dug up Dizzy Dean and then added to his achievements by signing Brother Paul, was a visitor the other day. Naturally the conversation turned to the National league pennant race, and Mr. Curtis had some rather unexpected observations to make concerning the current battle.

"No, I don't think the Cards can pull through," he said. "The Cubs appear to have too much pitching and the Giants are making a great comeback."

That remark was made just when the Cards were merrily engaged in pinning the Cubs' ears back to regain first place. The feat didn't seem to impress the veteran hunter of baseball ivory.

He particularly likes the Giants.

"This young fellow Gabler is a great pitcher," he said. "Fitzsimmons is rounding into form again and will prove valuable to Terry in the last month and a half of the campaign. Schumacher will be back in a few days and young Al Smith has been looking good all year. If Jackson's legs hold up, look out for those Giants."

DON CURTIS

Incidentally, it wasn't that 21-game winning streak that won for the Cubs last year, opines Curtis. The Cards lost Terry Moore in the last month of the race and that kept the Red Birds from coming through. With Moore in there, the Cards could have protected their lead, despite the Cubs' big drive.

Curtis will help direct the Houston club's baseball camp, which opens at Shreveport tomorrow. Houston, a Cardinal farm, has invited youngsters from the entire southwest to join the camp and take a week's workout under the eyes of several well known baseball men.

"There are two things a boy must have before I'll give him a tumble," says Curtis. "Speed and a strong arm."

Baseball fans are familiar with the records of many stars that Curtis signed. But perhaps they don't know that he's missed several of 'em by a mere matter of a day or two. For instance, Eddie Goosetree beat him to Schoolboy Rowe by five days.

"And wouldn't we breeze through with the Schoolboy in there for us this year!" he sighed.

HIGH FLYING

The Boston Red Sox have been more or less up in the air for the past couple of months but they were literally in the clouds severals days ago. Tom Yawkey, millionaire owner of the Sox, made news by transporting his squad from St. Louis to Chicago by airplane. The players decided they'd rather spend the night in a Chicago hotel instead of on the Pullmans.

Baseball men generally frown on the practice of hauling their costly material through the ozone. However, it's been done before. Last spring Larry McPhail, general manager of the Cincinnati Reds, decreed that the Rhinelanders should be carted from Havana to Florida in a couple of crates.

Mr. McPhail should have been just a bit hesitant about that. He tried it several years ago and it cost him his job.

Ever ready to spring the spectacular, McPhail, then president of the Columbus club of the American association, decided to fly his players from Milwaukee to Kansas City. Columbus is a Cardinal farm, and the fact that a million dollars, more or less, of baseball talent was exposed to disaster in one swoop caused cold chills to play up and down Branch Rickey's spine.

McPhail had pulled other tricks that didn't set so well with the parent organization. But this was the last straw. Larry was called into the home office and promptly paid off.

TORRANCE ON THE PAN

Track fans and sports writers here and there are panning Jack Torrance for his miserable showing in the Olympic shot put finals. Yet Baby Jack, the pride of Oak Grove, doesn't entirely deserve the criticism.

A short while ago Torrance underwent a minor operation for the removal of a tumor from his back. Just before the semi-final trials at Princeton he pulled a muscle. It happened again at Ransdalls Island, yet he managed to make the team. He has been unable to shake the injury jinx this year, and it crossed the Atlantic riding on his back.

Jack won loads of glory and plenty of publicity for Louisiana and the university during his great career as a thinclad track and football star. It seems just a bit unappreciative for his home state fans to put the curse on him just because he failed to live up to expectations in the Olympics.

St. Louis Maintains Lead As Cubs And Giants Also Triumph

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 8.—(AP)—Ten hits, two of them Babe Herman's home runs, didn't bother old Jess Haines as he punched across three tallies himself in a 17-hit Cardinal splurge that beat Cincinnati 11-4.

Jess Haines

Victory left the National league status quo unchanged, however, as the Cubs beat Pittsburgh to remain two games behind the leading Cards, and New York beat the Phillies to keep third place three more games back.

Paul Derringer and Lee Stine were victims of the Cardinal onslaught as the Gas House Gang spiced proceedings with eight extra base blows. Only Joe Medwick failed to connect.

Haines delivered the telling punch in the sixth after Derringer passed Garibaldi to fill the bases. Old "Pop" sent one sizzling into centerfield and two runs came in.

Cardinal Freshmen Garibaldi at third and Mize at first garnered two doubles and a single each, and Freshman Ogrodowski went in to catch in time to get two hits in two times up.

Herman put the Reds ahead with the first of his circuit blows in the second. Garibaldi doubled in two runs in the St. Louis half.

CUBS SHADE PIRATES

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—(AP)—It took Billy Herman's third double and fourth hit today to give the Chicago Cubs a surprise 3 to 2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates, but for more than two hours it looked as if he were doubling in vain.

Trailing by a run as they came to bat in the ninth, the Bruins staged a two-run rally to pull the game out of the fire and give Larry French his 12th conquest of the season. English walked to open the last of the ninth, Stainback running for him. Allen sacrificed and Hack singled to score Stainback with the tying run. Herman's third double then sent Hack home with the winning marker. Her-

ADLER'S TEAM TO VICKSBURG TODAY

Local Softball Club Meets Wreckers In Second Game Of Series

The Adler's Garage team, City league leaders, will go to Vicksburg today for a return game with the strong Vicksburg Wreckers, one of Mississippi's outstanding softball teams.

The two teams played here last Sunday and the Garagemen won, 2 to 1, in probably the best softball game ever played here. The Wreckers were undefeated before they ran up against the Monroe club.

Word from Vicksburg indicates that a crowd of three thousand will turn out for today's game. Softball fans there, used to seeing their favorites romp over all opposition, are anxious to get a glimpse of the team that stopped the Wreckers.

The Vicksburg club is anxious to even the score and the odds probably will be against the Adler team, in view of the fact that they'll be playing on a strange diamond and before a crowd that will be pulling for the Wreckers. Shortle, the stellar Vicksburg hurler, will take the mound for the Wreckers again today.

If the Vicksburg club wins today, an effort will be made to bring the Wreckers back here for a third and deciding battle, Manager E. E. Meredith of the Adler club said last night.

Several carloads of fans will accompany the local team, it was said. Adler players are asked to meet at the News-Star-World building at 11 o'clock this morning.

HADLEY SCORES TENTH STRAIGHT VICTORY, 4 TO 0

New York Gains In Pennant Race As Indians Lose To White Sox

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—(AP)—Bump Hadley pitched his tenth straight victory and his first shutout of the year today, blanking the Philadelphia Athletics 4 to 0 with nine hits as the Yankees opened their home stand successfully.

Bump Hadley

Although the Yanks were outhit 9 to 7, Hadley was tighter in the pinches than his opponents, and was aided by homers in the second inning by Bill Dickey and Tony Lazzeri. The four-baggers were Dickey's 19th and Lazzeri's 12th.

Buck Ross, who started for the Athletics, yielded only seven hits in the seven innings he worked, but all of the league leaders' runs were made off him.

Lew Finney and Lamar Newsom made six of the nine A's hits. Only one Philadelphia batter got as far as third base. He was Chubby Dean, who tripled in the first inning.

The homers by Dickey and Lazzeri started the Yankees scoring in the second. In the third, Hadley singled, advanced on a walk and Roy Johnson's grounder to second, and scored on Joe DiMaggio's long fly for the third New York run. Frank Croset's three bagger and Johnson's single brought in the last Yankee run in the fifth.

Boston got two on in the eighth with no outs but was unable to score.

N. E. Center Council Plans Ticket Campaign

Two Committees To Start Football Canvass Of City Next Tuesday

An intensive ticket sales campaign, designed to raise sufficient funds to complete the budget for athletics at Northeast Center of Louisiana university, will start Tuesday. The campaign will be made by members of the recently appointed Athletic Council of Northeast Center.

Two committees of three council members each will make the canvass. One committee will be composed of A. K. Kilpatrick, chairman of the council, Ben Downing apd John Sherrouse, while the other includes Dr. W. L. Bendel, Joe Isaacman and D. Y. Smith.

Season tickets, good for five games, will be sold. The campaign will continue until the necessary amount is raised, Mr. Kilpatrick said.

"Ordinarily it is customary to call on merchants and others for donations," Mr. Kilpatrick said. "However, we want it distinctly understood that we will ask no one for a donation, that we will give value received for every dollar we raise.

"There will be five home games, and each one will be well worth seeing. For instance, there's the Centenary game. Certainly every football fan in this section will want to attend that one. Then there's the game with Southeastern Louisiana college, the only team that crossed Northeast Center's goal last season. Coach 'Red' Swanson of Southeastern has told me that he will have another fine team at Hammond, so we may expect another thrilling football contest. The other games will be equally as interesting. The price of the season tickets is most reasonable, and purchasers will be getting a real bargain."

Mr. Kilpatrick also said that Coach Jim Malone expects to have a football team as good as his undefeated eleven of 1935. The players will report for practice late this month.

The athletic council was appointed last week by President James M. Smith of Louisiana State university. It will have complete charge of athletics at Northeast Center.

VOLS AT STERLINGTON

STERLINGTON, La., Aug. 8.—(Special)—The Sterlington Engineers will entertain the Ruston Volunteers in a double header here Sunday, and local fans hope to see the Engineers better their position in the league by sweeping both games of the twin bill.

The Sterlington club is still within striking distance of first place, despite their recent losses to Brown and Swartz, and a double victory Sunday will help considerably in making up lost ground. With the club going along at full strength now, Sterlington fans believe the team will be able to cope with the stronger entries again. However, a loss to Ruston in one of the games Sunday will set them back.

The Engineers probably will use Brooks and Kyle on the mound in the two encounters, while Ruston is expected to call on Davis and Hinton in the two games.

NASHVILLE WINS LEGION JUNIOR BASEBALL FINAL

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Jesse Cross hurled three-hit ball today, holding Memphis scoreless, as Nashville pounded out eight runs to capture the American Legion junior baseball championship of Tennessee.

Nashville and Jackson, Miss., will meet here for the regional championship, the three-bame series starting August 13.

MORE QUALIFIERS IN MUNY TOURNEY

Shafto's 74 Still Low; Local Golfers Go To Crossett Today

With the first week of the qualifying round ended, Wesley Shafto still leads the race for medalist honors in the Municipal Golf club's handicap tourney with a 74.

Sixteen additional players qualified during the past two days, Winnie Cole, Muny pro, announced yesterday, with H. K. Touchstone posting a 75 to take second place. Touchstone, shooting spectacular golf, had an excellent chance to better Shafto's 74 but missed a couple of short putts and had to be content with the 75.

Two others came close with 76's, Tip Schier and Milo Mattinson posted scores two strokes higher than the leader's.

Approximately 25 members of the Municipal club will go to Crossett today for an inter-city match with members of the Prairie Golf club, composed of Crossett and Hamburg golfers. The local contingent will leave here about 11 o'clock. The first foursome will tee off at 1 o'clock this afternoon. It will be the first match of the season with the Arkansas club.

The qualifying round in the Muny club's handicap tourney will close next Friday and those who haven't posted their scores are urged to do so early this week. First round play will start Saturday.

Sharkey, In Earnest, Confident He Can Upset Joe Louis

By John J. Romano

Jack Sharkey is famous for his sneers. When Boston Jack pins one of his critics with his pale gray, depthless eyes and accompanies this with one of his pet twisting, curling upper lip grimaces, you get what Sharkey likes to call his contempt for a fellow gone wrong.

When Sharkey was Number One contender for the title vacated by Gene Tunney the Bostonian got his biggest kick threatening the fans with his gloved fist held high, and when after getting a decision and gave the boys a lesson in sneering, it tickled his fancy. Boston's gift to the prize ring often said, "The fans come to see me licked. That's fine. But you know I like to fool them because they are putting money in my pocket, and if I get licked they won't come again."

Now Jack Sharkey is back in the picture, blustering just as much as ever. The fans and critics alike laughed off the ludicrous performance of Unknown Winston when the latter tried to go out as gracefully as possible. They laughed louder still when Tony Shucco held him to a draw. Sharkey's form, his flabby body and futile swings came in for much adverse comment. In a return fight with Shucco the former champion showed enough boxing ability to get the award.

Then came young Phil Brubaker and those fans who recalled what Sharkey did to their old idol, Jimmy Maloney, jumped excitedly to their feet and implored Brubaker to down Sharkey again and keep him down. But the wily Jack knew a bit too much about the fine art of stalling until his head cleared, and went on to outbox the coast phenom.

Sharkey's next appearance in the ring, one which may prove to be his last, is scheduled for the eighteenth of this month at the Yankee stadium against Joe Louis. It is easier to write a statement of this kind than getting it from Sharkey.

"All right, wise guy," Jack will say. "Didn't I knock out Schmeling and lose the fight because the referee became too excited and let the Dutchman get away with a foul complaint? Didn't I lick the Dutchman the next time we met. If you don't think Schmeling was afraid of me, why did he run out of town to Cleveland to fight Young Stribling? Now, you saw Schmeling outbox and stop Louis. What does that make me? I can box better than the Dutchman, and what he did to Louis will be duck soup for me."

Make no mistake about Sharkey's confidence in his ability to do just what he says. The Lithuanian is well off in everything a man has to live for. He has a fine family, a beautiful home and plenty of money in the bank. He adds weekly to this with the profits of the largest bar in Boston. For these reasons you must credit him, with confidence in his ability to make a successful comeback and not fighting for the loser's end of the purse alone.

Picked Softer Foe

Tackling Sharkey in his first assignment after the terrific lacing he took at Schmeling's hands speaks well for the courage of Joe Louis. No string of set-ups while he is beating his way back to the top. Sharkey, with all his faults, the poor showings against Primo Carnera, King Levinsky and Tommy Loughran in the twilight of his career, is dangerous nevertheless. Joe could have selected a poorer boxer and a slower thinker than the Bostonian. Galled no doubt by the criticism of those who damned him as an amateur when stacked up against an experienced boxer, he is tackling one just as keep, if not smarter, than Schmeling.

Sharkey has been training more than a year for just such a test as he will face the eighteenth. He is under 200 pounds, and that means he is in shape to travel ten rounds at a fast pace. Louis will take to work lickety-split from the opening ball to tag the ex-sailor, or he may find himself more befuddled than he was against the slower, more deliberate Schmeling.

Louis, on his showing against Jack Sharkey, will answer the often asked question, "Did the Schmeling fight take all the starch out of him?"

NATIONAL GUARDS TO ENCAMP TODAY

Two Local Units Leave For Camp Beauregard This Afternoon

Company G, commanded by Capt. Louis F. Rolleigh, and the Medical detachment, in the charge of Capt. D. T. Milam, both Monroe units of the 156th infantry, Louisiana national guard, will leave here this afternoon about 4 p.m., on national guard transport trucks for Camp Beauregard, near Alexandria, where the units will attend the annual two-weeks' encampment of their regiment.

Individual army trunks of the guardsmen and other equipment of their units will be transported to Camp Beauregard this morning.

The Service company, another Monroe national guard unit, commanded by Capt. J. B. Thornhill, left here Friday for Camp Beauregard to take charge of war department camp property to be issued the 156th infantry, and to make various arrangements for the arrival of units of the regiment.

First Lieut. Prentice Gray of the Medical detachment also left here Friday for the camp. His services were to be available for any medical need arising prior to the opening of the 156th infantry's period at the camp.

Capt. W. L. Bendel, the commanding officer of the Medical detachment, will attend the second week of the encampment. Maj. George Wright, a regimental medical officer, will attend the first week of the encampmnt.

Captain Rolleigh announced yesterday that Lieut. A. F. McCaleb had received from the war department a commission promoting him from second lieutenant to first lieutenant of Company G.

The total enlisted personnel of the three local national guard units is 137 men.

MOTORISTS INVOKE SAINT AGAINST AUTO ACCIDENTS

ROSELAND, Ind. Aug 8.—(AP)—Each Sunday afternoon a line of automobiles waits for blessings of St. Christopher, patron saint of motorists, at Christ the King church where the Rev. Wendel P. Corcoran, C. S. C., pastor of the church, administers the blessings.

"St. Christopher," the Father Corcoran explains, "is recognized as the patron of automobile riders and as protector of all in storms, accidents and pestilence."

Horrified by the toll of auto accidents, Father Corcoran says, he decided to build a shrine dedicated to St. Christopher where motorists could come for special blessings.

COURT RULES HITLER IS DE FACTO HEAD OF REICH

WARSAW, Aug. 8.—(AP)—An editor of a Warsaw daily has been fined for printing observations on Adolf Hitler which the courts regarded as "offensive to the chief of another state."

The editor put forward a plea that Hitler is not "a chief of state in the international meaning of the word." The court, however, found that no matter what Hitler's position may be, from the standpoint of international law, the Polish republic has acknowledged him, through exchange of notes, as chief of the German reich.

THRIVING

Born in Ohio's rare "hypnosis birth," the 10-pound baby girl shown above greeted the amazed eyes of its mother, Mrs. Leonard Loomis, 21, of Columbus, six and a half hours after Dr. A. H. Kanter, as shown below, put the woman into a deep hypnotic sleep. During the delivery, which Dr. Kanter maintained was painless, no anesthetic was used, witnesses testified. The baby is doing splendidly.

WEATHER PROPHET SAYS HIS HAT FORETELLS RAIN

SHERMAN, Tex., Aug. 8.—(AP)—T. A. Holcomb, merchant at Kentuckytown near here, claims he's a good weather prophet even if he does talk through his hat.

It's because of the hat, he says, that he is able to predict correctly.

Holcomb dropped the chapeau into a vat of hot liquid as he was making syrup. The hat remained stiff after it was cleaned but before rainfall always becomes soft and droops down over Holcomb's eyes.

COPS GET SLOT MACHINES, BUT 'EVIDENCE' VANISHES

MIDLOTHIAN, Tex., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Officers here believe nothing is safe from thieves.

Two confiscated slot machines, representing evidence against operators of establishments from which they were taken, were stolen from the courthouse where they had been stored.

The most crooked river in America lies in Kentucky. It is the Nolin, and it travels 20 miles in advancing only six.

BLUE-EYED GIRLS FAVORITE BABIES

Would-Be Foster Parents Described As Choosey About Infants

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 8.—(AP)—The baby placement market here is bearish, but that doesn't keep would-be foster parents from being choosey.

For instance, they're demanding babies whose coloring matches their own, says Mrs. Virginia Lee Bennett, acting executive secretary of the Child Welfare association, which supervises all legal adoptions in Atlanta.

"Type selection," she says, "is carried to such a fine point nowadays that adopted babies often develop striking family resemblances."

Mrs. Bennett also cites the fact that babies often adopt parents—by a coo or grip of the prospect.

Blue-eyed, curly haired little girls are most in demand, she reports, but boy babies are not without takers.

CLOSED SEASON ON FROGS SADDENS MANY CHINESE

CANTON, Aug. 8.—(AP)—An edict prohibiting the slaughter of frogs—prized table delicacy of southern Chinese—is the Canton government's newest move to help depression-hit farmers.

Frogs, says the government decree, feed on insects and other farm pests and should therefore be protected so that the rice crop may have a chance to reach bumper proportions.

What's more, frogs have had an important place in Chinese medicine. Thousands of southern Chinese believe dried frogs and rice an infallible cure for many ailments.

ROBINS AND BLUEBIRDS FEED ON INSECT PESTS

RALEIGH, N. C., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Experiments conducted by the federal bureau of biological survey indicate the robin and bluebird are the farmer's friends—not enemies.

Survey workers examined the contents of stomachs of robins. They found 42 per cent of the robin's food is animal matter; 16 per cent beetles; 5 per cent grasshoppers; 9 per cent caterpillars and 11 per cent various insects.

Contents of 244 stomaches of bluebirds consisted of 58.51 per cent animal matter and 41.49 per cent vegetable matter. S. Z. Pollock, junior biologist, says this proves the bird is of economic as well as aesthetic value.

NAZI-ETTE

Her devotion to the Nazi cause and indefatigable energy have won for Frau Gertrud Scholz-Klink (above), the designation as Chancellor Hitler's ideal of the "perfect woman." She is the undisputed leader of 10,000,000 German women who have been drawn into party politics.

FARMERS TRY 'CHISELING' TO PREVENT SOIL BLOWING

The "chisel," a pointed new tool about 16 inches long and three inches wide, is curved like a plow beam and penetrates the soil from 12 to 16 inches. The curve enables it to bring up the new soil and deposit it on top of the fine silt.

HYPNOTISM ENDS FEAR OF DENTAL PATIENTS

LONDON, Aug. 8.—(AP)—Students of the Royal dental hospital here have had their teeth cracked, chipped, filled and extracted, all without anaesthetics—and all without pain.

It's done by hypnotic suggestion. "There is nothing mysterious about it," claims Mr. William Lovatt, who is lecturing on "hypnotic dentistry" in several large London hospitals, "it is a perfectly natural process, and in no way harmful.

"A suggestible patient—and 70 per cent are—has only to accept suggestions for anaesthesia and he can submit to the forceps or drill confident that he will feel nothing, either at the time or afterwards."

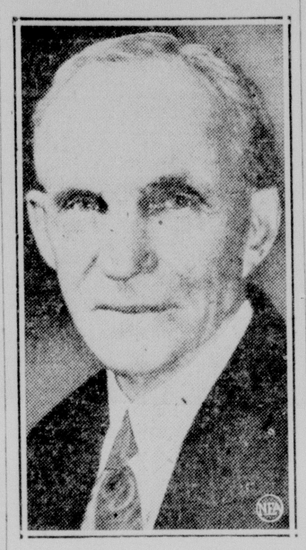

Experience with 3,000 cases, he says, has convined Mr. Lovatt that the possibilities for hypnotism in modern medicine are enormous.

MOTHER OF 14 CHILDREN WALKS 18 MILES A DAY

DAWSON SPRINGS, Ky., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Mrs. Nora Hicks, 43, mother of 14 children, walks 18 miles a day to and from her work here.

Walking an average of 288 miles a months, she rises each working day at 3:30 a.m. in order to be on the job by 8 o'clock.

VETERAN GOLD HUNTER BACK AT OLD DIGGINGS

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, Aug. 8.—(AP)—W. J. Mertaugh, discoverer of the famous Cheechako hill, one of the richest mining areas of the Klondike, has taken up a homestead near here. Now 72, Mertaugh said he wanted "a home to go to when I'm tired."

After making a fortune from his great strike of 1897, Mertaugh went prospecting in South America and Africa, but in 1917 was back in Alaska working for a railroad. He is still hunting gold and believes he has good prospects near the town of Kasilof.

Has Discarded His Crutches Since He Began The Gly-Cas

Rheumatic Pains Driven From His Limbs, Kidneys Functioning Properly Now, Has New Strength And Energy; "Gly-Cas Unequalled."

Monroe residents by the hundreds will tell you that Gly-Cas is the greatest system purifier they have ever found and there is NO SUBSTITUTE for this new remedy. Many thousands of boxes of this new medical discovery have been sold right here in Monroe in the past few months with an ever increasing demand every day—WHY—because it has an action which reaches the most agonizing cases of rheumatism, neuritis, stomach, liver, kidney, bowel and blood troubles and gives results previously thought impossible.

"There can be no doubt as to the merit of this new Gly-Cas today—it has proven itself," said Mr. R. O. Cannon, Motor Route A South, R. F. D., Monroe (Fondale, La.) well known planter of this vicinity, "For years I had been habitually constipated, had low blood pressure and was too sick to work. My kidneys were crowded with poison and it was not uncommon for me to get up every hour during the night. My rest was broken, I became terribly nervous and was worn-out continually. About three months ago something struck me like a charge of lightning. I was unable to walk, lost the use of my right limb entirely and it was some time before I could walk even with the aid of crutches. Medical authorities pronounced it rheumatism and I spent all kinds of money, did everything I could to get relief but without any good results. My neighbors knowing of Gly-Cas and of my dreadful condition continued to tell me I should try it and finally persuaded me that I should as I was desperate to get help of some kind."

"It is almost unbelievable—BUT TRUE—for those who know me will vouch for it—I have discarded my crutches since I began Gly-Cas' use," continued Mr. Cannon, "My elimination was corrected, the poisons removed from my system, kidneys regulated and that horrible rheumatism has yielded to the action of this new Gly-Cas. I get around easily now, have new strength and energy, sleep good and feel fine. Gly-Cas is one medicine that every sufferer can depend upon to do as claimed—for it has the ability to do it."

Dearest Daughter:

Thanks so much for sending that delightful little note, remembering my birthday. And please don't feel that its being so short made it any the less welcome.

Besides, I know what it is to have "shopper's headache"---to feel all worn out and dragged down, with your feet as heavy as lead from walking around all day.

But, my dear, why do you do it? I know you and Bob have something of a struggle to make ends meet. It won't always be that way, because I know Bob is a very ambitious young man---ambitious for you as well as for himself.

Take an old lady's advice, dear. Look for bargains---no matter how wealthy you become. But don't make an expedition of it. Make it a tour. You get The World or News-Star. Look for real bargains there, before you set out. Then you'll know where you're going, and you won't wear yourself out so. I know, because I do it.

Give my best regards to Bob, and give Bob, Jr., a great big kiss from his "gran'-ma".

Mother

MORRIS SETS NEW MARK IN WINNING 10-EVENT FEATURE

Clark Is Second And Parker Third To Complete American Triumph

By Alan Gould
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

BERLIN, Aug. 8.—(AP)—Three far western youths swept the boards for America in the Olympic decathlon competition today, led by Colorado's magnificent Glenn Morris, who smashed his own world record, scaling Olympic heights as a climax to his first year in all-round competition.

Glenn Morris

The Fort Collins automobile salesman, who got the idea admiring jarring Jim Bausch capture another record - cracking Olympic tussle at Los Angeles in 1932, outstripped two Californians, Bob Clark and Jack Parker, while running up the amazing aggregate of 7,900 points.

The 24-year-old former Colorado State college football and track star's performance was capped by a sensational stretch sprint concluding the 1,500 meter run which carried him to the tape in 4:33.2 and gave him sufficient points to beat his own world mark by exactly 20 points.

Morris' exploits in the strenuous two-day, ten-event test enabled him to wipe out the Olympic record his former idol, Bausch, set by 502 points under the new scoring system. Bausch operated under the old system, but his figures translated total 7,398 points.

Earlier in the day, Volmari Iso-Hollo of Finland set the stage for record-smashing performances. The swift and durable Finn became the first champion to repeat as he paced the field in the 3,000 meter steeplechase final to a 9:03.8 victory. He and the next four finishers all lowered his former Olympic record of 9:14.6.

Kaarlo Tuominen ,another Finn, trailed his countryman by three seconds as Alfred Dompert of Germany, producing a great stretch drive, took third, followed by Martti Matilainen of Finland and Harold Manning of Wichita, Kas., all of whom were under Iso-Hollo's 1932 mark. Tuominen's time was 9:06.8; Dompert, 9:07.2; Matilainen, 9:09, and the Kansan, 9:11.2.

The semi-final day of the blue ribbon competition also saw Jesse Owens return to competition and lead off the 400-meter relay team to a world record-equalling 40 second preliminary triumph, and the American women's 400 and men's 1,600 meter relayers survive the trials and qualify for tomorrow's final.

Dusk settled down not only on the weary decathloners but also on another rip-roaring Olympic day in which assorted developments included Finland's domination of the obstacle race and the latest "Jarrett case" development whereby Avery Brundage, president of the American Olympic committee and also the A. A. U., ruled out the former backstroke queen, Eleanor Holm Jarrett, as an amateur, at least while she's abroad.

Also there were repercussions over the omission of two Jewish boys, Marty Glickman and Sam Stoller, from America's 400 meter sprint relay team.

Controversial echoes rocked the press box all day while experts struggled with an endless stream of decathlon tabulations.

Mrs. Jarrett challenged Brundage's authority to order her disbarred without a hearing, while Glickman charged the track coaches with "politics" in shunting him and Stoller to the sidelines without a chance to appear in the games.

Head Coach Lawson Robertson voluntarily took the rap for deciding to put the best available quartet into the sprint relay in order to insure triumph. The head coach viewed the world record-equalling performance in the trials by Owens, Ralph Metcalfe, Foy Draper and Frank Wykoff the best answer to his critics besides denying sharply that even slightest prejudice was involved.

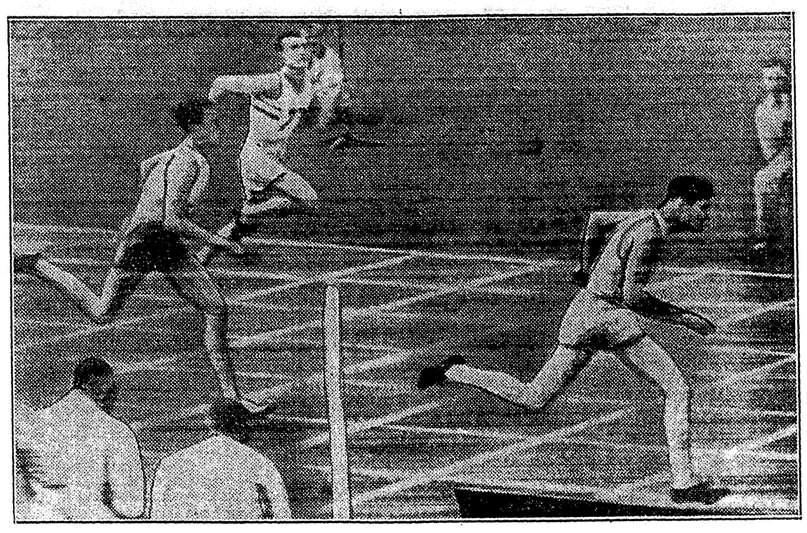

Jesse's return to action as lead-off man forecast the Brown Buckeye Bullet's acquisition of the much prized fourth gold medal, but to bystanders it seemed like the Americans were "pouring it on."

The dispute hinged mainly on Draper's selection over Stoller, who had been assured he'd compete on the basis of trials and did not learn until this morning that he would be benched on his 21st birthday anniversary.

Glickman bitterly assailed the coaches for favoring the Californian under the circumstances which seemed likely to develop further repercussions before the 1936 Olympic books are closed.

Fishing FACTS and Fancies

By F. L. McCulley

So many different lures are bringing in nice strings about this time that a word or two on this subject may not be out of place. In Boeuf river, for instance, bass are striking shiners, so consequently a lure should be used that will resemble the natural bait. Gray hackle and feather minnows apparently brought the best catches the past week for this stream.

In Bayou Bartholomew red and white shimmy wigglers brought fair results in spite of the fact that numbers of bass have left this stream and are now to be found in Lake Bartholomew. A very few bass were reported taken on black and white poppin' bugs and still fewer were secured on Peck underwater feather minnows.

Black Bayou yielded some nice bass to fishermen using black and white lures such as shimmy wiggler, weezel feather minnows and an occasional bass was taken on black and white poppin' bug lures.

Ouachita river bigmouths showed a decided preference for live bait the past week although some few fish were reported taken on chum nickel spoons and also on lures of the minnow type.

Temperature of water has a lot to do with the choice of lure and the depth at which it must be fished to obtain strikes from bass. Another thing that should be noticed is the different appearance of lures when mist is over water. A grayish feather minnow will be found to appear a great deal darker than would be the case if ordinary light conditions prevailed. Where there is considerable mist it is generally advisable to use a nickel spinner of suitable size in front of any lure of the streamer fly type. After the mist has gone it might be well to change to a gold plated spinner or to one of cooper or brass finish, providing it will stay bright.

Depth at which lures may be used also varies with the temperature. For instance if water is about 80 degrees then lures will prove most successful if kept close to the surface. This, of course, applies to water not over six or eight feet in depth. Water four feet in depth and around 80 degrees is frequently only fit for surface lure fishing.

Anglers also should bear in mind that there are no set rules for fishing with artificial lures. Fishermen should be guided by personal knowledge of bass and their habits in whatever particular stream or body of water is being fished.

What is suitable in one stream will perhaps not yield a strike in a bayou nearby. Black and white is generally acknowledged as a summer color combination and this is apparently borne out by the number of nice catches reported by bait casters and fly fishermen using this combination during hot weather.

Black for bream is nearly always good and now that so many are being taken by bait fishermen using crickets, it would indicate the plain black gnat as best for this species.

Boeuf river yielded a nice string of bass to the angling prowess of the Colquitt family the past week. Fifteen bass taken there weighed 24 pounds even. Lures used were gray hackle and gray streamer flies on small gold plated spinners.

The Colquitts declared this stream to be one of the best fishing grounds in this end of the state, and the fighting ability of black bass therein was said to be above the average during the hot weather.

Ouachita river shore lines were fished extensively the past week by Oliver Turle and P. J. Simmons, the latter landing one seven pound black bass. Early morning was found to be the best time for the bigger bass and numbers of small ones were taken after sunup. Turle made most of his catch on salted shiners which were allowed to go nearly to the bottom before being retrieved. Several large gar were caught and destroyed by these two fishermen.

Hardy Gauthier, Hiram Maxwell and "Buck" Noble have returned from a vacation fishing trip in Arkansas. Plenty of rainbow trout were caught and snapshots exhibited prove that this party had more than their share of luck, or is luck the word? Perhaps skill should be used. Anyway, these "anglers three" got the fish and the snapshots prove it.

Harry Moore secured an excellent specimen of bigmouthed black bass the past week and those in the "know" say Moore is at the head of the list of Brown Paper mill fishermen with his recent catch, which weighed five pounds and five ounces after being out of water for some time.

Albert Thibeaux says he got the thrill of his life recently when James Harrel caught a four-pound black bass in Black Bayou. Thibeaux asserts that he is going to take up bait casting in the near future. Harrel made his nice catch using a shimmy wiggler.

BASEBALL CAMP STARTS MONDAY

Scouts For Houston Club To Give Youngsters Trial At Shreveport

SHREVEPORT, La., Aug. 8.—(Special)—Taking no chances on overlooking any young ball players of ability, the Houston baseball club has assigned a staff of five highly competent scouts to the baseball camp which it will operate in Shreveport starting Monday, according to an announcement by Fred N. Ankenman, president of the club. The camp will continue for approximately one week.

The scouts who have been assigned to conduct the trials for young players in the camp are Charlie Kelchner, who for 30 years has been known as one of the most colorful scouts in the game; Don Curtis, the discoverer of Dizzy and Paul Dean, who has scouted in this territory for the Houston club for a number of years; Joe Schultz and Joe Mathes, both former major leaguers and highly successful managers of minor league clubs before becoming scouts, and LeRoy Dissinger, a scout of wide experience in the east.

Ankenman also announced that Charlie Plummer, a field representative, would arrive in Shreveport in a few days to complete preparations for the camp.

Boys between the ages of 17 and 23 are eligible to attend the camp, Ankenman said. The only requirements are that boys pay their own traveling expenses to Shreveport and their living expenses while here and bring their own shoes, gloves and uniforms. Ankenman added that a boy can secure a thorough try-out by spending three to four days at the camp and that those who make good and are signed to contracts will have their expenses incident to attending the camp refunded.

The camp will be held at Dixie League park located on Jordan street in Shreveport. The first session will start at 9 a.m. Monday. No recommendations are necessary. All that boys have to do to secure a try-out is to appear at the park.

GRACYN WHEELER WINS MAIDSTONE NET TITLE

EAST HAMPTON, N. Y., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Gracyn Wheeler of Santa Monica, Calif., ended Helen Pedersen's string of upset tennis triumphs today when she defeated the Stamford, Conn., girl, 6-3, 6-4, to win the 11th women's invitation tournament of the Maidstone club.

RUNAWAY MAY HURT PATRONAGE IN FINAL WEEKS

By Harry Grayson
(NEA Service Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—New York Yankees, lengthening their pronounced lead almost daily and apparently having clinched the American league pennant, leave only a five-club scramble for second place and the dismal prospect of waning patronage for the remaining seven weeks of the schedule.

Flag gathering clubs in the junior circuit make a habit of lapping their field a time or two some time before the finish.

Meanwhile, more fortunate National league owners gather in the shekels as four or more arrays fight it out all the way to the wire. This year is no exception in the older loop, with the St. Louis Cardinals and Chicago Cubs again at each other's throats, and the New York Giants making a determined effort to hang on.

There have been finer all-round championship outfits than the Yankees of 1936, but the Bronx Bombers fastened a strangle hold on the gonfalon in the most satisfactory way. They overpowered each challenger in turn.

First it was Washington, returning home after bagging 11 of 16 games on the road. The Rupert Rifles marched into Griffith Stadium and twice bumped off the Senators in a Fourth of July double-header.

Detroit Tigers roared into Yankee Stadium, July 15, with a record of 14 victories in their last 16 starts. It looked as though the 1935 champions might get some place despite injuries and illness, but the Yanks sent them away doctoring the wounds of three reverses in four appearances.

Catapulted by splendid pitching, the Chicago White Sox rose from comparative obscurity under the miracle man, Jimmy Dykes. They returned to Comiskey Park with a road record of 17 triumphs in 21 engagements, mainly at the expense of eastern teams.

Joe McCarthy's stalwarts came on all right, July 24. There was much excitement. Bottles were hurled from grandstands packed with 50,000 rabid rooters. One of them struck and incapacitated Umpire Bill Summers.

In Cleveland, the Indians were whooping it up on the strength of copping 18 out of 23 games and rising from fifth to second place.

But the big guns of DiMaggio, Gehrig, Dickey, Selkirk & Co. and pitching that was plenty good enough accounted for two games and squelched the Redmen's uprising. The Tribe had worked up its followers to such a pitch that the third game was switched to Cleveland's beautiful lake front stadium, where 65,342 persons saw the clubs battle 16 thrilling innings to a 4 to 4 tie.

Colonel Jacob Ruppert's club would have a highly satisfactory season financially if it didn't play to another customer. The Cleveland crowd was the second largest that had paid to see murderers' row this year. The Yankees battled the Senators before 71,754 paying guests in New York on Memorial day.

The big gathering in the Cleveland Stadium boosted the total attendance for the Yankees' swing through the west to the surprising total of 216,842. The three games the league leaders played in St. Louis to start the tour drew only 4,500 paid admissions. Oddly enough, that was the only spot where they were knocking off, the lowly Browns taking two out of three.

The three contests played in Chicago in two days were good for 65,000 customers, and in Detroit four games in as many days brought out 59,000.

The latter stressed the Detroit fans' loyalty to their club. The Yanks performed at Navin Field the first four days of the week, and after the Boston Red Sox had run up large scores in sweeping a three-game set with the Bengals, Schoolboy Rowe took two games from the Yanks in three days.

In Cleveland the first two contests were played at League Park, where the paid attendance totaled 23,000.

So it is that the affluent Yankees can stand a letdown, but its representatives' unconditional surrender certainly won't tend to increase the trade's interest elsewhere. Even the more violent addicts can't get heated up over a club fighting for second place.

The Bakers and the Baptists, rival contenders for the fourth place position in the Twilight league's standing at the close of the regular schedule of games, will clash tomorrow afternoon at 5:30 o'clock at the Missouri Pacific diamond in a game that will decide the winner of the position and the team that will appear in the title series, which will begin soon afterwards between the four upper division clubs.

After having won an apparently clear way into the series the Bakers hit a slump last week and lost two games straight, while the Baptists, with only one game last week, walloped Southern Bell, then league leaders, to win a chance to appear in the championship battles.

Only the one game will be played to decide the fourth place post. The umpires for the game will be Jones, Monroe and Wene.

Bill Bennett, manager of the Bakers, is expected to take the mound in behalf of the Breadmen, with either W. H. McLemore or Ivy McDonald doing the catching. Swayze or Norris will do the Baptists' pitching and "Doc" Bennett will catch.

Because of the ragged ball played last week by the Bakers, Manager Bennett indicated last night that a shakeup in the Breadmens lineup might be made for the tomorrow's "crucial" game.

DISCOVERY BEATEN IN SARATOGA RACE

Esposa Wins Rich Handicap; Myrtlewood First At Washington Park

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Burdened under 143 pounds, Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Discovery failed in a bid for his third straight victory today as Esposa, flying the silks of Mrs. William Ziegler's middleburg stable, won the 34th running of the Merchants and Citizens handicap.

Esposa, a 7 to 1 shot receiving 43 pounds from Discovery, finished the mile and three sixteenths a length in front of Mrs. John D. Hertz's Count Arthur. Dewitt Page's Mantagna was only a head back in third place. Then came W. M. Jeffords' Giant Killer, showing the way by four lengths to Discovery, last in the field of five.

A year ago Discovery picked up 139 pounds and beat Stand Pat and Top Row in the stake but today he was unable to give his rivals weight ranging from 35 to 43 pounds. He got away well and was as close as third at the three-quarter pole when the impost began to take its toll. Gradually he dropped back while Esposa, County Arthur and Mantagna went on to fight it out for the purse of $8,500 Discovery was the 7 to 10 choice.

MYRTLEWOOD WINS

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—(AP)—The Queen of American sprinters, Myrtlewood, from the blue grass of Kentucky, raced to an easy victory in the $5,000 added Lakeside handicap before 20,000 spectators at Washington park today.

The fleet four year old daughter of Brownell Combs of Lexington, Ky., led from start to finish, conquering Whereaway, the entry of Anthony Pelliteri of New Orleans, by three lengths, with Threadneedle running third, and Lady Montrose fourth.

The race, the first stake of the Washington park season, had a gross value of $6,340, with $4,390 going to owner Combs.

HATTIESBURG, Miss., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Thirty football players will go into training at Camp Dantzler near here on August 31, Pooley Hubert, head coach at the Mississippi State Teachers college, announced.

Hubert and Bert Wilkins, athletic committee chairman, are elated over the letters they have received from last season's lettermen who are working at hard labor jobs to stay in shape for the gridiron grind.

BRUNDAGE AGAIN 'BARS' ELEANOR

This Time A. A. U. President Takes Away Her Amateur Standing

BERLIN, Aug. 8. — (AP) — Eleanor Holm Jarrett, the lovely swimmer whose drinking and partying cost her a chance to defend the Olympic 100 meter backstroke championship, ran afoul of officialdom again today under mysterious circumstances.

Disbarred from the Olympic swimming squad on the day the American team reached Hamburg, Mrs. Jarrett was told today she must not compete in any amateur competition in Europe.

Dr. Leo Donath, secretary of the International Swimming federation who broke the bad news to Eleanor, said he was acting on instructions from Avery Brundage, president not only of the American Olympic committee but of the American Amateur Athletic union as well.

Donath said he had been told by Brundage that Mrs. Jarrett had been disqualified from amateur competition but on what grounds the secretary was uninformed. After her disbarment from the swimming team, Mrs. Jarrett agreed to "cover" the Olympics for a newspaper syndicate.

It so happened that the swimmer had no intention and no desire to compete in Europe, she and her husband, Art Jarrett, singer and actor, having booked passage home on August 14, but that didn't prevent Eleanor from getting good and mad.

She thought up a number of brand new things to say about Brundage, who up until a late hour tonight hadn't seen fit to reply.

"He might have the power to suspend me in Europe," Mrs. Jarrett said, "but this is the first time I knew he could just point a finger at a person and say: 'Now you're a professional.'

"I'm sure he can't take my amateur standing away from me in America without some kind of an official hearing."

The majority of learned opinion sided with the swimmer in that point since it was believed only the Metropolitan (New York) A. A. U., of which she is a member, wields such power.

ALL-STAR ROOKIE TEAM SELECTED

New Orleans Outfielder Gets Unanimous Vote In Southern Poll

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Tom Henrich, versatile young outfielder, of the New Orleans Pels, was picked today by all Southern association managers, for membership on an "all-star rookie team."

The survey was made by Herbert Caldwell, director of the Southern association news service, who announced that Joe Dwyer, Nashville outfielder, Jimmy Galvin, Atlanta catcher, Almon Williams, Atlanta pitcher, and Jennings Poindexter, who hurls for Little Rock, received six of the seven votes.

Caldwell said seven managers helped select the mythical team, Neal Caldwell of Knoxville declining to vote. Nashville placed four men, Atlanta, New Orleans and Knoxville, three each, Little Rock, two and Birmingham, one. Chattanooga and Memphis were not represented. Because of ties, 16 men were selected for the 13 places on which the managers voted.

The team:

First base: Jimmy Wasdell, Nashville; second base, Gerald Lipscomb, Atlanta; third base, Jimmy Outlaw, Nashville; short stop, Tommy Irwin, New Orleans; outfielders, Tommy Henrich, Joe Dwyer, Nashville; Coker Triplett, Nashville; John Tyler, Knoxville; catchers, Jimmy Galvin, Atlanta; Henry Helf, New Orleans, and Ray Mueller, Knoxville; pitchers, Almon Williams, Atlanta; Jennings Poindexter, Little Rock, and Clinton Bauer, Knoxville; utility players, Sammy Liberto, Little Rock, and Joe Woodard, Birmingham.

AMERICA'S HOPES IN SWIM EVENTS SHATTERED EARLY

Japanese And Dutch Stars Dominate First Day Of Olympic Program

By Gayle Talbot
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

BERLIN, Aug. 8.—(AP)—The Japanese and Dutch dominated the first day of Olympic swimming competition today, leaving a string of broken records in their wake, and submerging America's hopes to a new all-time low.

The preliminary rounds saw the little brown men and women establish themselves as exhorbitant favorites in the men's 100 meter free style, and the women's 200 meter breast stroke. The Dutch girls took what looked like a first mortgage on the 100 meter event.

America qualified its two great dasn men, Peter Fick of New York, and Art Lindegren of Los Angeles, for the 100 meter semi-final, while all three of its entries in the women's 100, Katherine Rawls, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., Olive McKean, Seattle, Wash., and Bernice Lapp, Newark, N. J., survived the opening round. There didn't look like a winner in the bunch.

In the women's breaststroke, Uncle Sam's splashes did little more than get themselves wet, finishing fifth, fifth, and fourth in three heats.

Top honors in the day's competition probably belonged to Masnaora Yusa, who in successive heats of the men's 100 meter free style event shattered th Olympic recrd of 58 seconds set in 1932 at Los Angeles by Yasuji Miyazaki, who was too slow this year to make the Japanese team.

Yusa warmed up with a mark of 57.8 in the first heat and then clipped off 57.5 in the semi-final. His teammate, Shoji Tacuchi duplicated his 57.5 in his first heat but needed to do only 57.9 to win the semi-final, in which Fick placed third. Fick, however, won the opening trial in 57.7, and looked like the best opposition the Japanese faced in tomorrow's final.

All told, the old 100 meter free style mark was bettered eight times during the trials, and at the end of the day, Taguchi and Yusa shared the new mark of 57.5.

The sturdy Vhideko Maehata of Japan appeared completely to outclass the breaststrokers, as she staggered the old record of 3:06.3, set by Clare Dennis of Australia in 1932, with a mark of 3:01.9. The three American entrants in the event, Dorothea Schiller, Chicago, Irish Cumming, Rodento Beach, Calif., and Ann Govednik of Chisholm, Minn., did not even come close and were eliminated.

Although she placed only third back of Rita Mastenbroek of Holland and Miss Arndt of Germany, in her heat, Katherine Rawls seemed the only American with a chance of placing in the 100 meters event. Her time of 1:08.5 represented a faster race than Bernice Lapp's 1:09, which won one of the heats.

Willy Denouden of Holland, who won the second heat in the 100 meter event, was given a chance against Miss Mastenbrock, and the pretty Argentine girl, Janet Campbell, about whom little was heard until today, was also a possibility.

HOLLYWOOD STAR WINS NATIONAL JUNIOR TITLE

CULVER, Ind., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Julius Heldman, young Hollywood, Calif., southpaw, today combined brilliance and accuracy to win the national junior tennis singles championship, defeating Joseph Hunt of Los Angeles in a spectacular upset, 1-6, 6-2, 3-6, 6-1, 6-1.

The boys' singles crown returned to the Pacific coast when John Kramer of Monticello defeated the top seeded player, William Umstaedter of Millburn, N. J., 6-1, 7-5.

By taking both doubles titles California swept all the championships. The junior singles finalists, Heldman and Hunt, outlasted Don McNeill of Oklahoma City and Morey Lewis of Texarkana, Ark., to win the junior doubles title, 9-7, 7-5, 4-6, 3-6, 6-2.

Kramer, the boys' singles champion, paired with George McQuown of Los Angeles to defeat Harper Ink of San Diego and James Wade of Altadena, Calif., for the boys' doubles crown, 9-11, 6-4, 6-3.

Shakespeare's vocabulary consisted of 21,000 words, or seven times that of the average person of today.

SPORTS Chatter

BY GEO. V. LOFTON

CURTIS LIKES GIANTS

Don Curtis, veteran St. Louis Cardinal scout who dug up Dizzy Dean and then added to his achievements by signing Brother Paul, was a visitor the other day. Naturally the conversation turned to the National league pennant race, and Mr. Curtis had some rather unexpected observations to make concerning the current battle.

"No, I don't think the Cards can pull through," he said. "The Cubs appear to have too much pitching and the Giants are making a great comeback."

That remark was made just when the Cards were merrily engaged in pinning the Cubs' ears back to regain first place. The feat didn't seem to impress the veteran hunter of baseball ivory.

He particularly likes the Giants.

"This young fellow Gabler is a great pitcher," he said. "Fitzsimmons is rounding into form again and will prove valuable to Terry in the last month and a half of the campaign. Schumacher will be back in a few days and young Al Smith has been looking good all year. If Jackson's legs hold up, look out for those Giants."

DON CURTIS

Incidentally, it wasn't that 21-game winning streak that won for the Cubs last year, opines Curtis. The Cards lost Terry Moore in the last month of the race and that kept the Red Birds from coming through. With Moore in there, the Cards could have protected their lead, despite the Cubs' big drive.

Curtis will help direct the Houston club's baseball camp, which opens at Shreveport tomorrow. Houston, a Cardinal farm, has invited youngsters from the entire southwest to join the camp and take a week's workout under the eyes of several well known baseball men.

"There are two things a boy must have before I'll give him a tumble," says Curtis. "Speed and a strong arm."

Baseball fans are familiar with the records of many stars that Curtis signed. But perhaps they don't know that he's missed several of 'em by a mere matter of a day or two. For instance, Eddie Goosetree beat him to Schoolboy Rowe by five days.

"And wouldn't we breeze through with the Schoolboy in there for us this year!" he sighed.

HIGH FLYING

The Boston Red Sox have been more or less up in the air for the past couple of months but they were literally in the clouds severals days ago. Tom Yawkey, millionaire owner of the Sox, made news by transporting his squad from St. Louis to Chicago by airplane. The players decided they'd rather spend the night in a Chicago hotel instead of on the Pullmans.

Baseball men generally frown on the practice of hauling their costly material through the ozone. However, it's been done before. Last spring Larry McPhail, general manager of the Cincinnati Reds, decreed that the Rhinelanders should be carted from Havana to Florida in a couple of crates.

Mr. McPhail should have been just a bit hesitant about that. He tried it several years ago and it cost him his job.

Ever ready to spring the spectacular, McPhail, then president of the Columbus club of the American association, decided to fly his players from Milwaukee to Kansas City. Columbus is a Cardinal farm, and the fact that a million dollars, more or less, of baseball talent was exposed to disaster in one swoop caused cold chills to play up and down Branch Rickey's spine.

McPhail had pulled other tricks that didn't set so well with the parent organization. But this was the last straw. Larry was called into the home office and promptly paid off.

TORRANCE ON THE PAN

Track fans and sports writers here and there are panning Jack Torrance for his miserable showing in the Olympic shot put finals. Yet Baby Jack, the pride of Oak Grove, doesn't entirely deserve the criticism.

A short while ago Torrance underwent a minor operation for the removal of a tumor from his back. Just before the semi-final trials at Princeton he pulled a muscle. It happened again at Ransdalls Island, yet he managed to make the team. He has been unable to shake the injury jinx this year, and it crossed the Atlantic riding on his back.

Jack won loads of glory and plenty of publicity for Louisiana and the university during his great career as a Tiger track and football star. It seems just a bit unappreciative for his home state fans to put the curse on him just because he failed to live up to expectations in the Olympics.

RED BIRDS PILE UP 17 HITS TO TRIM CINCINNATI

St. Louis Maintains Lead As Cubs And Giants Also Triumph

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 8.—(AP)—Ten hits, two of them Babe Herman's home runs, didn't bother old Jess Haines as he punched across three tallies himself in a 17-hit Cardinal splurge that beat Cincinnati 11-4.

Jess Haines

Victory left the National league status quo unchanged, however, as the Cubs beat Pittsburgh to remain two games behind the leading Cards, and New York beat the Phillies to keep third place three more games back.

Paul Derringer and Lee Stine were victims of the Cardinal onslaught as the Gas House Gang spiced proceedings with eight extra base blows. Only Joe Medwick failed to connect.

Haines delivered the telling punch in the sixth after Derringer passed Garibaldi to fill the bases. Old "Pop" sent one sizzling into centerfield and two runs came in.

Cardinal Freshmen Garibaldi at third and Mize at first garnered two doubles and a single each, and Freshman Ogrodowski went in to catch in time to get two hits in two times up.

Herman put the Reds ahead with the first of his circuit blows in the second. Garibaldi doubled in two runs in the St. Louis half.

CUBS SHADE PIRATES

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—(AP)—It took Billy Herman's third double and fourth hit today to give the Chicago Cubs a surprise 3 to 2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates, but for more than two hours it looked as if he were doubling in vain.

Trailing by a run as they came to bat in the ninth, the Bruins staged a two-run rally to pull the game out of the fire and give Larry French his 12th conquest of the season. English walked to open the last of the ninth, Stainback running for him. Allen sacrificed and Hack singled to score Stainback with the tying run. Herman's third double then sent Hack home with the winning marker. Her-

ADLER'S TEAM TO VICKSBURG TODAY

Local Softball Club Meets Wreckers In Second Game Of Series

The Adler's Garage team, City league leaders, will go to Vicksburg today for a return game with the strong Vicksburg Wreckers, one of Mississippi's outstanding softball teams.

The two teams played here last Sunday and the Garagemen won, 2 to 1, in probably the best softball game ever played here. The Wreckers were undefeated before they ran up against the Monroe club.

Word from Vicksburg indicates that a crowd of three thousand will turn out for today's game. Softball fans there, used to seeing their favorites romp over all opposition, are anxious to get a glimpse of the team that stopped the Wreckers.

The Vicksburg club is anxious to even the score, and the odds probably will be against the Adler team, in view of the fact that they'll be playing on a strange diamond and before a crowd that will be pulling for the Wreckers. Shortle, the stellar Vicksburg hurler, will take the mound for the Wreckers again today.

If the Vicksburg club wins today, an effort will be made to bring the Wreckers back here for a third and deciding battle, Manager E. E. Meredith of the Adler club said last night.

Several carloads of fans will accompany the local team, it was said. Adler players are asked to meet at the News-Star—World building at 11 o'clock this morning.

HADLEY SCORES TENTH STRAIGHT VICTORY, 4 TO 0

New York Gains In Pennant Race As Indians Lose To White Sox

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—(AP)—Bump Hadley pitched his tenth straight victory and his first shutout of the year today, blanking the Philadelphia Athletics 4 to 0 with nine hits as the Yankees opened their home stand successfully.

Bump Hadley

Although the Yanks were outhit 9 to 7, Hadley was tighter in the pinches than his opponents, and was aided by homers in the second inning by Bill Dickey and Tony Lazzeri. The four-baggers were Dickey's 19th and Lazzeri's 12th.

Buck Ross, who started for the Athletics, yielded only seven hits in the seven innings he worked, but all of the league leaders' runs were made off him.

Lew Finney and Lamar Newsom made six of the nine A's hits. Only one Philadelphia batter got as far as third base. He was Chubby Dean, who tripled in the first inning.

The homers by Dickey and Lazzeri started the Yankees scoring in the second. In the third, Hadley singled, advanced on a walk and Roy Johnson's grounder to second, and scored on Joe DiMaggio's long fly for the third New York run. Frank Croseti's three bagger and Johnson's single brought in the last Yankee run in the fifth.

NATS BLANK RED SOX

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—(AP)—Pete Appleton limited Boston to five hits today as Washington shut out the Red Sox 2 to 0 for their second straight victory.

The Senators scored one in the fourth on a walk and two singles and got another run in the eighth on two singles and a stolen base.

Boston got two on in the eighth with no outs but was unable to score.

Manager Cronin started Jack Russell but after the right hander pitched to only one man he removed him in favor of Lefty Grove. Markham pinch hit for Grove in the eighth and Walberg took up the pitching chores in the eighth. Washington got three hits off Grove and then three off Walberg in the single inning he pitched.

N. E. Center Council Plans Ticket Campaign

An intensive ticket sales campaign, designed to raise sufficient funds to complete the budget for athletics at Northeast Center of Louisiana university, will start Tuesday. The campaign will be made by members of the recently appointed Athletic Council of Northeast Center.

Two committees of three council members each will make the canvass. One committee will be composed of A. K. Kilpatrick, chairman of the council, Ben Downing and John Sherrouse, while the other includes Dr. W. L. Bendel, Joe Isaacman and D. Y. Smith.

Season tickets, good for five games, will be sold. The campaign will continue until the necessary amount is raised, Mr. Kilpatrick said.

"Ordinarily it is customary to call on merchants and others for donations," Mr. Kilpatrick said. "However, we want it distinctly understood that we will ask no one for a donation, that we will give value received for every dollar we raise.

"There will be five home games, and each one will be well worth seeing. For instance, there's the Centenary game. Certainly every football fan in this section will want to attend that one. Then there's the game with Southeastern Louisiana college, the only team that crossed Northeast Center's goal last season. Coach 'Red' Swanson of Southeastern has told me that he will have another fine team at Hammond, so we may expect another thrilling football contest. The other games will be equally as interesting. The price of the season tickets is most reasonable, and purchasers will be getting a real bargain."

Mr. Kilpatrick also said that Coach Jim Malone expects to have a football team as good as his undefeated eleven of 1935. The players will report for practice late this month.

The athletic council was appointed last week by President James M. Smith of Louisiana State university. It will have complete charge of athletics at Northeast Center.

MORE QUALIFIERS IN MUNY TOURNEY

Shafto's 74 Still Low; Local Golfers Go To Crossett Today

With the first week of the qualifying round ended, Wesley Shafto still leads the race for medalist honors in the Muncipal Golf club's handicap tourney with a 74.

Sixteen additional players qualified during the past two days, Winnie Cole, Muny pro, announced yesterday, with H. K. Touchstone posting a 75 to take second place. Touchstone, shooting spectacular golf, had an excellent chance to better Shafto's 74 but missed a couple of short putts and had to be content with the 75.

Two others came close with 76's, Tip Schier and Milo Mattinson posted scores two strokes higher than the leader's.

Approximately 25 members of the Municipal club will go to Crossett today for an inter-city match with members of the Prairie Golf club, composed of Crossett and Hamburg golfers. The local contingent will leave here about 11 o'clock. The first foursome will tee off at 1 o'clock this afternoon. It will be the first match of the season with the Arkansas club.

The qualifying round in the Muny club's handicap tourney will close next Friday and those who haven't posted their scores are urged to do so early this week. First round play will start Saturday.

NASHVILLE WINS LEGION JUNIOR BASEBALL FINAL

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Jesse Cross hurled three-hit ball today, holding Memphis scoreless, as Nashville pounded out eight runs to capture the American Legion junior baseball championship of Tennessee.

Nashville and Jackson, Miss., will meet here for the regional championship, the three-bame series starting August 13.

VOLS AT STERLINGTON

STERLINGTON, La., Aug. 8.—(Special)—The Sterlington Engineers will entertain the Ruston Volunteers in a double header here Sunday, and local fans hope to see the Engineers better their position in the league by sweeping both games of the twin bill.

The Sterlington club is still within striking distance of first place, despite their recent losses to Brown and Swartz, and a double victory Sunday will help considerably in making up lost ground. With the club going along at full strength now, Sterlington fans believe the team will be able to cope with the stronger entries again. However, a loss to Ruston in one of the games Sunday will set them back.

The Engineers probably will use Brooks and Kyle on the mound in the two encounters, while Ruston is expected to call on Davis and Hinton in the two games.

By John J. Romano

Jack Sharkey is famous for his sneers. When Boston Jack pins one of his critics with his pale gray, depthless eyes and accompanies this with one of his pet twisting, curling upper lip grimaces, you get what Sharkey likes to call his contempt for a fellow gone wrong.

When Sharkey was Number One contender for the title vacated by Gene Tunney the Bostonian got his biggest kick threatening the fans with his gloved fist held high, and when after getting a decision and gave the boys a lesson in sneering, it tickled his fancy. Boston's gift to the prize ring often said, "The fans come to see me licked. That's fine. But you know I like to fool them because they are putting money in my pocket, and if I get licked they won't come again."

Now Jack Sharkey is back in the picture, blustering just as much as ever. The fans and critics alike laughed off the ludicrous performance of Unknown Winston when the latter tried to go out as gracefully as possible. They laughed louder still when Tony Shucco held him to a draw. Sharkey's form, his flabby body and futile swings came in for much adverse comment. In a return fight with Shucco the former champion showed enough boxing ability to get the award.

Then came young Phil Brubaker and those fans who recalled what Sharkey did to their old idol, Jimmy Maloney, jumped excitedly to their feet and implored Brubaker to down Sharkey again and keep him down. But the wily Jack knew a bit too much about the fine art of stalling until his head cleared, and went on to outbox the coast phenom.

Sharkey's next appearance in the ring, one which may prove to be his last, is scheduled for the eighteenth of this month at the Yankee stadium against Joe Louis. It is easier to write a statement of this kind than getting it from Sharkey.

"All right, wise guy," Jack will say. "Didn't I knock out Schmeling and lose the fight because the referee became too excited and let the Dutchman get away with a foul complaint? Didn't I lick the Dutchman the next time we met. If you don't think Schmeling was afraid of me, why did he run out of town to Cleveland to fight Young Stribling? Now, you saw Schmeling outbox and stop Louis. What does that make me? I can box better than the Dutchman, and what he did to Louis will be duck soup for me."

Make no mistake about Sharkey's confidence in his ability to do just what he says. The Lithuanian is well off in everything a man has to live for. He has a fine family, a beautiful home and plenty of money in the bank. He adds weekly to this with the profits of the largest bar in Boston. For these reasons you must credit him with confidence in his ability to make a successful comeback and not fighting for the loser's end of the purse alone.

Picked Softer Foe

Tackling Sharkey in his first assignment after the terrific lacing he took at Schmeling's hands speaks well for the courage of Joe Louis. No string of set-ups while he is beating his way back to the top. Sharkey, with all his faults, the poor showings against Primo Carnera, King Levinsky and Tommy Loughran in the twilight of his career, is dangerous nevertheless. Joe could have selected a poorer boxer and a slower thinker than the Bostonian. Galled no doubt by the criticism of those who damned him as an amateur when stacked up against an experienced boxer, he is tackling one just as keep, if not smarter, than Schmeling.

Sharkey has been training more than a year for just such a test as he will face the eighteenth. He is under 200 pounds, and that means he is in shape to travel ten rounds at a fast pace. Louis will take to work lickety-split from the opening ball to tag the ex-sailor, or he may find himself more befuddled than he was against the slower, more deliberate Schmeling.

Louis, on his showing against Jack Sharkey, will answer the often asked question, "Did the Schmeling fight take all the starch out of him?"

WRESTLING ROYAL SIGNED FOR STADIUM SHOW

5 GRAPPLERS TO COMPETE IN BIG PROGRAM TUESDAY

Bashara, League, Cochrane, Wagner And Berger Are Participants

A wrestling royal, with five grapplers occupying the ring at one time, will be dished up for the entertainment of fans at Roosevelt stadium Tuesday night. The participants in the merry mixup will be Jack League, Ellis Bashara, Bob Wagner, George Cochrane and Cy Berger. All five are leading grapplers and should provide plenty of action.

The plan is this: The first two to be eliminated in the wrestling royal will meet in the regular two-out-of-three falls semi-final match, having a one-hour time limit. The next two eliminated will meet in the main event, also a two-out-of-three falls match, with a two-hour time limit. The winner of the wrestling royal will get the honor, if any, of refereeing the two matches. The promoters figure the winner should get the easiest job as a reward, although in most of the matches here the referee works as hard as the wrestlers.

All of the participants are well known here, although Cochrane and Berger haven't appeared at the stadium in several months and League made his local debut last week.

Cochrane, a clever grappler who used plenty of rough stuff, is a colorful performer who packed 'em in when he was a regular contributor to the weekly entertainment. He's a veteran who knows all the tricks of the trade and who has built up a large following throughout the southwest and middle west. He usually wrestles without shoes and uses his powerful legs to good advantage.

League showed plenty of ability in his first appearance here last week and local fans expressed a desire to see him work again. He's strictly a scientific grappler, although he can use his fists when the other fellow takes advantage of him. Berger also is a good showman who puts lots of color in his work.

Wagner is a tough looking former Illinois university football star whose wrestling tactics are as tough as he looks. Bashara, the Oklahoma "bad man," has been a regular feature of stadium shows for the past couple of months and he always packs plenty of punch in his efforts.

Regardless of the amount of actual wrestling that's done in the wrestling royal, the fans should see plenty of action with Bashara, Wagner and Cochrane in the ring at the same time. There's usually a lot of "ganging up" in one of those affairs and one or two of the tough guys are likely to find the rest of the gang out to give them a real trimming. Monroe's first wrestling royal was staged several months ago and the fans apparently got quite a kick out of it.

Promoter Phillip Lisotta announced that there would be no advance in admission prices.

The show is slated to get under way at 8:30 o'clock.

GIANTS WIN AGAIN

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 8.—(AP)—The New York Giants won their sixth straight victory today, as Carl Hubbell turned in his 16th pitching conquest of the season, letting the Phillies down with seven hits for a 3 to 2 decision.

Hubbell scored the winning run in the seventh, when he singled and came home on consecutive singles by Joe Moore and Burgess Whitehead. The Giants' other two runs were counted in the first on Joe Moore's single, Mel Ott's triple and Jim Ripple's long fly.

BEES TRIM DODGERS

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—(AP)—Van Lingle Mungo ran into his usual hard luck today, and received his customary weak support as the Bees belted the Brooklyn Dodgers 4 to 2 in the opener of their current series.

GUARD TO PLAY IN TITLE SERIES

First Of City League Championship Playoffs Slated Wednesday

The National Guard team will compete in the City league championship series after all.

Following the announcement yesterday that the Guardsmen would pass up their series with the Adler team because most of the players would be in camp at Alexandria, it was found that the number remaining in Monroe would be sufficient to form a team. Dr. W. L. Bendel, captain in charge of the medical detachment of the Guard, said he would send two or three players back here for the games.

Consequently, the Guardsmen and the Adler Garagemen will start their series Wednesday afternoon, at the Plum street diamond. The Cooperative Dairy and Monroe Hardware, second and fourth place teams, also will play the first game of their series Wednesday, at the Missouri Pacific diamond. Both games will start at 5:15 p. m.

The winners of two games in each series will advance to the finals for the league championship.

The second game of the semi-final playoffs will be played Friday afternoon, with the Cooperative Dairy-Monroe Hardware game at Plum street and the National Guard-Adler contest at the Missouri Pacific field. The third game, if necessary, will be played Sunday, it was announced.

E. S. Eby, manager of the Cooperative Dairy team, announced yesterday that his club will play a game with the Slagle-Johnson Lumber company team at Barkdull Faulk diamond, starting at 3 o'clock, today.

Gene Daspit, acting manager of the National Guard team, announced that the squad would work out Monday afternoon in preparation for the Adler series.

The executive president and an honorary president will also be Americans, who, with a Japanese honorary president, will be named within the next few months.

The organizations board of 13 governors included Arturo Vives, Mexico City; Pedro Yera, Lima, Peru; Jose Camps, Barcelona, Spain; Steere Moda, Honolulu, and Regina Ylanan, Manila.

New Orleans Shotmaker Takes Early Lead For Smashing Victory

Freddie Haas

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Freddie Haas of New Orleans, 20-year-old holder of the United States intercollegiate crown, was entirely too good around the greens for 22-year-old Bobby Reith of Winnipeg today and scored a smashing 8 and 7 victory to win the Canadian amateur golf championship.

The New Orleans shotmaker started out with a dazzling array of pars and birdies, gained a six-hole lead on the first round of the 36-hole final and coasted through on the strength of his expert approaching and putting. He was consistently outdriven, often as much as 20 yards, by the Winnipeg youngster but made it up around the greens.

Haas, conqueror of the defending champion, C. Ross (Sandy) Somerville in yesterday's semi-final, failed to equal his par smashing feats of the earlier rounds but he shot a two-over-par 75 on the morning round and was over only once in the eleven holes of the afternoon round. A costly seven on the fifth hole, the only one he lost on the first nine, was largely responsible for Freddie's failure to equal perfect figures.

The New Orleans ace was one under par for the first four holes of the morning round, carding a birdie three on the 284 yard third, and led three up. On the fifth he sliced out of bounds, dropped his second ball into long grass short of the green and took a seven while Bobby was down in five.

Taking the seventh and eighth with pars, Haas reached the turn in 38, four up, while Reith needed 41 strokes. On the short eleventh Haas was over par again, missing a two footer, but he made that up with a birdie on the long 14th.

Reith won two holes on the outgoing nine in the afternoon round but he had to break par each time to do it, carding a three on the first hole and a deuce on the eighth. In between Freddie won three holes and and he took the ninth to go eight up. He halved the next two holes to end the match.

EVANGELINE LEAGUE

Behind the air-tight hurling of Quinn Lee, the Alexandria Aces lengthened their Evangeline league lead Saturday to seven full games over the second place Opelousas Indians. Lee held the Indians to four hits and a brace of runs while his mates nicked Moore for nine safeties and five runs.

Bradshaw had the edge over Montalvo in another pitching battle in which Abbeville downed Lake Charles 4 to 3.

The Jeanerette Blues rapped the offerings of two Rayne hurlers for a 12-6 win, while New Iberia eked out a 7-6 victory over the Lafayette White Sox in the other league game.

FAVORITES WIN IN EASTERN NET MEET

RYE, N. Y., Aug. 8.—(AP)—The Eastern Grass Courts tennis championships opened today with 24 first round matches played in the men's and women's singles and not a surprise in the lot.

Headed by Don Budge, the flaming thatched Davis Cup star from Oakland, Calif., and Bryan "Bitsy" Grant Atlanta's "mighty mite" in the men's division and Mrs. Mary Greef Harris of Kansas City and Norma Taubele in the women's, the favorites came through without the loss of a set.

Budge, top-seeded, blasted Marion Reese of Atlanta off the court, 6-1, 6-0. It was the first singles match since his return from the Wimbledon tourney.

Grant had a somewhat harder struggle against Edward De Gray of Brooklyn but won out 6-4, 6-1. Other seeded stars came through as easily.

Mrs. Harris, seeded fourth, was the top-ranking woman player in action and she had no trouble defeating Alice Burrage, Easthampton, N. Y., 6-0, 6-0. Other feminine favorites, including Elizabeth Blackman of Detroit, Mrs. Lila Porter of Mobile, Ala., Eunice Dean, Dallas, Tex., Miss Tauble and Helen Fulton of Chicago, won their opening matches in straight sets.

FRANKIE PARKER TAKES 3RD MEADOW CLUB TITLE

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Frankie Parker, 20-year-old racquet wielder of Spring Lake, N. J., and Milwaukee, added the valued Meadow club singles trophy to his list of permanent possessions today when he routed Gregory Mangin of Newark, N. J., 1-6, 6-1, 6-2, 6-0, in the final.

Then he hooked up with the loser to capture the doubles title from the national clay courts champions, Robert Riggs and Wayne Sabin of Los Angeles, 11-13, 3-6, 7-5, 8-6, 6-1.

It was the third straight triumph for the New Jersey schoolboy in the men's singles but as a major conquest it didn't amount to much outside of his winning permanently the trophy which has been sought in the past by most of America's tennis greats.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Wood of New York won the mixed doubles event, going through two three-set matches to capture the trophy.

SCHMELING ARRIVES FOR BATTLE WITH BRADDOCK

LAKEHURST, N. J., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Max Schmeling, former heavyweight champion from Germany, returned to America aboard the zeppelin Hindenburg today to prepare for his 15-round bout with Jimmy Braddock, current holder of the title, in September.

Schmeling, apparently in good condition, said he was feeling fine but was anxious to begin his training. He pointed out that Braddock's defense would be somewhat stronger than Louis' and hence he would need more preparation.

Max was still undecided about the location of his training camp although he favors Speculator, N. Y. He now weighs 194 pounds, close to his fighting weight.

WARREN BASEBALL PLAYER BREAKS LEG AT CROSSETT

CROSSETT, Ark., Aug. 8.—(Special)—Spence Woodard, third baseman of the Warren Lumberjacks of the Southeast Arkansas league, broke two bones in his leg just below the knee in a game with Crossett here today. Madden of Crossett slid into third base in the fifth inning to put Woodard in a Crossett hospital.

Crossett won, 6 to 3.

It was the fourth straight defeat for Mel Harder. Cleveland's ace pitcher, and the fifth consecutive time he has retired from a game under fire. The White Sox batted around, scoring four runs, in the fifth.

The Indians started a rally in the ninth, but were able to score only two runs on four hits and a walk. Earl Averill, outfielder, led the Cleveland attack with five singles.

In the nightcap the Browns fell on Schoolboy Rowe and drove him from the box in the eighth inning.

HOHMANN GIVEN QUARTERBACK JOB

Parker Converts Guard Into Signal Barker On Centenary Team

SHREVEPORT, La., Aug. 8.—(Special)—"There," observed Curtis Parker, as he surveyed the paint-smeared figure of Walter (Cowboy) Hohmann, "is your quarterback."

Meaning, necessarily, Centenary's quarterback.

Without thought of the possible consequences of a daring experiment that will convert a guard into a back, and the back into a signal-barker, Coach Parker declared himself on the point with a degree of emphasis that brooked no demurring arguments by revealing without any qualifying ifs, ands and buts that the Chicago cowhand will function in that capacity in the fall of 1936.

Hohmann is currently engaged with Trainer "Hoot" Gibson and "Boots," the club valet, in the fatiguing, though muscle-building task of applying a freshening coat of paint to the steel work of the grandstand. Although his appearance suggested a degree of wonderment, he insisted that most of the paint was going on the stands. It's part-time labor for the colorful Centenary ace, for he is simultaneously holding down three other jobs as an outward manifestation of his industry.

"Yes, sir," Parker repeated, "there's your quarterback. The search is over and Hohmann's elected. Capable, resourceful, aggressive, smart—he combines all of the desired qualities, so why hunt any farther? I grant you that the daring nature of an experiment that will place a man inexperienced in quarterbacking ways in such an important position in his first season as a back has impressed me, but I have scanned the entire field of prospects and I am certain that we will not go wrong by turning over the field direction of the club to the cowboy."

Clark Is Second And Parker Third To Complete American Triumph

By Alan Gould
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

BERLIN, Aug. 8.—(AP)—Three far western youths swept the boards for America in the Olympic decathlon competition today, led by Colorado's magnificent Glenn Morris, who smashed his own world record, scaling Olympic heights as a climax to his first year in all-round competition.

Glenn Morris

The Fort Collins automobile salesman, who got the idea admiring jarring Jim Bausch capture another record - cracking Olympic tussle at Los Angeles in 1932, outstripped two Californians, Bob Clark and Jack Parker, while running up the amazing aggregate of 7,900 points.

The 24-year-old former Colorado State college football and track star's performance was capped by a sensational stretch sprint concluding the 1,500 meter run which carried him to the tape in 4:33.2 and gave him sufficient points to beat his own world mark by exactly 20 points.

Morris' exploits in the strenuous two-day, ten-event test enabled him to wipe out the Olympic record his former idol, Bausch, set by 502 points under the new scoring system. Bausch operated under the old system, but his figures translated total 7,398 points.

Earlier in the day, Volmari Iso-Hollo of Finland set the stage for record-smashing performances. The swift and durable Finn became the first champion to repeat as he paced the field in the 3,000 meter steeplechase final to a 9:03.8 victory. He and the next four finishers all lowered his former Olympic record of 9:14.6.

Kaarlo Tuominen ,another Finn, trailed his countryman by three seconds as Alfred Dompert of Germany, producing a great stretch drive, took third, followed by Martti Matilainen of Finland and Harold Manning of Wichita, Kas., all of whom were under Iso-Hollo's 1932 mark. Tuominen's time was 9:06.8; Dompert, 9:07.2; Matilainen, 9:09, and the Kansan, 9:11.2.

The semi-final day of the blue ribbon competition also saw Jesse Owens return to competition and lead off the 400-meter relay team to a world record-equalling 40 second preliminary triumph, and the American women's 400 and men's 1,600 meter relayers survive the trials and qualify for tomorrow's final.

Dusk settled down not only on the weary decathloners but also on another rip-roaring Olympic day in which assorted developments included Finland's domination of the obstacle race and the latest "Jarrett case" development whereby Avery Brundage, president of the American Olympic committee and also the A. A. U., ruled out the former backstroke queen, Eleanor Holm Jarrett, as an amateur, at least while she's abroad.

Also there were repercussions over the omission of two Jewish boys, Marty Glickman and Sam Stoller, from America's 400 meter sprint relay team.

Controversial echoes rocked the press box all day while experts struggled with an endless stream of decathlon tabulations.

Mrs. Jarrett challenged Brundage's authority to order her disbarred without a hearing, while Glickman charged the track coaches with "politics" in shunting him and Stoller to the sidelines without a chance to appear in the games.

Head Coach Lawson Robertson voluntarily took the rap for deciding to put the best available quartet into the sprint relay in order to insure triumph. The head coach viewed the world record-equalling performance in the trials by Owens, Ralph Metcalfe, Foy Draper and Frank Wykoff the best answer to his critics besides denying sharply that even slightest prejudice was involved.

Jesse's return to action as lead-off man forecast the Brown Buckeye Bullet's acquisition of the much prized fourth gold medal, but to bystanders it seemed like the Americans were "pouring it on."

The dispute hinged mainly on Draper's selection over Stoller, who had been assured he'd compete on the basis of trials and did not learn until this morning that he would be benched on his 21st birthday anniversary.

Glickman bitterly assailed the coaches for favoring the Californian under the circumstances which seemed likely to develop further repercussions before the 1936 Olympic books are closed.

U. S. CAGERS IN ACTION

BERLIN, Aug. 8.—(AP)—After spending the first two days of the tournament on the sidelines, America's basketball representatives open their drive for the Olympic title tomorrow against the strong Estonian quintet in a second round game. The Americans had a walk-over in the first round when the Spanish team failed to arrive.

Coach Jimmy Needles tonight submitted a list of seven men, all that is permissable under Olympic rules. Sam Balter, Don Piper, Carl Shy and Art Mollner of Los Angeles, Frank Lubin of Hollywood, Calif., and John Gibbons and Williard Schmidt of Murpherson, Kas., will make up the squad.

The Estonians are expected to offer fair opposition to the Americans, heavy favorites to capture the championship.

AMERICANS ELIMINATED

BERLIN, Aug. 8.—(AP)—Germany eliminated America's Olympic field handball team today, 29-1, and thus moved into the championship playoff with Austria, Switzerland and Hungary next week.

The Americans, beaten by Hungary yesterday, will met Rumania Monday to decide fifth and sixth places.

fishing FACTS and Fancies

By F. L. McCulley

So many different lures are bringing in nice strings about this time that a word or two on this subject may not be out of place. In Boeuf river, for instance, bass are striking shiners, so consequently a lure should be used that will resemble the natural bait. Gray hackle and feather minnows apparently brought the best catches the past week for this stream.

In Bayou Bartholomew red and white shimmy wigglers brought fair results in spite of the fact that numbers of bass have left this stream and are now to be found in Lake Bartholomew. A very few bass were reported taken on black and white poppin' bugs and still fewer were secured on Peck underwater feather minnows.

Black Bayou yielded some nice bass to fishermen using black and white lures such as shimmy wiggler, weezel feather minnows and an occasional bass was taken on black and white poppin' bug lures.

Ouachita river bigmouths showed a decided preference for live bait the past week although some few fish were reported taken on chum nickel spoons and also on lures of the minnow type.

Temperature of water has a lot to do with the choice of lure and the depth at which it must be fished to obtain strikes from bass. Another thing that should be noticed is the different appearance of lures when mist is over water. A grayish feather minnow will be found to appear a great deal darker than would be the case if ordinary light conditions prevailed. Where there is considerable mist it is generally advisable to use a nickel spinner of suitable size in front of any lure of the streamer fly type. After the mist has gone it might be well to change to a gold plated spinner or to one of cooper or brass finish, providing it will stay bright.

Depth at which lures may be used also varies with the temperature. For instance if water is about 80 degrees then lures will prove most successful if kept close to the surface. This, of course, applies to water not over six or eight feet in depth. Water four feet in depth and around 80 degrees is frequently only fit for surface lure fishing.

Anglers also should bear in mind that there are no set rules for fishing with artificial lures. Fishermen should be guided by personal knowledge of bass and their habits in whatever particular stream or body of water is being fished.

What is suitable in one stream will perhaps not yield a strike in a bayou nearby. Black and white is generally acknowledged as a summer color combination and this is apparently borne out by the number of nice catches reported by bait casters and fly fishermen using this combination during hot weather.

Black for bream is nearly always good and now that so many are being taken by bait fishermen using crickets, it would indicate the plain black gnat as best for this species.

Boeuf river yielded a nice string of bass to the angling prowess of the Colquitt family the past week. Fifteen bass taken there weighed 24 pounds even. Lures used were gray hackle and gray streamer flies on small gold plated spinners.

The Colquitts declared this stream to be one of the best fishing grounds in this end of the state, and the fighting ability of black bass therein was said to be above the average during the hot weather.

Ouachita river shore lines were fished extensively the past week by Oliver Turle and P. J. Simmons, the latter landing one seven pound black bass. Early morning was found to be the best time for the bigger bass and numbers of small ones were taken after sunup. Turle made most of his catch on salted shiners which were allowed to go nearly to the bottom before being retrieved. Several large gar were caught and destroyed by these two fishermen.

Hardy Gauthier, Hiram Maxwell and "Buck" Noble have returned from a vacation fishing trip in Arkansas. Plenty of rainbow trout were caught and snapshots exhibited prove that this party had more than their share of luck, or is luck the word? Perhaps skill should be used. Anyway, these "anglers three" got the fish and the snapshots prove it.

Harry Moore secured an excellent specimen of bigmouthed black bass the past week and those in the "know" say Moore is at the head of the list of Brown Paper mill fishermen with his recent catch, which weighed five pounds and five ounces after being out of water for some time.

Albert Thibeaux says he got the thrill of his life recently when James Harrel caught a four-pound black bass in Black Bayou. Thibeaux asserts that he is going to take up bait casting in the near future. Harrel made his nice catch using a shimmy wiggler.

BASEBALL CAMP STARTS MONDAY

SHREVEPORT, La., Aug. 8.—(Special)—Taking no chances on overlooking any young ball players of ability, the Houston baseball club has assigned a staff of five highly competent scouts to the baseball camp which it will operate in Shreveport starting Monday, according to an announcement by Fred N. Ankenman, president of the club. The camp will continue for approximately one week.

The scouts who have been assigned to conduct the trials for young players in the camp are Charlie Kelchner, who for 30 years has been known as one of the most colorful scouts in the game; Don Curtis, the discoverer of Dizzy and Paul Dean, who has scouted in this territory for the Houston club for a number of years; Joe Schultz and Joe Mathes, both former major leaguers and highly successful managers of minor league clubs before becoming scouts, and LeRoy Dissinger, a scout of wide experience in the east.

Ankenman also announced that Charlie Plummer, a field representative, would arrive in Shreveport in a few days to complete preparations for the camp.

Boys between the ages of 17 and 23 are eligible to attend the camp, Ankenman said. The only requirements are that boys pay their own traveling expenses to Shreveport and their living expenses while here and bring their own shoes, gloves and uniforms. Ankenman added that a boy can secure a thorough try-out by spending three to four days at the camp and that those who make good and are signed to contracts will have their expenses incident to attending the camp refunded.

The camp will be held at Dixie League park located on Jordan street in Shreveport. The first session will start at 9 a.m. Monday. No recommendations are necessary. All that boys have to do to secure a try-out is to appear at the park.

GRACYN WHEELER WINS MAIDSTONE NET TITLE

EAST HAMPTON, N. Y., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Gracyn Wheeler of Santa Monica, Calif., ended Helen Pedersen's string of upset tennis triumphs today when she defeated the Stamford, Conn., girl, 6-3, 6-4, to win the 11th women's invitation tournament of the Maidstone club.

RUNAWAY MAY HURT PATRONAGE IN FINAL WEEKS

By Harry Grayson
(NEA Service Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—New York Yankees, lengthening their pronounced lead almost daily and apparently having clinched the American league pennant, leave only a five-club scramble for second place and the dismal prospect of waning patronage for the remaining seven weeks of the schedule.

Flag gathering clubs in the junior circuit make a habit of lapping their field a time or two some time before the finish.

Meanwhile, more fortunate National league owners gather in the shekels as four or more arrays fight it out all the way to the wire. This year is no exception in the older loop, with the St. Louis Cardinals and Chicago Cubs again at each other's throats, and the New York Giants making a determined effort to hang on.

There have been finer all-round championship outfits than the Yankees of 1936, but the Bronx Bombers fastened a strangle hold on the gonfalon in the most satisfactory way. They overpowered each challenger in turn.

First it was Washington, returning home after bagging 11 of 16 games on the road. The Rupert Rifles marched into Griffith Stadium and twice bumped off the Senators in a Fourth of July double-header.

Detroit Tigers roared into Yankee Stadium, July 15, with a record of 14 victories in their last 16 starts. It looked as though the 1935 champions might get some place despite injuries and illness, but the Yanks sent them away doctoring the wounds of three reverses in four appearances.

Catapulted by splendid pitching, the Chicago White Sox rose from comparative obscurity under the miracle man, Jimmy Dykes. They returned to Comiskey Park with a road record of 17 triumphs in 21 engagements, mainly at the expense of eastern teams.

Joe McCarthy's stalwarts came on all right, July 24. There was much excitement. Bottles were hurled from grandstands packed with 50,000 rabid rooters. One of them struck and incapacitated Umpire Bill Summers.

In Cleveland, the Indians were whooping it up on the strength of copping 18 out of 23 games and rising from fifth to second place.

But the big guns of DiMaggio, Gehrig, Dickey, Selkirk & Co. and pitching that was plenty good enough accounted for two games and squelched the Redmen's uprising. The Tribe had worked up its followers to such a pitch that the third game was switched to Cleveland's beautiful lake front stadium, where 65,342 persons saw the clubs battle 16 thrilling innings to a 4 to 4 tie.

Colonel Jacob Ruppert's club would have a highly satisfactory season financially if it didn't play to another customer. The Cleveland crowd was the second largest that had paid to see murderers' row this year. The Yankees battled the Senators before 71,754 paying guests in New York on Memorial day.

The big gathering in the Cleveland Stadium boosted the total attendance for the Yankees' swing through the west to the surprising total of 216,842. The three games the league leaders played in St. Louis to start the tour drew only 4,500 paid admissions. Oddly enough, that was the only spot where they were knocking off the lowly Browns taking two out of three.

The three contests played in Chicago in two days were good for 65,000 customers, and in Detroit four games in as many days brought out 59,000.

The latter stressed the Detroit fans' loyalty to their club. The Yanks performed at Navin Field the first four days of the week, and after the Boston Red Sox had run up large scores in sweeping a three-game set with the Bengals, Schoolboy Rowe took two games from the Yanks in three days.

In Cleveland the first two contests were played at League Park, where the paid attendance totaled 23,000.

So it is that the affluent Yankees can stand a letdown, but its representatives' unconditional surrender certainly won't tend to increase the trade's interest elsewhere. Even the more violent addicts can't get heated up over a club fighting for second place.

The Bakers and the Baptists, rival contenders for the fourth place position in the Twilight league's standing at the close of the regular schedule of games, will clash tomorrow afternoon at 5:30 o'clock at the Missouri Pacific diamond in a game that will decide the winner of the position and the team that will appear in the title series, which will begin soon afterwards between the four upper division clubs.

After having won an apparently clear way into the series the Bakers hit a slump last week and lost two games straight, while the Baptists, with only one game last week, walloped Southern Bell, then league leaders, to win a chance to appear in the championship battles.

Only the one game will be played to decide the fourth place post. The umpires for the game will be Jones, Monroe and Wene.

Bill Bennett, manager of the Bakers, is expected to take the mound in behalf of the Breadmen, with either W. H. McLemore or Ivy McDonald doing the catching. Swayze or Norris will do the Baptists' pitching and "Doc" Bennett will catch.

Because of the ragged ball played last week by the Bakers, Manager Bennett indicated last night that a shakeup in the Breadmens lineup might be made for the tomorrow's "crucial" game.

DISCOVERY BEATEN IN SARATOGA RACE

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Burdened under 143 pounds, Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Discovery failed in a bid for his third straight victory today as Esposa, flying the silks of Mrs. William Ziegler's middleburg stable, won the 34th running of the Merchants and Citizens handicap.

Esposa, a 7 to 1 shot receiving 43 pounds from Discovery, finished the mile and three sixteenths a length in front of Mrs. John D. Hertz's Count Arthur. Dewitt Page's Mantagna was only a head back in third place. Then came W. M. Jeffords' Giant Killer, showing the way by four lengths to Discovery, last in the field of five.

A year ago Discovery picked up 139 pounds and beat Stand Pat and Top Row in the stake but today he was unable to give his rivals weight ranging from 35 to 43 pounds. He got away well and was as close as third at the three-quarter pole when the impost began to take its toll. Gradually he dropped back while Esposa, County Arthur and Mantagna went on to fight it out for the purse of $8,500. Discovery was the 7 to 10 choice.

MYRTLEWOOD WINS

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—(AP)—The Queen of American sprinters, Myrtlewood, from the blue grass of Kentucky, raced to an easy victory in the $5,000 added Lakeside handicap before 20,000 spectators at Washington park today.

The fleet four year old daughter of Blue Larkshur-Frizeur, owned by Brownell Combs of Lexington, Ky., led from start to finish, conquering Whereaway, the entry of Anthony Pelliteri of New Orleans, by three lengths, with Threadneedle running third, and Lady Montrose fourth.

The race, the first stake of the Washington park season, had a gross value of $6,340, with $4,390 going to owner Combs.

BRUNDAGE AGAIN 'BARS' ELEANOR

This Time A. A. U. President Takes Away Her Amateur Standing

BERLIN, Aug. 8. — (AP) — Eleanor Holm Jarrett, the lovely swimmer whose drinking and partying cost her a chance to defend the Olympic 100 meter backstroke championship, ran afoul of officialdom again today under mysterious circumstances.

Disbarred from the Olympic swimming squad on the day the American team reached Hamburg, Mrs. Jarrett was told today she must not compete in any amateur competition in Europe.

Dr. Leo Donath, secretary of the International Swimming federation who broke the bad news to Eleanor, said he was acting on instructions from Avery Brundage, president not only of the American Olympic committee but of the American Amateur Athletic union as well.

Donath said he had been told by Brundage that Mrs. Jarrett had been disqualified from amateur competition but on what grounds the secretary was uninformed. After her disbarment from the swimming team, Mrs. Jarrett agreed to "cover" the Olympics for a newspaper syndicate.

It so happened that the swimmer had no intention and no desire to compete in Europe, she and her husband, Art Jarrett, singer and actor, having booked passage home on August 14, but that didn't prevent Eleanor from getting good and mad.

She thought up a number of brand new things to say about Brundage, who up until a late hour tonight hadn't seen fit to reply.

"He might have the power to suspend me in Europe," Mrs. Jarrett said, "but this is the first time I knew he could just point a finger at a person and say: 'Now you're a professional.'

"I'm sure he can't take my amateur standing away from me in America without some kind of an official hearing."

The majority of learned opinion sided with the swimmer in that point since it was believed only the Metropolitan (New York) A. A. U., of which she is a member, wields such power.

ALL-STAR ROOKIE TEAM SELECTED

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Tom Henrich, versatile young outfielder, of the New Orleans Pels, was picked today by all Southern association managers for membership on an "all-star rookie team."

The survey was made by Herbert Caldwell, director of the Southern association news service, who announced that Joe Dwyer, Nashville outfielder, Jimmy Galvin, Atlanta catcher, Almon Williams, Atlanta pitcher, and Jennings Poindexter, who hurls for Little Rock, received six of the seven votes.

Caldwell said seven managers helped select the mythical team, Neal Caldwell of Knoxville declining to vote. Nashville placed four men, Atlanta, New Orleans and Knoxville, three each, Little Rock, two and Birmingham, one. Chattanooga and Memphis were not represented. Because of ties, 16 men were selected for the 13 places on which the managers voted.

The team:

First base: Jimmy Wasdell, Nashville; second base, Gerald Lipscomb, Atlanta; third base, Jimmy Outlaw, Nashville; short stop, Tommy Irwin, New Orleans; outfielders, Tommy Henrich, Joe Dwyer, Nashville; Coker Triplett, Nashville; John Tyler, Knoxville; catchers, Jimmy Galvin, Atlanta; Henry Helf, New Orleans, and Ray Mueller, Knoxville; pitchers, Almon Williams, Atlanta; Jennings Poindexter, Little Rock, and Clinton Bauer, Knoxville; utility players, Sammy Liberto, Little Rock, and Joe Woodard, Birmingham.

AMERICA'S HOPES IN SWIM EVENTS SHATTERED EARLY

Japanese And Dutch Stars Dominate First Day Of Olympic Program

By Gayle Talbot
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

BERLIN, Aug. 8.—(AP)—The Japanese and Dutch dominated the first day of Olympic swimming competition today, leaving a string of broken records in their wake, and submerging America's hopes to a new all-time low.

The preliminary rounds saw the little brown men and women establish themselves as exhorbitant favorites in the men's 100 meter free style, and the women's 200 meter breast stroke. The Dutch girls took what looked like a first shortgage on the 100 meter event.

America qualified its two great dashmen, Peter Fick of New York, and Art Lindegren of Los Angeles, for the 100 meter semi-final, while all three of its entries in the women's 100, Katherine Rawls, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., Olive McKean, Seattle, Wash., and Bernice Lapp, Newark, N. J., survived the opening round. There didn't look like a winner in the bunch.

In the women's breaststroke, Uncle Sam's splashes did little more than get themselves wet, finishing fifth, fifth, and fourth in three heats.

Top honors in the day's competition probably belonged to Masnaora Yusa, who in successive heats of the men's 100 meter free style event shattered th Olympic rcord of 58 seconds set in 1932 at Los Angeles by Yasuji Miyazaki, who was too slow this year to make the Japanese team.

Yusa warmed up with a mark of 57.8 in the first heat and then clipped off 57.5 in the semi-final. His teammate, Shoji Tacuchi duplicated his 57.5 in his first heat but needed to do only 57.9 to win the semi-final, in which Fick placed third. Fick, however, won the opening trial in 57.7, and looked like the best opposition the Japanese faced in tomorrow's final.

All told, the old 100 meter free style mark was bettered eight times during the trials, and at the end of the day, Taguchi and Yusa shared the new mark of 57.5.

The sturdy Vhideko Maehata of Japan appeared completely to outclass the breaststrokers, as she staggered the old record of 3:06.3, set by Clare Dennis of Australia in 1932, with a mark of 3:01.9. The three American entrants in the event, Dorothea Schiller, Chicago, Irish Cumming, Rodento Beach, Calif., and Ann Govednik of Chisholm, Minn., did not even come close and were eliminated.

Although she placed only third back of Rita Mastenbroek of Holland and Miss Arndt of Germany, in her heat, Katherine Rawls seemed the only American with a chance of placing in the 100 meters event. Her time of 1:08.5 represented a faster race than Bernice Lapp's 1:09, which won one of the heats.

Willy Denouden of Holland, who won the second heat in the 100 meter event, was given a chance against Miss Mastenbrock, and the pretty Argentine girl, Janet Campbell, about whom little was heard until today, was also a possibility.

HOLLYWOOD STAR WINS NATIONAL JUNIOR TITLE

CULVER, Ind., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Julius Heldman, young Hollywood, Calif., southpaw, today combined brilliance and accuracy to win the national junior tennis singles championship, defeating Joseph Hunt of Los Angeles in a spectacular upset, 1-6, 6-2, 3-6, 6-1, 6-1.

The boys' singles crown returned to the Pacific coast when John Kramer of Monticello defeated the top seeded player, William Umstaedter of Millburn, N. J., 6-1, 7-5.

By taking both doubles titles California swept all the championships. The junior singles finalists, Heldman and Hunt, outlasted Don McNeill of Oklahoma City and Morey Lewis of Texarkana, Ark., to win the junior doubles title, 9-7, 7-5, 4-6, 3-6, 6-2.

Kramer, the boys' singles champion, paired with George McQuown of Los Angeles to defeat Harper Ink of San Diego and James Wade of Altadena, Calif., for the boys' doubles crown, 9-11, 6-4, 6-3.

Shakespeare's vocabulary consisted of 21,000 words, or seven times that of the average person of today.

FORD CARS PASS OBSTACLE TEST

Motor Caravans In Desert Wastes Of China Subjected To Strain

Motor caravans now being operated across 1,200 miles of desert waste in China provide one of the most impressive illustrations of man's ability to overcome natural obstacles to travel.

Mail, passengers and freight are transported by the caravans between Suiyuan province, 350 miles northwest of Tientsin, and the more remote Sinkiang province, in Chinese Turkestan, to the west. This "Sin Sui" line, maintained by the Sinkiang Suiyuan Automobile Transportation Co., is the only practical connecting link between Suiyuan province and the interior.

Sandstorms and blizzards must be battled by caravan vehicles, running on well-nigh impossible surfaces. There is travel one day across and through the ice of a desert stream, the next day on sand, and the following day on sand blanketed with six inches of snow. Progress is sometimes limited to 60 miles a day, and often a driver cannot shift into high gear more than three or four times in nine hours of driving.

The caravans, comprising 12 Ford cars, leave the line's east and west terminals simultaneously, passing in mid-desert. They are usually en route for 12 to 14 days. In that time the only habitations seen are infrequent, lone huts of felt and wood frame.

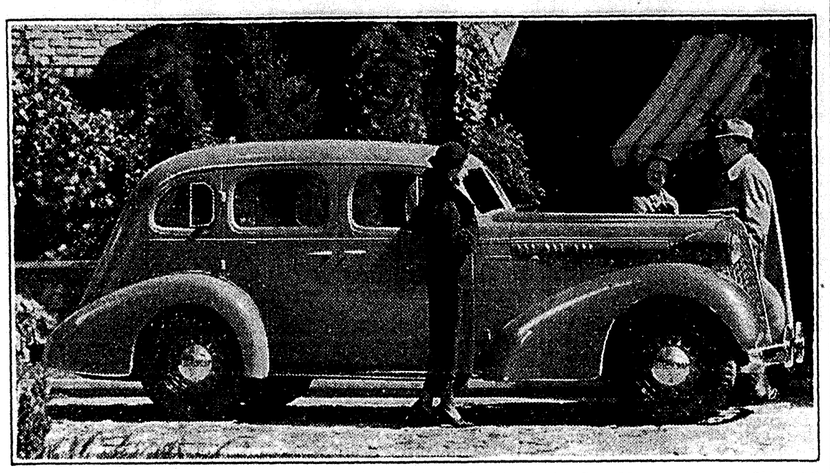

Drivers and passengers look like creatures from another world, for they must be bundled in voluminous garments for protection against the severe cold. Overnight stops are made wherever nightfall finds them, and all caravan members prepare their tents and bedrolls. The ground may be coated with snow or ice, but there is no choice of sleeping quarters.

The Chinese crew displays an amazing esprit de corps in the face of grave difficulties. The Sin Sui route follows the Hami road which, while it is the longest single highway in the world, has never seen a grader or other road-improvement device. Snowdrifts frequently halt the lead car, but shovel-wielding drivers and truckers toss them aside speedily, and the Fords push on, loaded high with every imaginable article traded in by the peoples of Suiyuan and Sinkiang. Despite chilled hands and sand-stung eyes, the Chinese mechanics are rarely halted more than 10 or 15 minutes when breakdowns occur.

While the Sin Sui line has on regular schedule two 12-car caravans, it has ready for use more than 20 other desert-going Fords, for emergency trips are often necessary.

One of the line's few touches of provincialism is experienced by westbound passengers. They must devote their attentions to the telegraph wires until they procure from Sheng Shih-tsai, governor of Sinkiang, his permission to enter his province. None may make such entrance without the governor's personal approval.

ONE OF POPULAR OLDSMOBILE MODELS

ECONOMY OF PONTIAC THOROUGHLY PROVEN

First prize out of a field of 10,400 contestants in a national economy contest recently conducted by the Pontiac Motor company went to Miss Francis Reifer of Oshkosh, Wis., it was announced by A. V. Grega, Pontiac dealer in this area.

The average mileage obtained by all contestants in this contest was 23.8 miles per gallon, which it was stated by Mr. Grego was particularly interesting in view of the fact that it was only 1-10 of a mile less per gallon than the 23.9 mileage figure which was attained by a Pontiac in taking first place in its weight class in the recent official Gilmore economy run from Los Angeles to the Yosemite valley under AAA supervision. "The fact that 10,400 different drivers under a variety of driving conditions came so close to approaching this figure is remarkable evidence of Pontiac's unusual economy," he stated.

Mr. Grego, president of the local Pontiac dealership, stated that a number of people entered the contest here.

TASTY FOODS AT FRENCHIE'S NO. 1

Popular Restaurant Makes Specialty Of Sea Foods, French Cooking

Frenchie's No. 1 cafe at 202 South Grand street has been established 14 years and during that time has built up a reputation for excellent French cooking that is unsurpassed here.

"Frenchie" Mouton is an artist of the kitchen. He received his early training in the old established restaurants in New Orleans and has worked with famous chefs since he was 12 years old.

Fourteen years ago Frenchie came to Monroe and set the style for real French cooking. Ever since he opened his cafe at the present location he has established a reputation among judges of good food in the city and has built up a large clientele among epicures.

By special arrangement with seafood wholesalers in New Orleans, Frenchie is able to serve oysters and all manner of shell fish and sea food in less than 12 hours from the time which they are caught in the gulf and packed in the Crescent City for shipment. In fact, Frenchie states that delivery from New Orleans to his larders here seldom takes more than eight hours.

In discussing sea food Frenchie points out that the public has an erroneous impression that oysters may not be eaten in any month spelled without the letter "R." Oysters which are fresh may be eaten all the year, he claims. Oysters served at Frenchie's No. 1 cafe are always fresh and may be enjoyed throughout the hot as well as the cool months.

Besides French cooking, which includes special gumboes and other similar dishes so popular in the southern part of the state, Frenchie serves the finest K. C. steaks and all American dishes.

FEDERAL AGENCY PROVES POPULAR

New Collection Bureau Giving Assistance To Business Firms

The Federal Collection Agency with offices at 221 Bernhardt building was recently established by George L. Spiro and is designed to meet a special situation and to give assistance to Monroe business men in the collection of outstanding accounts.

In explaining the purposes of his agency Mr. Spiro declared that his agency conducts its business by personal contact only and does not use either the mails or the telephone in securing payment or adjustment of outstanding accounts.

"Before establishing the Federal Collection Agency I made a special survey of the business situation in this territory," Mr. Spiro said. "I contacted the leading business concerns here and explained my system of collection. I was assured of their wholehearted cooperation and in return promised to contact, personally, all delinquent accounts. Since starting the agency I have secured payment on debts which otherwise would have been lost. It is the policy of the agency to treat each individual debtor with the utmost courtesy but at the same time insisting on settlement of all legitimate debts."

ODOM HARDWARE SERVES MONROE

Large Clientele Built Up By Noah Odom During Past Eight Years

The Odom Hardware store at 510 DeSiard street handles a complete assortment of hardware supplies and tools, and caters especially to the country demands.

Noah Odom has been in the hardware business for eight years and states that during that time he has enjoyed a consistent demand, building up a large clientele because of the quality of merchandise which he handles.

"When I first went into the hardware business I knew very little about it, but I felt that if I stocked nationally advertised merchandise, gave service and was satisfied with a reasonable profit, I could not possibly go wrong," Mr. Odom said.

The success of his enterprise has fully justified his philosophy and although he does not claim to do the largest volume of business in the city, he is satisfied to keep his old customers and add new ones who are attracted to the store by the friendly service which Mr. Odom gives.

Besides a complete line of hardware, the Odom Hardware store stocks electric fans, glassware, fishing tackle and other lines which are always in demand by the country and city customer.

Probably the earliest mention of the egg as food is found in the Book of Job. In Job 6:6 it is said: "Is there any taste in the white of an egg?"

ELECTRIC MAID PLANS NEW SHOP

Most Elaborate Baker, Restaurant And Cafeteria Under Construction

The most elaborate combination bakery, restaurant and cafeteria in Monroe will be featured by the Electrik Maid Bake Shop in the Masonic building at the corner of North Fourth and DeSiard streets.

The Electrik Maid Bake Shop will open up at its new home in about a month.

Gus K. Primos is a pioneer in the bakery and restaurant business. He came to Monroe seven years ago and opened the Electrik Maid Bake Shop on DeSiard street, across the street from the new location.

During that time Mr. Primos has not only built up a substantial business but has made a host of friends. It is because of his increased patronage that he ventures in establishing in Monroe what will undoubtedly be one of the finest locations of its kind in the state.

The new premises will consist of a bakery department, a regular lunch counter, private booths, private dining rooms with a capacity of 100, a restaurant department with 100 seats and also a cafeteria department, and a cigar and cigarette counter.

Everything will be electrically refrigerated and all electrical equipment will be concealed. The interior decorations will be elaborate and the roof will be patterned after the roof of the Louisiana state capitol building at Baton Rouge.

H. H. Land, Monroe architect, drew up the plans and is in charge of construction while the contract for the alterations is in the hands of W. C. Salley, local contractor.

A European engineer is said to have spent four months constructing the world's smallest steam engine. The size of an ordinary pen nib, the engine is composed of 18 pieces of steel and silver, and its boiler holds one-half drop of water.

WRESTLING ROYAL SIGNED FOR STADIUM SHOW

Bashara, League, Cochrane, Wagner And Berger Are Participants

A wrestling royal, with five grapplers occupying the ring at one time, will be dished up for the entertainment of fans at Roosevelt stadium Tuesday night. The participants in the merry mixup will be Jack League, Ellis Bashara, Bob Wagner, George Cochrane and Cy Berger. All five are leading grapplers and should provide plenty of action.

The plan is this: The first two to be eliminated in the wrestling royal will meet in the regular two-out-of-three falls semi-final match, having a one-hour time limit. The next two eliminated will meet in the main event, also a two-out-of-three falls match, with a two-hour time limit. The winner of the wrestling royal will get the honor, if any, of refereeing the two matches. The promoters figure the winner should get the easiest job as a reward, although in most of the matches here the referee works as hard as the wrestlers.

All of the participants are well known here, although Cochrane and Berger haven't appeared at the stadium in several months and League made his local debut last week.

Cochrane, a clever grappler who used plenty of rough stuff, is a colorful performer who packed 'em in when he was a regular contributor to the weekly entertainment. He's a veteran who knows all the tricks of the trade and who has built up a large following throughout the southwest and middle west. He usually wrestles without shoes and uses his powerful legs to good advantage.

League showed plenty of ability in his first appearance here last week and local fans expressed a desire to see him work again. He's strictly a scientific grappler, although he can use his fists when the other fellow takes advantage of him. Berger also is a good showman who puts lots of color in his work.

Wagner is a tough looking former Illinois university football star whose wrestling tactics are as tough as he looks. Bashara, the Oklahoma "bad man," has been a regular feature of stadium shows for the past couple of months and he always packs plenty of punch in his efforts.

Regardless of the amount of actual wrestling that's done in the wrestling royal, the fans should see plenty of action with Bashara, Wagner and Cochrane in the ring at the same time. There's usually a lot of "ganging up" in one of those affairs and one or two of the tough guys are likely to find the rest of the gang out to give them a real trimming. Monroe's first wrestling royal was staged several months ago and the fans apparently got quite a kick out of it.

Promoter Phillip Lisotta announced that there would be no advance in admission prices.

The show is slated to get under way at 8:30 o'clock.

GIANTS WIN AGAIN

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 8.—(AP)—The New York Giants won their sixth straight victory today, as Carl Hubbell turned in his 16th pitching conquest of the season, letting the Phillies down with seven hits for a 3 to 2 decision.

The triumph was the Giants' 19th in their last 23 starts.

Hubbell scored the winning run in the seventh, when he singled and came home on consecutive singles by Joe Moore and Burgess Whitehead. The Giants' other two runs were counted in the first on Joe Moore's single, Mel Ott's triple and Jim Ripple's long fly.

BEES TRIM DODGERS

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—(AP)—Van Lingle Mungo ran into his usual hard luck today, and received his customary weak support as the Bees belted the Brooklyn Dodgers 4 to 2 in the opener of their current series.

Mungo fanned nine men in the six innings he worked, and allowed but eight hits altogether, but his mates were unable to hit with men on the bases, although they outhit the Bees 11 to 8.

Wally Berger hit his 19th homer of the season in the sixth.

GUARD TO PLAY IN TITLE SERIES

First Of City League Championship Playoffs Slated Wednesday

The National Guard team will compete in the City league championship series after all.

Following the announcement yesterday that the Guardsmen would pass up their series with the Adler team because most of the players would be in camp at Alexandria, it was found that the number remaining in Monroe would be sufficient to form a team. Dr. W. L. Bendel, captain in charge of the medical detachment of the Guard, said he would send two or three players back here for the games.

Consequently, the Guardsmen and the Adler Garagemen will start their series Wednesday afternoon, at the Plum street diamond. The Cooperative Dairy and Monroe Hardware, second and fourth place teams, also will play the first game of their series Wednesday, at the Missouri Pacific diamond. Both games will start at 5:15 p. m.

The winners of two games in each series will advance to the finals for the league championship.

The second game of the semi-final playoffs will be played Friday afternoon, with the Cooperative Dairy-Monroe Hardware game at Plum street and the National Guard-Adler contest at the Missouri Pacific field. The third game, if necessary, will be played Sunday, it was announced.

E. S. Eby, manager of the Cooperative Dairy team, announced yesterday that his club will play a game with the Slagle-Johnson Lumber company team at Barkdull Faulk diamond, starting at 3 o'clock, today.

Gene Daspit, acting manager of the National Guard team, announced that the squad would work out Monday afternoon in preparation for the Adler series.

INTERNATIONAL BASEBALL FEDERATION ORGANIZED

BERLIN, Aug. 8.—(AP)—With 16 nations in addition to Hawaii registered as charter members, the first world's international baseball federation was completed today.

Honorary presidents of the federation are to be picked from the United States and Japan. Frank Matsumata, Japanese sports leader, was named executive secretary-treasurer, and Dinty Dennis, sports editor of the Miami, Fla., Herald was named assistant secretary.

International headquarters will be in Miami for the next four years.

The executive president and an honorary president will also be Americans, who, with a Japanese honorary president, will be named within the next few months.

The organizations board of 13 governors included Arturo Vives, Mexico City; Pedro Yera, Lima, Peru; Jose Camps, Barcelona, Spain; Steere Moda, Honolulu, and Regina Ylanan, Manila.

Other nations are Egypt, Belgium, China, France, England, Holland, India, Canada, Sweden, and Germany.

Leslie Mann, manager of the American baseball team from Miami, Fla., and Dennis, accepted an invitation to take the American amateur baseball team to Japan next summer. A similar invitation will be extended to Hawaiians for a Japanese-American-Hawaiian series.

New Orleans Shotmaker Takes Early Lead For Smashing Victory

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Freddie Haas of New Orleans, 20-year-old holder of the United States intercollegiate crown, was entirely too good around the greens for 22-year-old Bobby Reith of Winnipeg today and scored a smashing 8 and 7 victory to win the Canadian amateur golf championship.

Freddie Haas

The New Orleans shotmaker started out with a dazzling array of pars and birdies, gained a six-hole lead on the first round of the 36-hole final and coasted through on the strength of his expert approaching and putting. He was consistently outdriven, often as much as 20 yards, by the Winnipeg youngster but made it up around the greens.

Haas, conqueror of the defending champion, C. Ross (Sandy) Somerville in yesterday's semi-final, failed to equal his par smashing feats of the earlier rounds but he shot a two-over-par 75 on the morning round and was over only once in the eleven holes of the afternoon round. A costly seven on the fifth hole, the only one he lost on the first nine, was largely responsible for Freddie's failure to equal perfect figures.

The New Orleans ace was one under par for the first four holes of the morning round, carding a birdie three on the 284 yard third, and led three up. On the fifth he sliced out of bounds, dropped his second ball into long grass short of the green and took a seven while Bobby was down in five.

Taking the seventh and eighth with pars, Haas reached the turn in 38, four up, while Reith needed 41 strokes. On the short eleventh Haas was over par again, missing a two footer, but he made that up with a birdie on the long 14th.

Reith won two holes on the outgoing nine in the afternoon round but he had to break par each time to do it, carding a three on the first hole and a deuce on the eighth. In between Freddie won three holes and and he took the ninth to go eight up. He halved the next two holes to end the match.

EVANGELINE LEAGUE

(By Associated Press)

Behind the air-tight hurling of Quinn Lee, the Alexandria Aces lengthened their Evangeline league lead Saturday to seven full games over the second place Opelousas Indians. Lee held the Indians to four hits and a brace of runs while his mates nicked Moore for nine safeties and five runs.

Bradshaw had the edge over Montalvo in another pitching battle in which Abbeville downed Lake Charles 4 to 3.

The Jeanerette Blues rapped the offerings of two Rayne hurlers for a 12-6 win, while New Iberia eked out a 7-6 victory over the Lafayette White Sox in the other league game.

FAVORITES WIN IN EASTERN NET MEET

RYE, N. Y., Aug. 8.—(AP)—The Eastern Grass Courts tennis championships opened today with 24 first round matches played in the men's and women's singles and not a surprise in the lot.

Headed by Don Budge, the flaming thatched Davis Cup star from Oakland, Calif., and Bryan "Bitsy" Grant Atlanta's "mighty mite" in the men's division and Mrs. Mary Greef Harris of Kansas City and Norma Taubele in the women's, the favorites came through without the loss of a set.

Budge, top-seeded, blasted Marion Reese of Atlanta off the court, 6-1, 6-0. It was the first singles match since his return from the Wimbledon tourney.

Grant had a somewhat harder struggle against Edward De Gray of Brooklyn but won out 6-4, 6-1. Other seeded stars came through as easily.

Mrs. Harris, seeded fourth, was the top-ranking woman player in action and she had no trouble defeating Alice Burrage, Easthampton, N. Y., 6-0, 6-0. Other feminine favorites, including Elizabeth Blackman of Detroit, Mrs. Lila Porter of Mobile, Ala., Eunice Dean, Dallas, Tex., Miss Tauble and Helen Fulton of Chicago, won their opening matches in straight sets.

FRANKIE PARKER TAKES 3RD MEADOW CLUB TITLE

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Frankie Parker, 20-year-old racquet wielder of Spring Lake, N. J., and Milwaukee, added the valued Meadow club singles trophy to his list of permanent possessions today when he routed Gregory Mangin of Newark, N. J., 1-6, 6-1, 6-2, 6-0, in the final.

Then he hooked up with the loser to capture the doubles title from the national clay courts champions, Robert Riggs and Wayne Sabin of Los Angeles, 11-13, 3-6, 7-5, 8-6, 6-1.

It was the third straight triumph for the New Jersey schoolboy in the men's singles but as a major conquest it didn't amount to much outside of his winning permanently the trophy which has been sought in the past by most of America's tennis greats.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Wood of New York won the mixed doubles event, going through two three-set matches to capture the trophy.

SCHMELING ARRIVES FOR BATTLE WITH BRADDOCK

LAKEHURST, N. J., Aug. 8.—(AP)—Max Schmeling, former heavyweight champion from Germany, returned to America aboard the zeppelin Hindenburg today to prepare for his 15-round bout with Jimmy Braddock, current holder of the title, in September.

Schmeling, apparently in good condition, said he was feeling fine but was anxious to begin his training. He pointed out that Braddock's defense would be somewhat stronger than Louis' and hence he would need more preparation.

Max was still undecided about the location of his training camp although he favors Speculator, N. Y. He now weighs 194 pounds, close to his fighting weight.

WARREN BASEBALL PLAYER BREAKS LEG AT CROSSETT

CROSSETT, Ark., Aug. 8.—(Special)—Spence Woodard, third baseman of the Warren Lumberjacks of the Southeast Arkansas league, broke two bones in his leg just below the knee in a game with Crossett here today. Madden of Crossett slid into third base in the fifth inning to put Woodard in a Crossett hospital.

Crossett won, 6 to 3.

in one half game of Cleveland in second place in the American league today by defeating the Indians, 9 to 7.

Vernon Kennedy, White Sox pitcher, gave the Indians 15 hits. It was his 15th victory of the season.

It was the fourth straight defeat for Mel Harder, Cleveland's ace pitcher, and the fifth consecutive time he has retired from a game under fire. The White Sox batted around, scoring four runs, in the fifth.

The Indians started a rally in the ninth, but were able to score only two runs on four hits and a walk. Earl Averill, outfielder, led the Cleveland attack with five singles.

DETROIT, Aug. 8.—(AP)—The Tigers and the Browns divided a doubleheader here today, Detroit winning the first game 9 to 7 and St. Louis the second one 10 to 5 before a crowd of 39,000.

Gerald Walker, Tiger outfielder, drove in eight runs, hitting two home runs, three doubles and a single and drawing a base on balls during the two games. He won the first game almost single handed, driving in seven of Detroit's nine runs.

In the nightcap the Browns fell on Schoolboy Rowe and drove him from the box in the eighth inning.

Parker Converts Guard Into Signal Barker On Centenary Team

SHREVEPORT, La., Aug. 8.—(Special)—"There," observed Curtis Parker, as he surveyed the paint-smeared figure of Walter (Cowboy) Hohmann, "is your quarterback."

Meaning, necessarily, Centenary's quarterback.

Without thought of the possible consequences of a daring experiment that will convert a guard into a back, and the back into a signal-barker, Coach Parker declared himself on the point with a degree of emphasis that brooked no demurring arguments by revealing without any qualifying ifs, ands and buts that the Chicago cowhand will function in that capacity in the fall of 1936.

Hohmann is currently engaged with Trainer "Hoot" Gibson and "Boots," the club valet, in the fatiguing, though muscle-building task of applying a freshening coat of paint to the steel work of the grandstand. Although his appearance suggested a degree of wonderment, he insisted that most of the paint was going on the stands. It's part-time labor for the colorful Centenary ace, for he is simultaneously holding down three other jobs as an outward manifestation of his industry.

"Yes, sir," Parker repeated, "there's your quarterback. The search is over and Hohmann's elected. Capable, resourceful, aggressive, smart—he combines all of the desired qualities, so why hunt any farther? I grant you that the daring nature of an experiment that will place a man inexperienced in quarterbacking ways in such an important position in his first season as a back has impressed me, but I have scanned the entire field of prospects and I am certain that we will not go wrong by turning over the field direction of the club to the cowboy."

COTTON

New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 8.—(AP)—Cotton prices slipped off a few points today in quiet dealings while the trade awaited the government crop estimate. Activity was limited.

The market opened a few points lower, recovered and then sold off in the final minutes of trading.

October ended the session seven points lower at 11.92, December and January were off eight points at 11.92.

The majority of today's business was evening up operations preparatory to the first official crop estimate announcement by the government, which came after the market closed.

The northwest remained dry and temperatures were around normal.

Exports today were 2,309 bales.

New York

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—(AP)—Final evening up in preparation for the government crop report occurred within a comparatively narrow range of prices in cotton today.

Opening declines in response to relatively easy cables were just about recovered on trade buying and prebureau covering with December closing at 12 cents. The general market ended steady, net four points lower to one point higher.

The government report, placing the condition of the crop at 72.3, the indicated production at 199.7 per acre and the indicated crop at 12,481,000 bales was within the range, but above the average of private crop indications, which pointed to slightly over 12,000,000 bales. It compared with the average expectation of New York cotton exchange members as indicated by a recent canvass of 12,118,000 bales. The amount of cotton reported ginned prior to August 1 was 41,130 running bales compared wtih 94,346 last year.

NEW YORK STOCKS

By Victor Eubank
(Associated Press Financial Writer)

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—(AP)—Gains of fractions to more than two points were widely scattered through the stock market in the final minutes of a rather busy week-end session today.

Most issues held around best levels of the renewed advance, although buying tapered in the second hour. The close was firm, turnover approximated 750,000 shares.

Drouth seemed to have lost much of its hold as a restraining influence upon bullish sentiment. Instead brokers emphasized the abundance of favorable industrial news in the last month and indications that recovery had lost little, if any, of its vigor.

The domestic business picture also was given precedence over the European situation, with its tension from the Spanish civil war.

Weight attached to industrial developments at home was evident in brisk demand for rails, electric equipment, steel, utility and an assortment of selected industrial shares.

Chart-readers found a bullish technical signal in the rise of leading rail shares to new peaks for the year, among them New York Central, Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, and Santa Fe. The leadership of these rails and old-line industrials like General Electric and Westinghouse Electric, both of which sold at new highs, was considered impressive in some commission house quarters.

Allied Chemical expanded its gains sharply. Leading copper shares traded around best prices of the year as firm export quotations for the metal were taken as indication of good foreign demand, partly traceable to war preparations.

Can shares rallied from a break earlier in the week when drouth losses raised prospects of a smaller pack of some farm products. Both American Can and Continental sold up more than a point at one time. Packing shares also were in demand at higher prices.

Strong spots included Western Union, Gulf States Steel, United States Steel, North American, Johns-Manville and Sears Roebuck. Motor shares did little in face of the industry's move to curtail operations in preparation for new models.

FORD CARS PASS OBSTACLE TEST

Motor caravans now being operated across 1,200 miles of desert waste in China provide one of the most impressive illustrations of man's ability to overcome natural obstacles to travel.

Mail, passengers and freight are transported by the caravans between Suiyuan province, 350 miles northwest of Tientsin, and the more remote Sinkiang province, in Chinese Turkestan, to the west. This "Sin Sui" line, maintained by the Sinkiang Suiyuan Automobile Transportation Co., is the only practical connecting link between Suiyuan province and the interior.

Sandstorms and blizzards must be battled by caravan vehicles, running on well-nigh impossible surfaces. There is travel one day across and through the ice of a desert stream, the next day on sand, and the following day on sand blanketed with six inches of snow. Progress is sometimes limited to 60 miles a day, and often a driver cannot shift into high gear more than three or four times in nine hours of driving.

The caravans, comprising 12 Ford cars, leave the line's east and west terminals simultaneously, passing in mid-desert. They are usually en route for 12 to 14 days. In that time the only habitations seen are infrequent, lone huts of felt and wood frame.

Drivers and passengers look like creatures from another world, for they must be bundled in voluminous garmen's for protection against the severe cold. Overnight stops are made wherever nightfall finds them, and all caravan members prepare their tents and bedrolls. The ground may be coated with snow or ice, but there is no choice of sleeping quarters.

The Chinese crew displays an amazing esprit de corps in the face of grave difficulties. The Sin Sui route follows the Hami road which, while it is the longest single highway in the world, has never seen a grader or other road-improvement device. Snowdrifts frequently halt the lead car, but shovel-wielding drivers and truckers toss them aside speedily, and the Fords push on, loaded high with every imaginable article traded in by the peoples of Suiyuan and Sinkiang. Despite chilled hands and sand-stung eyes, the Chinese mechanics are rarely halted more than 10 or 15 minutes when breakdowns occur.

While the Sin Sui line has on regular schedule two 12-car caravans, it has ready for use more than 20 other desert-going Fords, for emergency trips are often necessary.

One of the line's few touches of provincialism is experienced by westbound passengers. They must devote their attentions to the telegraph wires until they procure from Sheng Shih-tsai, governor of Sinkiang, his permission to enter his province. None may make such entrance without the governor's personal approval.

ONE OF POPULAR OLDSMOBILE MODELS

ECONOMY OF PONTIAC THOROUGHLY PROVEN

First prize out of a field of 10,400 contestants in a national economy contest recently conducted by the Pontiac Motor company went to Miss Francis Reifer of Oshkosh, Wis., it was announced by A. V. Grega, Pontiac dealer in this area.

The average mileage obtained by all contestants in this contest was 23.8 miles per gallon, which it was stated by Mr. Grego was particularly interesting in view of the fact that it was only 1-10 of a mile less per gallon than the 23.9 mileage figure which was attained by a Pontiac in taking first place in its weight class in the recent official Gilmore economy run from Los Angeles to the Yosemite valley under AAA supervision. "The fact that 10,400 different drivers under a variety of driving conditions came so close to approaching this figure is remarkable evidence of Pontiac's unusual economy," he stated.

Mr. Grego, president of the local Pontiac dealership, stated that a number of people entered the contest here.

TASTY FOODS AT FRENCHIE'S NO. 1

Popular Restaurant Makes Specialty Of Sea Foods, French Cooking

Frenchie's No. 1 cafe at 202 South Grand street has been established 14 years and during that time has built up a reputation for excellent French cooking that is unsurpassed here.

"Frenchie" Mouton is an artist of the kitchen. He received his early training in the old established restaurants in New Orleans and has worked with famous chefs since he was 12 years old.

Fourteen years ago Frenchie came to Monroe and set the style for real French cooking. Ever since he opened his cafe at the present location he has established a reputation among judges of good food in the city and has built up a large clientele among epicures.

By special arrangement with seafood wholesalers in New Orleans, Frenchie is able to serve oysters and all manner of shell fish and sea food in less than 12 hours from the time which they are caught in the gulf and packed in the Crescent City for shipment. In fact, Frenchie states that delivery from New Orleans to his larders here seldom takes more than eight hours.

In discussing sea food Frenchie points out that the public has an erroneous impression that oysters may not be eaten in any month spelled without the letter "R." Oysters which are fresh may be eaten all the year, he claims. Oysters served at Frenchie's No. 1 cafe are always fresh and may be enjoyed throughout the hot as well as the cool months.

Besides French cooking, which includes special gumboes and other similar dishes so popular in the southern part of the state, Frenchie serves the finest K. C. steaks and all American dishes.

FEDERAL AGENCY PROVES POPULAR

New Collection Bureau Giving Assistance To Business Firms

The Federal Collection Agency with offices at 221 Bernhardt building was recently established by George L. Spiro and is designed to meet a special situation and to give assistance to Monroe business men in the collection of outstanding accounts.

In explaining the purposes of his agency Mr. Spiro declared that his agency conducts its business by personal contact only and does not use either the mails or the telephone in securing payment or adjustment of outstanding accounts.

"Before establishing the Federal Collection Agency I made a special survey of the business situation in this territory," Mr. Spiro said. "I contacted the leading business concerns here and explained my system of collection. I was assured of their wholehearted cooperation and in return promised to contact, personally, all delinquent accounts. Since starting the agency I have secured payment on debts which otherwise would have been lost. It is the policy of the agency to treat each individual debtor with the utmost courtesy but at the same time insisting on settlement of all legitimate debts."

ODOM HARDWARE SERVES MONROE

The Odom Hardware store at 510 DeSiard street handles a complete assortment of hardware supplies and tools, and caters especially to the country demands.

Noah Odom has been in the hardware business for eight years and states that during that time he has enjoyed a consistent demand, building up a large clientele because of the quality of merchandise which he handles.

"When I first went into the hardware business I knew very little about it, but I felt that if I stocked nationally advertised merchandise, gave service and was satisfied with a reasonable profit, I could not possibly go wrong," Mr. Odom said.

The success of his enterprise has fully justified his philosophy and although he does not claim to do the largest volume of business in the city, he is satisfied to keep his old customers and add new ones who are attracted to the store by the friendly service which Mr. Odom gives.

Besides a complete line of hardware, the Odom Hardware store stocks electric fans, glassware, fishing tackle and other lines which are always in demand by the country and city customer.

Probably the earliest mention of the egg as food is found in the Book of Job. In Job 6:6 it is said: "Is there any taste in the white of an egg?"

ELECTRIC MAID PLANS NEW SHOP

Most Elaborate Baker, Restaurant And Cafeteria Under Construction

The most elaborate combination bakery, restaurant and cafeteria in Monroe will be featured by the Electrik Maid Bake Shop in the Masonic building at the corner of North Fourth and DeSiard streets.

The Electrik Maid Bake Shop will open up at its new home in about a month.

Gus K. Primos is a pioneer in the bakery and restaurant business. He came to Monroe seven years ago and opened the Electrik Maid Bake Shop on DeSiard street, across the street from the new location.

During that time Mr. Primos has not only built up a substantial business but has made a host of friends. It is because of his increased patronage that he ventures in establishing in Monroe what will undoubtedly be one of the finest locations of its kind in the state.

The new premises will consist of a bakery department, a regular lunch counter, private booths, private dining rooms with a capacity of 100, a restaurant department with 100 seats and also a cafeteria department, and a cigar and cigarette counter.

Everything will be electrically refrigerated and all electrical equipment will be concealed. The interior decorations will be elaborate and the roof will be patterned after the roof of the Louisiana state capitol building at Baton Rouge.

H. H. Land, Monroe architect, drew up the plans and is in charge of construction while the contract for the alterations is in the hands of W. C. Salley, local contractor.

A European engineer is said to have spent four months constructing the world's smallest steam engine. The size of an ordinary pen nib, the engine is composed of 18 pieces of steel and silver, and its boiler holds one-half drop of water.

Wild ostriches can run 50 to 60 miles an hour for short distances.

PULLMANS TRAVEL NUMEROUS MILES

Wandering Tale Of One Car Reads Like Story Written By Jules Verne

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 8.—(Special)—Th wandering tale of a peripatetic Pullman car reads like a Jules Verne story.

According to Harry G. Taylor, chairman of the Western Association of Railway executives, one Pullman car traveld 149,784 miles in one year.

The moon is 238,840 miles from the earth. Pullmans in 1935 made each day a run equal to 4.1 round trips to that frigid sphere. Astronomers tell us the sun is 92 million miles distant. It's a long long trail, but Pullmans covered it 8.2 times last year.

Taking one sample car as a test of the miles covered by one unit, the Pullman company found that it traveled very near from one end of the country to the other and endured almost every extreme of temperature.

In March, the car toured from Miami to Toronto, from New York to Los Angeles with temperatures ranging from six degrees below zero in Toronto to 96 degrees in Miami.

The workings of the Pullman car pool were explained in the report to the executives' association.

Requirements of the various railroads vary enormously according to the season of the year, the report stated. One road used only 24 cars daily in October, but required 104 daily in February. Another used 96 daily in August and 227 in March.

Another western road got along nicely on 46 daily cars in March, but in August during the vacation season needed to call for 104 cars daily.

Thus the Pullman company has a pool where cars are kept in reserve for the uses of the various railroads during their peak season.

The typical Pullman car is in service about 309 days of the year with 59 days spent either in idleness or in the car shops. While this particular car was covering over 146,000 miles in one year, the average distance traveled by one of the cars was in the neighborhood of 116,500 miles.

MAN JAILED FOR ALLEGED ATTACK, ROBBERY IN 1935

Accused of attacking and robbing J. R. Bandy, 65, West Monroe houseboat dweller, on June 4 of last year, Lonnie Jones, 34, was arrested by the sheriff's department yesterday and placed in the parish jail. Jones was arrested at a houseboat at LaZarre's point after he was said to have returned here from Texas.

Jones is charged with beating Bandy and robbing him of some clothes and groceries.

Avoid excessive application of oil to the generator and starter; it may leave a film on the commutator, eventually causing trouble. One or two drops at each oiling will suffice.

MRS. T. W. SHANNON WINNER OF RADIO

She is one of the 1,470 winners in the Camay—RCA Victor contest who are receiving beautiful new RCA Victor radio instruments as prizes. The prize set was delivered yesterday by the Standard Office Supply company, well known local RCA Victor dealers. They remarked that the winner seemed hardly able to believe her good fortune until the set was actually brought in and began to pour out a flood of music.

In no time at all the family of the prize-winner had learned how easy it is to operate these instruments, and listen to police radio cars, airplanes, and weather reports which are so easy to get with such a set. They joined the winner in celebrating her good luck which benefitted them all. The prize was awarded for writing one of the best entries submitted in competition sponsored by the makers of Camay soap.

MAD DOGS BITE TWELVE PERSONS

Attacks Made During Past Week Bring Total For Year Up To 69

Making a total of 69 such cases handled by the Ouachita parish health unit during the present year, 12 persons began taking anti-rabic treatment at the unit offices in the city hall during the past week. Forty-four of the cases were taken up by the unit since June 1.

Dr. G. Douglas Williams, director of the unit, in commenting on the treatment of rabies, said:

"When an individual is bitten by a dog suspected of having rabies, the wound should be cauterized immediately with fuming nitric acid. The dog should not be killed, but should be securely confined. The health unit should be notified immediately.

"If no definite symptoms of rabies develop within two weeks, it is evident that the dog did not have rabies and it is not necessary for the person who was bitten to take the anti-rabic treatment. However, if the dog develops symptoms which cause suspicion of rabies, the anti-rabic treatment should be started at once.

"The reason for not killing the dog immediately after the animal bites a person is that the disease may not be far enough advanced at that time for a laboratory examination of the brain and cord tissue to show a positive diagnosis of rabies.

"Furthermore, if the dog does have rabies, it will die within a few days.

BOND OUTLINES TECH PROGRESS

Advancement Of Institution Set Forth By Retiring President

RUSTON, La., Aug. 8.—(Special)—Taking inventory of Louisiana Tech, G. W. Bond, retiring president of the college, compares the institution of eight years ago with that of the present and cites needs for the future in a 36-page booklet just printed. The pamphlet, containing many tables of statistics and discussions of virtually all phases of the college, is entitled "Eight Years of Progress."

President Bond resigned several weeks ago, effective on September 1, and will continue work on a doctor's degree at Columbia university the coming school year. His successor is expected to be appointed by the state board of education in the near future.

In the introduction to the booklet, President Bond points out that "every business enterprise, whether run for profit or on a non-profit basis, should take stock and determine whether or not it is justifying its costs and returning to the stockholders value received for its expenditures. A college is no exception to this rule, and after eight years of the present administration of Louisiana Polytechnic institute it is well to review the progress that has been made over the whole period so that interested friends of the institution may know something of its development."

Instead of "heavy obligations and an empty treasury," a condition existing when the 1928-29 session opened, the new president of Louisiana Tech will find "a substantial balance in both the maintenance and boarding departments," according to the published report. A table shows a present balance of $80,437.89, including $11,730.75 in the maintenance and boarding departments and $68,707.14 remaining in the fund paid as fire insurance after the old administration hall burned last January. The indebtedness eight years ago was about the same as the present balance, it is said.

Listing all members of the faculty with their degrees and graduate work done, the pamphlet states that it has been "the policy of the institution to increase the efficiency of the faculty whenever possible by filling vacancies with teachers having more training and by encouraging teachers to work for advanced degrees. The number of teachers with doctor's degrees has increased from three to six and the number with the master's degree has increased from 28 to 38. At the same time there has been a decrease from 35 to 22 in the number holding the bachelor's degree."

Discussing the student body, President Bond shows that "enrollment in the college department has gradually increased for the past several years. . . . Comparable to the increase in the student body has been the increase in the number of graduates turned out year by year. Between 1929 and 1936 there has been an increase of 118 per cent in the number of students receiving degrees. During this period the increase in enrollment has been approximately 40 per cent. The increase in the number of graduates over the increase in enrollment (in percentages) indicates that the college is holding its students better and more are continuing in school until they finish work on degrees."

From 1929 to 1936, there has been a considerable reduction in both scholastic and disciplinary suspensions of students, the report relates, which implies "a more serious-minded and industrious attitude on the part of the whole student body."

Mentioning future requirements for the college, President Bond refers to an infirmary, dining hall and kitchen, new barns and more farm land for the agriculture department, a recreational building for student welfare, an addition to the girls' gymnasium and the football stadium, and a swimming pool. There is also need for "at least seven well-trained teachers" to be added, a necessity that "should perhaps take precedence over all of the additions to the plant," the bulletin concludes.

TRANSIENTS SENTENCED ON DISTURBANCE CHARGE

Convicted in the West Monroe city court Saturday morning on state charges of disturbing the peace at a West Monroe tourist camp, Geoffrey Rayner, C. A. Ketchum and O. A. Armstrong, said to be travelers from Mississippi and Alabama, were sentenced to 10 days in the parish jail. The three men were placed in the jail following the court session.

COTTON

New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 8.—(AP)—Cotton prices slipped off a few points today in quiet dealings while the trade awaited the government crop estimate. Activity was limited.

The market opened a few points lower, recovered and then sold off in the final minutes of trading.

October ended the session seven points lower at 11.92, December and January were off eight points at 11.92.

The majority of today's business was evening up operations preparatory to the first official crop estimate announcement by the government, which came after the market closed.

The northwest remained dry and temperatures were around normal.

Exports today were 2,309 bales.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—(AP)—Final evening up in preparation for the government crop report occurred within a comparatively narrow range of prices in cotton today.

Opening declines in response to relatively easy cables were just about recovered on trade buying and prebureau covering with December closing at 12 cents. The general market ended steady, net four points lower to one point higher.

The government report, placing the condition of the crop at 72.3, the indicated production at 199.7 per acre and the indicated crop at 12,481,000 bales was within the range, but above the average of private crop indications, which pointed to slightly over 12,000,000 bales. It compared with the average expectation of New York cotton exchange members as indicated by a recent canvass of 12,118,000 bales. The amount of cotton reported ginned prior to August 1 was 41,130 running bales compared wtih 94,346 last year.

IN A HURRY

NEW YORK STOCKS

By Victor Eubank
(Associated Press Financial Writer)

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—(AP)—Gains of fractions to more than two points were widely scattered through the stock market in the final minutes of a rather busy week-end session today.

Most issues held around best levels of the renewed advance, although buying tapered in the second hour. The close was firm, turnover approximated 750,000 shares.

Drouth seemed to have lost much of its hold as a restraining influence upon bullish sentiment. Instead brokers emphasized the abundance of favorable industrial news in the last month and indications that recovery had lost little, if any, of its vigor.

The domestic business picture also was given precedence over the European situation, with its tension from the Spanish civil war.

Weight attached to industrial developments at home was evident in brisk demand for rails, electric equipment, steel, utility and an assortment of selected industrial shares.

Chart-readers found a bullish technical signal in the rise of leading rail shares to new peaks for the year, among them New York Central, Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, and Santa Fe. The leadership of these rails and old-line industrials like General Electric and Westinghouse Electric, both of which sold at new highs, was considered impressive in some commission house quarters.

Allied Chemical expanded its gains sharply. Leading copper shares traded around best prices of the year as firm export quotations for the metal were taken as indication of good foreign demand, partly traceable to war preparations.

Can shares rallied from a break earlier in the week when drouth losses raised prospects of a smaller pack of some farm products. Both American Can and Continental sold up more than a point at one time. Packing shares also were in demand at higher prices.

Strong spots included Western Union, Gulf States Steel, United States Steel, North American, Johns-Manville and Sears Roebuck. Motor shares did little in face of the industry's move to curtail operations in preparation for new models.

PULLMANS TRAVEL NUMEROUS MILES

Wandering Tale Of One Car Reads Like Story Written By Jules Verne

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 8.—(Special)—Th wandering tale of a peripatetic Pullman car reads like a Jules Verne story.

According to Harry G. Taylor, chairman of the Western Association of Railway executives, one Pullman car traveld 149,784 miles in one year.

The moon is 238,840 miles from the earth. Pullmans in 1935 made each day a run equal to 4.1 round trips to that frigid sphere. Astronomers tell us the sun is 92 million miles distant. It's a long long trail, but Pullmans covered it 8.2 times last year.

Taking one sample car as a test of the miles covered by one unit, the Pullman company found that it traveled very near from one end of the country to the other and endured almost every extreme of temperature.

In March, the car toured from Miami to Toronto, from New York to Los Angeles with temperatures ranging from six degrees below zero in Toronto to 96 degrees in Miami.

The workings of the Pullman car pool were explained in the report to the executives' association.

Requirements of the various railroads vary enormously according to the season of the year, the report stated. One road used only 24 cars daily in October, but required 104 daily in February. Another used 96 daily in August and 227 in March.

Another western road got along nicely on 46 daily cars in March, but in August during the vacation season needed to call for 104 cars daily.

Thus the Pullman company has a pool where cars are kept in reserve for the uses of the various railroads during their peak season.

The typical Pullman car is in service about 309 days of the year with 59 days spent either in idleness or in the car shops. While this particular car was covering over 146,000 miles in one year, the average distance traveled by one of the cars was in the neighborhood of 116,500 miles.

MAN JAILED FOR ALLEGED ATTACK, ROBBERY IN 1935

Accused of attacking and robbing J. R. Bandy, 65, West Monroe houseboat dweller, on June 4 of last year, Lonnie Jones, 34, was arrested by the sheriff's department yesterday and placed in the parish jail. Jones was arrested at a houseboat at LaZarre's point after he was said to have returned here from Texas.

Jones is charged with beating Bandy and robbing him of some clothes and groceries.

Avoid excessive application of oil to the generator and starter; it may leave a film on the commutator, eventually causing trouble. One or two drops at each oiling will suffice.

MRS. T. W. SHANNON WINNER OF RADIO

She is one of the 1,470 winners in the Camay—RCA Victor contest who are receiving beautiful new RCA Victor radio instruments as prizes. The prize set was delivered yesterday by the Standard Office Supply company, well known local RCA Victor dealers. They remarked that the winner seemed hardly able to believe her good fortune until the set was actually brought in and began to pour out a flood of music.

In no time at all the family of the prize-winner had learned how easy it is to operate these instruments, and listen to police radio cars, airplanes, and weather reports which are so easy to get with such a set. They joined the winner in celebrating her good luck which benefitted them all. The prize was awarded for writing one of the best entries submitted in competition sponsored by the makers of Camay soap.

MAD DOGS BITE TWELVE PERSONS

Attacks Made During Past Week Bring Total For Year Up To 69

Making a total of 69 such cases handled by the Ouachita parish health unit during the present year, 12 persons began taking anti-rabic treatment at the unit offices in the city hall during the past week. Forty-four of the cases were taken up by the unit since June 1.

Dr. G. Douglas Williams, director of the unit, in commenting on the treatment of rabies, said:

"When an individual is bitten by a dog suspected of having rabies, the wound should be cauterized immediately with fuming nitric acid. The dog should not be killed, but should be securely confined. The health unit should be notified immediately.

"If no definite symptoms of rabies develop within two weeks, it is evident that the dog did not have rabies and it is not necessary for the person who was bitten to take the anti-rabic treatment. However, if the dog develops symptoms which cause suspicion of rabies, the anti-rabic treatment should be started at once.

"The reason for not killing the dog immediately after the animal bites a person is that the disease may not be far enough advanced at that time for a laboratory examination of the brain and cord tissue to show a positive diagnosis of rabies.

"Furthermore, if the dog does have rabies, it will die within a few days. "A live dog at the end of two weeks is a source of gratification to a person who has been bitten."

BOND OUTLINES TECH PROGRESS

Advancement Of Institution Set Forth By Retiring President

RUSTON, La., Aug. 8.—(Special)—Taking inventory of Louisiana Tech, G. W. Bond, retiring president of the college, compares the institution of eight years ago with that of the present and cites needs for the future in a 36-page booklet just printed. The pamphlet, containing many tables of statistics and discussions of virtually all phases of the college, is entitled "Eight Years of Progress."

President Bond resigned several weeks ago, effective on September 1, and will continue work on a doctor's degree at Columbia university the coming school year. His successor is expected to be appointed by the state board of education in the near future.

In the introduction to the booklet, President Bond points out that "every business enterprise, whether run for profit or on a non-profit basis, should take stock and determine whether or not it is justifying its costs and returning to the stockholders value received for its expenditures. A college is no exception to this rule, and after eight years of the present administration of Louisiana Polytechnic institute it is well to review the progress that has been made over the whole period so that interested friends of the institution may know something of its development."

Instead of "heavy obligations and an empty treasury," a condition existing when the 1928-29 session opened, the new president of Louisiana Tech will find "a substantial balance in both the maintenance and boarding departments," according to the published report. A table shows a present balance of $80,437.89, including $11,730.75 in the maintenance and boarding departments and $68,707.14 remaining in the fund paid as fire insurance after the old administration hall burned last January. The indebtedness eight years ago was about the same as the present balance, it is said.

Listing all members of the faculty with their degrees and graduate work done, the pamphlet states that it has been "the policy of the institution to increase the efficiency of the faculty whenever possible by filling vacancies with teachers having more training and by encouraging teachers to work for advanced degrees. The number of teachers with doctor's degrees has increased from three to six and the number with the master's degree has increased from 28 to 38. At the same time there has been a decrease from 35 to 22 in the number holding the bachelor's degree."

Discussing the student body, President Bond shows that "enrollment in the college department has gradually increased for the past several years. . . . Comparable to the increase in the student body has been the increase in the number of graduates turned out year by year. Between 1929 and 1936 there has been an increase of 118 per cent in the number of students receiving degrees. During this period the increase in enrollment has been approximately 40 per cent. The increase in the number of graduates over the increase in enrolment (in percentages) indicates that the college is holding its students better and more are continuing in school until they finish work on degrees."

From 1929 to 1936, there has been a considerable reduction in both scholastic and disciplinary suspensions of students, the report relates, which implies "a more serious-minded and industrious attitude on the part of the whole student body."

Mentioning future requirements for the college, President Bond refers to an infirmary, dining hall and kitchen, new barns and more farm land for the agriculture department, a recreational building for student welfare, an addition to the girls' gymnasium and the football stadium, and a swimming pool. There is also need for "at least seven well-trained teachers" to be added, a necessity that "should perhaps take precedence over all of the additions to the plant," the bulletin concludes.

Beautiful Women In Pretty Gowns Abound At Recent Dance

Ring-Bearer Preparing For Big Wedding Here

Monroe Girl Receives Telegram From Highest Wire Office In World, Atop Pike's Peak

By Beryl Madison

A RAINBOW must have spilled out of the sky and landed on the floor of the Lotus club reception rooms the night of the dance last week. Never have prettier women in lovelier gowns floated around in dance time among the cool-looking white linen suits of the men about town. Prominent among the dancers were Pollyanna Shotwell, in white flowered pique; Dorothy Williamson, in pink net; Dorothy Graves, in Alice blue; Carolyn Stubbs and Dorothy Calvert, in green chiffons; Mrs. George Snellings, in a very unusual and attractive white and red summer frock. In choosing his bride, we infer from heresay, that George only displayed once more his discriminating good taste. Then there were Mrs. Elliot Thompson, in white crepe; Miss Dorothy Guerriero, in lavender chiffon; Mrs. Walter Kellogg, in blue organdy; Miss Sue Graves, stunning in black and white; the lovely Mrs. Neil Buie; and the always well-dressed Mrs. Milling Bernstein.

Happy is not the only one who needs a private modiste to furnish her new dresses for the crowded program of luncheons, teas and dinner parties;

Master Carl Carrington Tidwell is having his play time interrupted by frequent trips to his tailor, who is making this young fashion plate a real double-breasted white linen suit which he will wear as the sartorially perfect blonde ring-bearer in the LaCour-Tidwell wedding. Which reminds us, have you met Mrs. Landry of New Roads? Like the bridegroom, her son, she has the characteristic south Louisiana charm. And speaking of weddings, Dan Cupid must be drunk on new wine. Nobody seems safe from his painful little arrow. We are glad to know, however, that Mildred Matthews will be living near us in Shreveport after she becomes Mrs. Williams, and that Owen McCleary will bring his bride to Monroe and that Annette Drew will not be deprived entirely of her "Marrying In-Laws" after their wedding.

Miss Jean Terzia—Ren's daughter—received her first telegram Friday from the highest telegraph station in the world. The message came from Gay Noe, a visitor to Pike's Peak during her stay at Hotel Broadmoor in Colorado Springs. The message reads: "In the Pike's Peak snow and cold at fourteen thousand feet. Wish I could send you some of it. Gay." Please forgive our pun, but we'll wager no one can top that!

In making your plans for the LaCour-Tidwell wedding next Saturday night, prepare to dress at the same time for the Country club dance afterwards and to go on from the wedding reception to the perfectly grand affair. You will have plenty of time to do both wedding and dance, one at 7:30, the other at 10. Or if you just will not be inveigled into night life, plan to attend the open house at the club Sunday afternoon. There'll be everything there to make you enjoy yourself. The wheels of vacation keep whirling pleasantly, and so until next week.

Hancock Etchings

Let us say this good word for commercial advertising. It has been the means of putting before the American public music of the highest order, music such as we used to pay high prices to hear whenever we were lucky enough to be near a city of comparative size. Although we all complain about the plastered scenery ruined by billboards advising us where to buy, how to eat, what to think even, we everyone enjoy many a quiet evening of slippered ease while the velvet notes of Grace Moore, the strident tones of Walter Winchell and the Oxford accent of Boake Carter soothe and entertain our harrassed minds. This week in Monroe, commercial advertising has given local culture a boost because it was through this means that Mr. Carl Hancock, famous artist of Little Rock, Ark., was able to present to the Monroe public library a book of his etchings and drypoints of scenes in and around Monroe. If you have not already done so, by all means, visit the library and ask Mrs. Townes to let you see this collection, executed with such exquisite craftsmanship. You will break the Ten Commandments by coveting the pictures of the cypress knees and other lovely sketches, but you will also enjoy the sensation of having seen an example of art really as good as you might find in the best city museum.

Beginning last Saturday night with the Delt dance, at which she and Miss Roberta Neel were sponsors, Miss Lorraine Matthews, lovely daughter of Mr. Paul Matthews, and guest in the home of Miss Doris Reid, has been living a perfect whirl of excitement.

Before the dance, Miss Virginia Faulk and Doris Reid held open house in Miss Faulk's home on Arkansas avenue. The reception rooms were colorful with many baskets and vases of zinnias. Mrs. Francis Faulk, mother of Miss Faulk and Mrs. Alf Reid, mother of Miss Reid, assisted the two hostesses in serving the honoree and guests with cake, punch and sandwiches.

The following guests called before the dance: Virginia Faulk and Durwood Cann, Dorothy Graves and Tom Hayes, Betty Reily and Bernard Smith, Margie Farmer and Harry Underwood, Lorraine Matthews and Pete Peevy, Doris Reid and Paul Benedict, Eleanor Colbert and T. The banquet table was set on white linen with dark blue crystal and china and floral centerpiece of red, radiance roses on a blue mirror plaque. The place cards were of red and blue. Following the breakfast, which was served in the private dining room, the guests went into the bridge lounge where they were served demi-tasse before the games began.

At the conclusion of the bridge, Mrs. Garretson presented Miss Tidwell with a set of blue California china. Miss Louise Gray received a set of blue vases for high score and Mrs. Samuel Jones, a piece of Madiera linen for consolation.

Recipe For Rolls

We are very proud of the recognition given Mrs. M. W. McDuff of Winnsboro, who has been awarded a certificate of endorsement by the Better Homes and Gardens magazine for her recipe for quick buttermilk rolls. Says Mrs. McDuff, "No recipe for quick rolls worked quickly enough for me, so I mixed the ingredients according to my own proportions. My recipe makes delicious feathery rolls and demands very little trouble and time."

Here is the successful recipe. Take one cake of yeast, two tablespoonfuls of luke-warm water, three cupfuls of buttermilk at normal temperature, one cup of shortening, one-half cupful of sugar, two teaspoonfuls of salt, one teaspoonful of soda, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and about eight cups of flour. Dissolve the yeast in the water. Add the buttermilk and enough flour to make a thick batter. Cover and set in a warm place until light and full of bubbles. Add the shortening and sugar and beat until well blended. Sift the salt, soda and baking powder with three cups of flour and beat into the mixture. Continue adding flour until the consistency of soft biscuit dough. Place on a floured surface and pat to one inch in thickness. Cut in rounds and place in a well-greased pan, and set to rise for one hour and bake in an oven for fifteen minutes. The remainder of the dough not used, should be wrapped in cellophane and placed in the refrigerator for future use.

Beautiful City Urged

Planting Of Flowers For Garden Club Meeting Here Advocated

Mrs. Elmer Richards, active and alert president of the Monroe Garden club, has written the following article in regard to preparation of all garden-lovers for the annual meeting of the Louisiana Garden Club federation to be held in Monroe next spring. It is greatly to be hoped that all interested in beautifying our city will carry out the following suggestions in order to help Monroe make a favorable showing when that time comes.

"Plans are being perfected for a community beautification project with the idea of having Monroe and West Monroe, as well as Ouachita parish, a flower show display when the Louisiana Garden Club federation holds its annual meeting in Monroe next April or May.

"The garden club needs the cooperation of home owners, churches, schools, apartment house owners, gas stations, superintendents of public grounds, and all business houses that have any place for a planting to aid in the project by planning and planting now so as to have a display of artistic effects for this special season.

"Annuals such as poppies, larkspur, gaillardia, ageratum (dwarf as a border), snapdragons, stock, foxglove, verbena, phlox, pansy, tulips, coreopsis, are suggested as being suitable for quick effects.

"As a member of the Louisiana Iris society, the club would like to stress the planting of our native iris as well as of all other types. Now is the time to plant it in order to get early spring bloom, as it will have time to get established during this fall.

"Perennial phlox, hyacinth, wild phlox, lemon day-lily, madonna lily, oriental poppy, peony, English and shasta daisy and violets are also suggested.

"Plant in August any biennial such as hollyhock, columbine, stock. Our own native pentstemon is one of the show flowers of spring and is easy to find. Then there is the wild phlox, which should be in every yard. It likes the same soil as the azaleas, and most of the flowers we grow for blooming prefer a mulch of oak leaves, dry grass clippings, peat moss, pine needles and the natural soil.

"Annual and biennial plants are of inestimable value in carrying out a progression of color in the flower garden. Some of the most attractive and beautiful symphonies are created by use of these varieties in companionship with perennials.

"An arrangement of annuals next to the flowering shrubs may be placed by a broad irregular planting of wild pentstemon in white or lavender, bordered with the wild blue spiderwort with some plants placed forward to break the monotony. In front of an uneven border of wild phlox in lavender and blue, should be babybreath to give an airy, graceful, fountainlike effect, or a broad mass planting of California poppies. To complete the planting a row of carpet-of-snow or Little Gem alyssum should be used. The whole effect of the border will be so beautiful as to make every passer-by wish to linger a while to enjoy it.

"If properly placed, how attractive are all the pink flowers in their various hues, shades and tints, the yellows, the oranges, blues and greens, yet a touch of grey here and yonder will improve a border. A color which many persons find hard to place is cerise. Associate it with a setting of gray and note the transformation.

"Grasses are not used to the extent they should be in our garden borders. The Blue Lyme grass is particularly decorative in the flower border.

"In preparing a flower bed or border for a new planting, the gardener should use a liberal supply of well decayed manure, and should spade it deeply into the soil. In gardens that are somewhat low, thorough drainage is of great importance. The depth of soil is also a great factor in the cultivation of most herbaceous plants. If the soil is shallow and lying on a hard subsoil, then growth and subsequent bloom will be comparatively poor and short lived. This is a fact also in dry seasons and in dry locations.

"The art of color arrangement in a garden consists in so placing the plant as to produce harmony or contrast in color both in foliage and in flowers. In planting a border where color effect is to be the feature, the plant material used in its composition should be of such a nature that there will be bloom in every part of it from June until early November. It is obvious, however, that the designer cannot secure this constant bloom with any one kind of plant, no matter how numerous its varieties. Therefore, he will of necessity employ several, selecting such species and varieties as will harmonize both in tint and color of flowers, as well as in character of growth. Harmonizing colors as a rule are more pleasing than those which contrast, and thy resemble plaintive chords of music.

"The most satisfactory results in planting are obtained by massing each color. This method will give dignity to the flower garden. Care must be exercised, however, that the color masses are never so large as to become monotonous. After a definite color scheme has been chosen, the plants having flowers of approximately the same color may be grouped together to follow each other in season of blooming.

"Apart from the value of annuals as garden flowers, some of them are most useful as cut flowers. Such species as sweet peas, cosmos, snapdragons, calliopsis, Shirley poppies, coreopsis, larkspur, mignonette, nigella and nasturtium.

"In planting the border do not put all the tall plants at the back; place some of them forward in order to break the monotony of the planting. Natural lines, which are curved, are always better than straight lines in border design. A few pleasing color combinations in annuals are white intermediate stock banded with purple verbena, edged with golden feather; purple stock associated with ageratum; white stock bordered with yellow nasturtiums; French marigold associated with snow-on-the-mountain; pink edged with purple, if for contrast, if for harmony, edged with white; violet or purple edged with gray for contrast, for harmony, crimson verbena.

"A pleasing composition is a flower bed planted of peonies combined with daffodils and lilies. The daffodils give the first impression of spring, appearing particularly attractive with a background of the young foliage of the peony. After the flowering period of the daffodils is over, the peony will be in evidence to be followed by the Japan lily, lilium speciosum or some of its varieties during late summer."

Star-Gazing Provides Stellar Beauty Hints

Actresses Transformed By Experts In Makeup

BY ALICIA HART
NEA Service Staff Writer

More women acquire glamor than ever were born with it. So you'd be surprised how few popular screen stars were glamorous-looking when they made their initial appearances before the camera.

Acting talent, combined with good features, clear skin and shining eyes, gave them their chance. The experts in makeup, hairstyles and grooming dramatized their natural loveliness into glamor.

Very often the evolution of a film star involves a good deal more than a fine hair tinting or hair bleaching job, deft eyebrow plucking and a fool-proof method of weight control. If you doubt this, you have only to compare a photograph of your current favorite with a picture she had taken years ago when she arrived in the film capital.

Two Examples Of Makeup Magic

Patricia Ellis, for instance, was a pretty, rather plump little girl with bushy brown hair and heavy eyebrows. She was a charming youngster, but her appearance certainly was a far cry from the suave, sophisticated, sleek blonde beauty she is today. She now wears her hair close to her head, and she doesn't cover up her nice forehead with curly bangs. Her eyebrows are becomingly shaped to make her face look less full. She uses more lipstick these days and a lighter shade of powder. She weighs less.

Joan Blondell is another who has bleached her hair, re-shaped her eyebrows and changed her makeup. Indeed, from her pictures, it seems that she has been re-shaped from head to foot. Her face is oval instead of round and chubby. Her neck looks longer and definitely more slender. Her body shows subtle, almost lean curves rather than schoolgirl rolls here and there. Her "before" pictures make one think of play clothes, middies and tam-o'-shanters. Her "after" photographs conjure up visions of shimmering evening gowns and sports clothes that are oh-so-casual-and-correct.

Disregard the fact that it has been bleached and concentrate for a moment on Miss Blondell's change in shape of coiffure. The present brushed-backward effect accentuates the handsome, broad sweep of her brow, shows off her nice ears and gives her chinline a trimmer appearance. Compare it with the windblown bob which in the beginning covered her forehead and ears and pointed up the roundness of her profile. Think about the contrast again before you tell your hairdresser that "you want your hair done up in the same old way, please."

Gives Barbecue

On Wednesday night at 6:00 o'clock, Mr. Paul Matthews used Little Joe, his tricky yacht, as a means of transportation eight miles up the Ouachita to Atwell lodge, where he was host at a most delightful chicken barbecue for his popular daughter and 10 of her intimate friends. Mr. and Mrs. Alf Reid and Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Walker were special guests of Mr. Matthews. Departing from the dock at six, the guests arrived at camp in time to enjoy a moonlight swim before supper. Those participating in Mr. Matthew's hospitality were Miss Dorothy Graves, Miss Virginia Faulk, Miss Nan Buckner, Miss Eleanor Colbert, Miss Lorraine Matthews, Miss Martha Olive Myatt, Miss Marjorie Farmer, Miss Doris Reid, Miss Betty Reily and Miss Jane Terzia.

Events Planned

LeBlanc, Jr., has been transferred to Company G, second B. M., fifth marines, M. F. F., Quantico, Va. Private John Alvin LeBlanc has been transferred to sea-school detachment, Norfolk navy yard, Portsmouth, Va.

Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Talbot will leave next Saturday, August 15, for a visit of two weeks to Monterey and Mexico City, returning by way of the Texas centennial.

Miss Koerner Feted

Disproving the current belief that nobody is capable of being pleasant so early as 9 o'clock in the morning, Mrs. William C. Hudson of Oak Grove, at that hour on Friday, brought together a group of congenials to a beautifully planned breakfast in honor of Miss Marie Koerner, bride-elect of Mr. Owen McCleary of Monroe. The tables were handsomely laid with white linens and gleaming silver. A two-course menu was faultlessly served, the honoree being seated in a flower-decked throne chair, where she sat during the entire party. The briskness of a cool day in August added zest to the spirited games of contract that followed the serving of the breakfast. During the course of the games, iced drinks were served. At the end of the games, Mrs. Hudson presented to Miss Koerner a gift of handsome lingerie; to Mrs. John Fridge, for high score, lovely linen towels; and to Miss Elaine Briggs, for consolation, linen handkerchiefs. Those present with Mrs. Hudson and Miss Koerner on this occasion were Misses Elaine Briggs, Frances Briggs, Sue Williams, Gussie Ross, Valerie McIntosh, Dorothy Rogers and Mesdames Marvin Lipp, Marion Lipp, J. Vernon Sims, Guthrie Jarrell, Charles Parker and John C. Fridge of Winnsboro.

McCleary-Koerner

A wedding beautiful in its simplicity was solemnized Thursday at 10 o'clock in the morning at the C. H. Koerner residence in Oak Grove, when Miss Marie Koerner became the bride of Mr. Owen McCleary of Monroe, with Rev. Plutz of Lake Providence officiating. The house was decorated with a green background of ferns, evergreens and palms for the lighted cathedral tapers and garden blossoms overflowing from tall white wicker floor baskets.

The nuptial music was rendered by Mrs. Donald B. Fiske, aunt of the bride. Miss Dorothy Rogers accompanied Mrs. Ace Monroe, another aunt of the bride, who sang "I Love You Truly." Miss Gloria Koerner, sister of the bride, and her only attendant, was gowned in dusty rose chiffon and wore a harmonizing corsage. Mr. Elzie Fowler of Lake Providence, served Mr. McCleary as his best man. The bride, who entered on the arm of her father, wore white chiffon with accessories of white and an exquisite corsage of white asters.

Miss Koerner is the elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Koerner, of Oak Grove, and a cultured and beautiful girl. She is a graduate of the University of Alabama, where she was a member of the Zeta Tau Alpha sorority.

Mr. McCleary is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs Pat McCleary of Bonita, La. He received his education at Louisiana Tech in Ruston. There he was a member of Theta Kappa Nu fraternity. Mr. McCleary holds a responsible position with the Weaks Supply company in Monroe.

Following an informal reception in the home of the bride's parents, Mrs. McCleary donned a smart black fall ensemble with luxurious fur trimmings. After a brief honeymoon, the popular couple will be at home to their many friends in Monroe. Out-of-town guests included Mrs. Walter Baggett and Mr. Abner McCleary of Bonita, La.; Mr. and Mrs. Rude McCleary, of Bastrop, La.; Mr. and Mrs. Earnest E. McCleary, of Alexandria, La.; Dr. M. V. UNTIL HIS DENTIST TIPPED HIM OFF...

Most Bad Breath Begins With The Teeth!

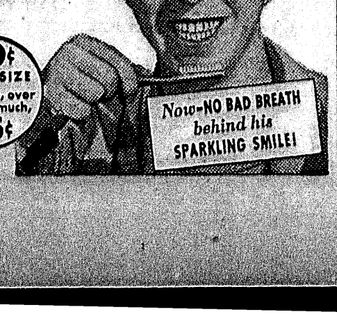

WHY let bad breath interfere with happiness? It's so easy to be safe when you realize that the most common cause of bad breath is . . . improperly cleaned teeth!

Authorities say decaying food deposits, in hidden crevices between the teeth, are the source of most unpleasant mouth odors—and of much tooth decay.

Use Colgate Dental Cream. Its special penetrating foam gets into every tiny crevice, emulsifies and washes away the food and acid deposits that cause bad breath. At the same time, Colgate's soft, safe polishing agent cleans and brightens enamel.

So brush your teeth, gums and tongue with Colgate's at least twice daily—and have cleaner, brighter teeth and a sweeter, purer breath. Get a tube today!

Beautiful Women In Pretty Gowns Abound At Recent Dance

Ring-Bearer Preparing For Big Wedding Here

By Beryl Madison

A RAINBOW must have spilled out of the sky and landed on the floor of the Lotus club reception rooms the night of the dance last week. Never have prettier women in lovelier gowns floated around in dance time among the cool-looking white linen suits of the men about town. Prominent among the dancers were Pollyanna Shotwell, in white flowered pique; Dorothy Williamson, in pink net; Dorothy Graves, in Alice blue; Carolyn Stubbs and Dorothy Calvert, in green chiffons; Mrs. George Snellings, in a very unusual and attractive white and red summer frock. In choosing his bride, we infer from heresay, that George only displayed once more his discriminating good taste. Then there were Mrs. Elliot Thompson, in white crepe; Miss Dorothy Guerriero, in lavender chiffon; Mrs. Walter Kellogg, in blue organdy; Miss Sue Graves, stunning in black and white; the lovely Mrs. Neil Buie; and the always well-dressed Mrs. Milling Bernstein.

Happy is not the only one who needs a private modiste to furnish her new dresses for the crowded program of luncheons, teas and dinner parties;

Master Carl Carrington Tidwell is having his play time interrupted by frequent trips to his tailor, who is making this young fashion plate a real double-breasted white linen suit which he will wear as the sartorially perfect blonde ring-bearer in the LaCour-Tidwell wedding. Which reminds us, have you met Mrs. Landry of New Roads? Like the bridegroom, her son, she has the characteristic south Louisiana charm. And speaking of weddings, Dan Cupid must be drunk on new wine. Nobody seems safe from his painful little arrow. We are glad to know, however, that Mildred Matthews will be living near us in Shreveport after she becomes Mrs. Williams, and that Owen McCleary will bring his bride to Monroe and that Annette Drew will not be deprived entirely of her "Marrying In-Laws" after their wedding.

Miss Jean Terzia—Ren's daughter—received her first telegram Friday from the highest telegraph station in the world. The message came from Gay Noe, a visitor to Pike's Peak during her stay at Hotel Broadmoor in Colorado Springs. The message reads: "In the Pike's Peak snow and cold at fourteen thousand feet. Wish I could send you some of it. Gay." Please forgive our pun, but we'll wager no one can top that!

In making your plans for the LaCour-Tidwell wedding next Saturday night, prepare to dress at the same time for the Country club dance afterwards and to go on from the wedding reception to the perfectly grand affair. You will have plenty of time to do both wedding and dance, one at 7:30, the other at 10. Or if you just will not be inveigled into night life, plan to attend the open house at the club Sunday afternoon. There'll be everything there to make you enjoy yourself. The wheels of vacation keep whirling pleasantly, and so until next week.

Hancock Etchings

Let us say this good word for commercial advertising. It has been the means of putting before the American public music of the highest order, music such as we used to pay high prices to hear whenever we were lucky enough to be near a city of comparative size. Although we all complain about the plastered scenery ruined by billboards advising us where to buy, how to eat, what to think even, we everyone enjoy many a quiet evening of slippered ease while the velvet notes of Grace Moore, the strident tones of Walter Winchell and the Oxford accent of Boake Carter soothe and entertain our harrassed minds. This week in Monroe, commercial advertising has given local culture a boost because it was through this means that Mr. Carl Hancock, famous artist of Little Rock, Ark., was able to present to the Monroe public library a book of his etchings and drypoints of scenes in and around Monroe. If you have not already done so, by all means, visit the library and ask Mrs. Townes to let you see this collection, executed with such exquisite craftsmanship. You will break the Ten Commandments by coveting the pictures of the cypress knees and other lovely sketches, but you will also enjoy the sensation of having seen an example of art really as good as you might find in the best city museum.

Miss Drew To Wed

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cloyd Drew of West Monroe, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Miss Lesley Elizabeth Drew, to Mr. George Clifford Guier. The wedding will occur sometime in the near future.

Widely Entertained

Beginning last Saturday night with the Delt dance, at which she and Miss Roberta Neel were sponsors, Miss Lorraine Matthews, lovely daughter of Mr. Paul Matthews, and guest in the home of Miss Doris Reid, has been living a perfect whirl of excitement.

Before the dance, Miss Virginia Faulk and Doris Reid held open house in Miss Faulk's home on Arkansas avenue. The reception rooms were colorful with many baskets and vases of zinnias. Mrs. Francis Faulk, mother of Miss Faulk and Mrs. Alf Reid, mother of Miss Reid, assisted the two hostesses in serving the honoree and guests with cake, punch and sandwiches.

Miss Matthews wore a most attractive frock of white splashed with blue and wine-colored figures, a red sash and red flowers in her hair. Miss Roberta Neel, the other sponsor was very svelte in blue shirt-waist evening gown with silver sash, buttons and collar—the Delt colors are blue and white—while Miss Doris Reid and Virginia Faulk, one in white pique trimmed in red rick-rack, the other in blue mousseline de soie, were as good to look at as the sponsors themselves.

The banquet table was set on white linen with dark blue crystal and china and floral centerpiece of red, radiance roses on a blue mirror plaque. The place cards were of red and blue. Following the breakfast, which was served in the private dining room, the guests went into the bridge lounge where they were served demi-tasse before the games began.

At the conclusion of the bridge, Mrs. Garretson presented Miss Tidwell with a set of blue California china. Miss Louise Gray received a set of blue vases for high score and Mrs. Samuel Jones, a piece of Madiera linen for consolation.

Recipe For Rolls

We are very proud of the recognition given Mrs. M. W. McDuff of Winnsboro, who has been awarded a certificate of endorsement by the Better Homes and Gardens magazine for her recipe for quick buttermilk rolls. Says Mrs. McDuff, "No recipe for quick rolls worked quickly enough for me, so I mixed the ingredients according to my own proportions. My recipe makes delicious feathery rolls and demands very little trouble and time."

Here is the successful recipe. Take one cake of yeast, two tablespoonfuls of luke-warm water, three cupfuls of buttermilk at normal temperature, one cup of shortening, one-half cupful of sugar, two teaspoonfuls of salt, one teaspoonful of soda, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and about eight cups of flour. Dissolve the yeast in the water. Add the buttermilk and enough flour to make a thick batter. Cover and set in a warm place until light and full of bubbles. Add the shortening and sugar and beat until well blended. Sift the salt, soda and baking powder with three cups of flour and beat into the mixture. Continue adding flour until the consistency of soft biscuit dough. Place on a floured surface and pat to one inch in thickness. Cut in rounds and place in a well-greased pan, and set to rise for one hour and bake in an oven for fifteen minutes. The remainder of the dough not used, should be wrapped in cellophane and placed in the refrigerator for future use.

HOME COURSE IN PIANO PLAYING—LESSON NO. 19

Copyright, 1927, by W. Scott Grove, Scranton, Pa. GROVE'S MUSIC SIMPLIFIER is fully protected by copyrights in the United States, Canada, Great Britain, the countries of Continental Europe and their colonies.

In the key of E Flat Major three of the notes are flatted. In this, the nineteenth lesson, the chords that are necessary to play accompaniments in that key are shown. Having committed to memory these chords you should have no difficulty in massing them into an accompaniment for any melody that is sung with a signature of three flats in the written music.

If you will compare the chords and bass notes of any particular chart in this series with the manuscript of music arranged in the same key this fact will appear. Two-thirds or even more of the chords of harmony in the manuscript, except those used for modulation, are comprised in some position of the chords arranged in these charts. That is, the chords must in use are those that you have already learned. The chords of modulation are those that permit a change from one key to another by easy steps.

When you are playing accompaniments each chord you strike should (in general) contain the note of the melody that is sounded with the chord. You can study this out from the charts, but few persons should need more instruction on this point than the ear itself can give.

Persistence is necessary if you are to learn much from these lessons. You must play the chord over and over, first with the chart before you and then without, until you have fully committed the lesson to memory. Memorize also the names of the keys that make up the different chords. This should give you sufficient knowledge for playing accompaniments. If you wish to go further in the study of the piano or organ, learn the fingering of the scales shown in the upper left hand corner of each chart. Three chords follows the scales. Compare them with the chords shown in the main charts.

Every triad in black letter is marked 1, 3, 5. Always read it so, no matter in what vertical order the notes may be written. Note that the small letter D with a dash above it must not be played.

NEXT LESSON—Key of C Minor, which is the relative key of E Flat Major.

Planting Of Flowers For Garden Club Meeting Here Advocated

Mrs. Elmer Richards, active and alert president of the Monroe Garden club, has written the following article in regard to preparation of all garden-lovers for the annual meeting of the Louisiana Garden Club federation to be held in Monroe next spring. It is greatly to be hoped that all interested in beautifying our city will carry out the following suggestions in order to help Monroe make a favorable showing when that time comes.

"Plans are being perfected for a community beautification project with the idea of having Monroe and West Monroe, as well as Ouachita parish, a flower show display when the Louisiana Garden Club federation holds its annual meeting in Monroe next April or May.

"The garden club needs the cooperation of home owners, churches, schools, apartment house owners, gas stations, superintendents of public grounds, and all business houses that have any place for a planting to aid in the project by planning and planting now so as to have a display of artistic effects for this special season.

"Annuals such as poppies, larkspur, gaillardia, ageratum (dwarf as a border), snapdragons, stock, foxglove, verbena, phlox, pansy, tulips, coreopsis, are suggested as being suitable for quick effects.

"As a member of the Louisiana Iris society, the club would like to stress the planting of our native iris as well as of all other types. Now is the time to plant it in order to get early spring bloom, as it will have time to get established during this fall.

"Perennial phlox, hyacinth, wild phlox, lemon day-lily, madonna lily, oriental poppy, peony, English and shasta daisy and violets are also suggested.

"Plant in August any biennial such as hollyhock, columbine, stock. Our own native pentstemon is one of the show flowers of spring and is easy to find. Then there is the wild phlox, which should be in every yard. It likes the same soil as the azaleas, and most of the flowers we grow for blooming prefer a mulch of oak leaves, dry grass clippings, peat moss, pine needles and the natural soil.

"Annual and biennial plants are of inestimable value in carrying out a progression of color in the flower garden. Some of the most attractive and beautiful symphonies are created by use of these varieties in companionship with perennials.

"An arrangement of annuals next to the flowering shrubs may be placed by a broad irregular planting of wild pentstemon in white or lavender, bordered with the wild blue spiderwort with some plants placed forward to break the monotony. In front of an uneven border of wild phlox in lavender and blue, should be babybreath to give an airy, graceful, fountainlike effect, or a broad mass planting of California poppies. To complete the planting a row of carpet-of-snow or Little Gem alyssum should be used. The whole effect of the border will be so beautiful as to make every passer-by wish to linger a while to enjoy it.

"If properly placed, how attractive are all the pink flowers in their various hues, shades and tints, the yellows, the oranges, blues and greens, yet a touch of grey here and yonder will improve a border. A color which many persons find hard to place is cerise. Associate it with a setting of gray and note the transformation.

"Grasses are not used to the extent they should be in our garden borders. The Blue Lyme grass is particularly decorative in the flower border.

"In preparing a flower bed or border for a new planting, the gardener should use a liberal supply of well decayed manure, and should spade it deeply into the soil. In gardens that are somewhat low, thorough drainage is of great importance. The depth of soil is also a great factor in the cultivation of most herbaceous plants. If the soil is shallow and lying on a hard subsoil, then growth and subsequent bloom will be comparatively poor and short lived. This is a fact also in dry seasons and in dry locations.

"The art of color arrangement in a garden consists in so placing the plant as to produce harmony or contrast in color both in foliage and in flowers. In planting a border where color effect is to be the feature, the plant material used in its composition should be of such a nature that there will be bloom in every part of it from June until early November. It is obvious, however, that the designer cannot secure this constant bloom with any one kind of plant, no matter how numerous its varieties. Therefore, he will of necessity employ several, selecting such species and varieties as will harmonize both in tint and color of flowers, as well as in character of growth. Harmonizing colors as a rule are more pleasing than those which contrast, and thy resemble plaintive chords of music.

"The most satisfactory results in planting are obtained by massing each color. This method will give dignity to the flower garden. Care must be exercised, however, that the color masses are never so large as to become monotonous. After a definite color scheme has been chosen, the plants having flowers of approximately the same color may be grouped together to follow each other in season of blooming.

"Apart from the value of annuals as garden flowers, some of them are most useful as cut flowers. Such species as sweet peas, cosmos, snapdragons, calliopsis, Shirley poppies, coreopsis, larkspur, mignonette, nigella and nasturtium.

"In planting the border do not put all the tall plants at the back; place some of them forward in order to break the monotony of the planting. Natural lines, which are curved, are always better than straight lines in border design. A few pleasing color combinations in annuals are white intermediate stock banded with purple verbena, edged with golden feather; purple stock associated with ageratum; white stock bordered with yellow nasturtiums; French marigold associated with snow-on-the-mountain; pink edged with purple, if for contrast, if for harmony, edged with white; violet or purple edged with gray for contrast, for harmony, crimson verbena.

"A pleasing composition is a flower bed planted of peonies combined with daffodils and lilies. The daffodils give the first impression of spring, appearing particularly attractive with a background of the young foliage of the peony. After the flowering period of the daffodils is over, the peony will be in evidence to be followed by the Japan lily, lilium speciosum or some of its varieties during late summer."

Actresses Transformed By Experts In Makeup

BY ALICIA HART
NEA Service Staff Writer

More women acquire glamor than ever were born with it. So you'd be surprised how few popular screen stars were glamorous-looking when they made their initial appearances before the camera.

Very often the evolution of a film star involves a good deal more than a fine hair tinting or hair bleaching job, deft eyebrow plucking and a fool-proof method of weight control. If you doubt this, you have only to compare a photograph of your current favorite with a picture she had taken years ago when she arrived in the film capital.

Two Examples Of Makeup Magic

Patricia Ellis, for instance, was a pretty, rather plump little girl with bushy brown hair and heavy eyebrows. She was a charming youngster, but her appearance certainly was a far cry from the suave, sophisticated, sleek blonde beauty she is today. She now wears her hair close to her head, and she doesn't cover up her nice forehead with curly bangs. Her eyebrows are becomingly shaped to make her face look less full. She uses more lipstick these days and a lighter shade of powder. She weighs less.

Joan Blondell is another who has bleached her hair, re-shaped her eyebrows and changed her makeup. Indeed, from her pictures, it seems that she has been re-shaped from head to foot. Her face is oval instead of round and chubby. Her neck looks longer and definitely more slender. Her body shows subtle, almost lean curves rather than schoolgirl rolls here and there. Her "before" pictures make one think of play clothes, middies and tam-o'-shanters. Her "after" photographs conjure up visions of shimmering evening gowns and sports clothes that are oh-so-casual-and-correct.

Disregard the fact that it has been bleached and concentrate for a moment on Miss Blondell's change in shape of coiffure. The present brushed-backward effect accentuates the handsome, broad sweep of her brow, shows off her nice ears and gives her chinline a trimmer appearance. Compare it with the windblown bob which in the beginning covered her forehead and ears and pointed up the roundness of her profile. Think about the contrast again before you tell your hairdresser that "you want your hair done up in the same old way, please."

Miss Koerner Feted

Disproving the current belief that nobody is capable of being pleasant so early as 9 o'clock in the morning, Mrs. William C. Hudson of Oak Grove, at that hour on Friday, brought together a group of congenials to a beautifully planned breakfast in honor of Miss Marie Koerner, bride-elect of Mr. Owen McCleary of Monroe. The tables were handsomely laid with white linens and gleaming silver. A two-course menu was faultlessly served, the honoree being seated in a flower-decked throne chair, where she sat during the entire party. The briskness of a cool day in August added zest to the spirited games of contract that followed the serving of the breakfast. During the course of the games, iced drinks were served. At the end of the games, Mrs. Hudson presented to Miss Koerner a gift of handsome lingerie; to Mrs. John Fridge, for high score, lovely linen towels; and to Miss Elaine Briggs, for consolation, linen handkerchiefs. Those present with Mrs. Hudson and Miss Koerner on this occasion were Misses Elaine Briggs, Frances Briggs, Sue Williams, Gussie Ross, Valerie McIntosh, Dorothy Rogers and Mesdames Marvin Lipp, Marion Lipp, J. Vernon Sims, Guthrie Jarrell, Charles Parker and John C. Fridge of Winnsboro.

Gives Barbecue

On Wednesday night at 6:00 o'clock, Mr. Paul Matthews used Little Joe, his tricky yacht, as a means of transportation eight miles up the Ouachita to Atwell lodge, where he was host at a most delightful chicken barbecue for his popular daughter and 10 of her intimate friends. Mr. and Mrs. Alf Reid and Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Walker were special guests of Mr. Matthews. Departing from the dock at six, the guests arrived at camp in time to enjoy a moonlight swim before supper. Those participating in Mr. Matthew's hospitality were Miss Dorothy Graves, Miss Virginia Faulk, Miss Nan Buckner, Miss Eleanor Colbert, Miss Lorraine Matthews, Miss Martha Olive Myatt, Miss Marjorie Farmer, Miss Doris Reid, Miss Betty Reily and Miss Jane Terzia.

Three Honored

Miss Julia Gilbert of Wisner was hostess at a noonday luncheon Friday honoring Misses Elizabeth Frith of Summitt, Miss., Jeffie White of Jackson, Miss., and Jean Scull of Arcola, Miss., who are guests of Miss Dixie Gilbert of Wisner this week. Those enjoying the occasion, in addition to the honorees, were as follows: Misses Dixie and Addie Gilbert, Lottie Cile Risher, Lucy Roach, Ann Knotts, Nell York, Dorothy Mae Turner, Ruby Mae Arnold and Louise Arnold.

Events Planned

Miss Doris Reid entertained with a palate party Saturday night and Misses Nan Buckner and Martha Olive Myatt will have a luncheon for Miss Matthews on next Tuesday so that it will be necessary for this much-feted visitor from Memphis to remain over until the coming week in order to attend all the social functions being arranged in her honor.

Private Arthur M. LeBlanc, Jr., and Private John Alvin LeBlanc, sons of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. LeBlanc, Sr., of Monroe, have completed preliminary training at Paris Island, S. C., and Private Arthur M. LeBlanc, Jr., has been transferred to Company G, second B. M., fifth marines, M. F. F., Quantico, Va. Private John Alvin LeBlanc has been transferred to sea-school detachment, Norfolk navy yard, Portsmouth, Va.

Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Talbot will leave next Saturday, August 15, for a visit of two weeks to Monterey and Mexico City, returning by way of the Texas centennial.

McCleary-Koerner

A wedding beautiful in its simplicity was solemnized Thursday at 10 o'clock in the morning at the C. H. Koerner residence in Oak Grove, when Miss Marie Koerner became the bride of Mr. Owen McCleary of Monroe, with Rev. Plutz of Lake Providence officiating. The house was decorated with a green background of ferns, evergreens and palms for the lighted cathedral tapers and garden blossoms overflowing from tall white wicker floor baskets.

The nuptial music was rendered by Mrs. Donald B. Fiske, aunt of the bride. Miss Dorothy Rogers accompanied Mrs. Ace Monroe, another aunt of the bride, who sang "I Love You Truly." Miss Gloria Koerner, sister of the bride, and her only attendant, was gowned in dusty rose chiffon and wore a harmonizing corsage. Mr. Elzie Fowler of Lake Providence, served Mr. McCleary as his best man. The bride, who entered on the arm of her father, wore white chiffon with accssories of white and an exquisite corsage of white asters.

Miss Koerner is the elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Koerner, of Oak Grove, and a cultured and beautiful girl. She is a graduate of the University of Alabama, where she was a member of the Zeta Tau Alpha sorority.

Mr. McCleary is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs Pat McCleary of Bonita, La. He received his education at Louisiana Tech in Ruston. There he was a member of Theta Kappa Nu fraternity. Mr. McCleary holds a responsible position with the Weaks Supply company in Monroe.

Following an informal reception in the home of the bride's parents, Mrs. McCleary donned a smart black fall ensemble with luxurious fur trimmings. After a brief honeymoon, the popular couple will be at home to their many friends in Monroe. Out-of-town guests included Mrs. Walter Baggett and Mr. Abner McCleary of Bonita, La.; Mr. and Mrs. Rude McCleary, of Bastrop, La.; Mr. and Mrs. Earnest E. McCleary, of Alexandria, La.; Dr. M. V. Most Bad Breath Begins With The Teeth!

WHY let bad breath interfere with happiness? It's so easy to be safe when you realize that the most common cause of bad breath is . . . improperly cleaned teeth!

Use Colgate Dental Cream. Its special penetrating foam gets into every tiny crevice, emulsifies and washes away the food and acid deposits that cause bad breath. At the same time, Colgate's soft, safe polishing agent cleans and brightens enamel.

GROVE'S MUSIC SIMPLIFIER is fully protected by copyrights in the United States, Canada, Great Britain, the countries of Continental Europe and their colonies.

In the key of E Flat Major three of the notes are flatted. In this, the nineteenth lesson, the chords that are necessary to play accompaniments in that key are shown. Having committed to memory these chords you should have no difficulty in massing them into an accompaniment for any melody that is sung with a signature of three flats in the written music.

If you will compare the chords and bass notes of any particular chart in this series with the manuscript of music arranged in the same key this fact will appear. Two-thirds or even more of the chords of harmony in the manuscript, except those used for modulation, are comprised in some position of the chords arranged in these charts. That is, the chords must in use are those that you have already learned. The chords of modulation are those that permit a change from one key to another by easy steps.

When you are playing accompaniments each chord you strike should (in general) contain the note of the melody that is sounded with the chord. You can study this out from the charts, but few persons should need more instruction on this point than the ear itself can give.

Persistence is necessary if you are to learn much from these lessons. You must play the chord over and over, first with the chart before you and then without, until you have fully committed the lesson to memory. Memorize also the names of the keys that make up the different chords. This should give you sufficient knowledge for playing accompaniments. If you wish to go further in the study of the piano or organ, learn the fingering of the scales shown in the upper left hand corner of each chart. Three chords follows the scales. Compare them with the chords shown in the main charts.

Every triad in black letter is marked 1, 3, 5. Always read it so, no matter in what vertical order the notes may be written. Note that the small letter D with a dash above it must not be played.

NEXT LESSON—Key of C Minor, which is the relative key of E Flat Major.

MODEL CONTRACT DOCUMENTS GIVEN IN NEW BOOKLET

FHA Pamphlet Tells What Information Is Desirable In FHA Plans

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A publication titled "Contract Documents for Small House Construction" has been released by the federal housing administration, as additional protection for private lending institutions as well as the mutual mortgage insurance fund.

Because experience has shown that it is difficult to obtain complete contract documents upon which commitments to insure mortgages in new construction cases can be made with confidence, the housing administration has felt that the need for a booklet outlining and describing "the type, kind, and the extent of the information which should be contained in a complete set of documents" submitted by mortgage applicants, was obvious.

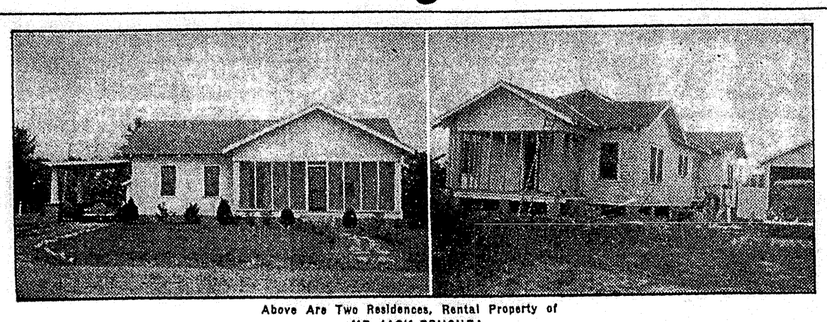

The booklet goes into details concerning the agreement, general conditions, specifications, and working drawings. A form for small construction contracts, issued by the American Institute of Architects, is included in the booklet, together with a set of working drawings as an illustration of the type and kind of information to be presented.

This booklet is issued by the housing administration in order that proper specifications and contracts may be given so that it may assure itself that the dwelling and the security on which it makes a commitment to insure a mortgage will be built as agreed upon.

HOUSEWORK HELPED BY BREAKFAST NOOK

Breakfast nooks save many steps for the housewife and add greatly to home efficiency. Located adjacent to the kitchen, the breakfast nook minimizes effort in preparing the morning meal. It is also found desirable by many families to prepare and serve luncheon in the breakfast nook.

A section of a large kitchen may be converted into a nook with little expense. Colorful, built-in bench seats and a cheerful table in any number of color schemes brightens up the home and is decorative as well as utilitarian. Funds with which to finance the building of a breakfast nook may be obtained from financial institutions operating under terms of the federal housing administration's modernization credit plan.

Plans Under Way For Development Of Small Homes

HOUSTON, Tex.—A mortgage loan broker has plans under way for the development of 1,000 acres just outside the city limits. Each homesite will consist of not less than one and one-half acres and the houses, which will have four or five rooms, will range in price from $2,750 to $3,250.

Construction on the first houses will be started as soon as the federal housing administration approves plans for the project. The houses will be sold under the insured single mortgage system.

The subdivision is planned to attract office workers, craftsmen and industrial workers. The owners feel that an industrial worker on a 36-hour week basis will have plenty of time to devote to the development of such a site.

SHOWS 700 PER CENT GAIN

WILLITS, Calif.—A 700 per cent increase during the last six months in the business of the Lillits Lumber company has been attributed by George Hayward, president of the company, to the program of the federal housing administration.

HOME HARDWARE SHOWS CHANGES

Old Styles Have Been Revived In Effort To Achieve Simplicity

Tastes in finished hardware for houses has changed materially, just as tastes in most other parts of the house have changed. The elaborately "decorative" embossed combination knob and key plates and large conspicuous brass butts, or hinges that protrude into the room in an important manner are no longer aufait.

It is no longer a crime to paint these butts. In fact, for inside work, small, unobtrusive steel or iron butts prepared for paint are now commonly used and painted with the doors Hardware has "gone period" and in English, Spanish or Italian houses we demand wrought iron, either with a semi-polished finish or possibly a rust finish, to give the appearance of age

In colonial houses we range from the wrought-iron thumb latches that our humbler ancestors beat out on the anvil for their little cottages to the exquisite brass and silver cutwork plates with their graceful drop handles of the manor houses of the gentry. In between are the various types of iron spring latches exposed on the surface of the thin doors they used and the same locks with iron or brass boxes to cover their "innards" that our nicer progenitors preferred. When thicker doors were used, mortised locks were installed with small round or oval brass knobs with neat brass rings or rosettes, to cover the hole in the door. With these, simple brass key holes were inserted in the wood—the whole giving a restrained, refined appearance.

All these styles have been revived and are used somewhat too indiscriminately. Try to keep your periods in hardware straight; you should no more put Old English wrought-iron locks on a Dutch Colonial house than you should put green blinds with owl cut-outs on an English manor house.

To use a paradox or two, you can modernize your house by replacing your old hardware with new "old" models, and all this may be done under the modernization credit plan of the federal housing administration.

SPIRAL STAIRWAY

When the recreation room is so located that it must be approached through other less attractive portions of the cellar, a spiral stair can sometimes be installed to connect with a room directly overhead. A trap door in the floor will serve as an entrance and will add a bit of glamour and excitement to the descent to the cave below.

New Device To Operate Blind Saves Trouble

The use of blinds as blinds and not just as decorations is unusual nowadays, not because such use is undesirable or unnecessary but largely because we have made it more difficult for ourselves to use them. We place screens in the windows which must be raised and held up while we lean far out to unfasten the catch. And more and more, we are installing full-length screens, so that, even if we are willing to go to the trouble described, these screens prevent it.

So we have become accustomed to leaving the blinds open. If it rains during the night, that is just to bad; it will rain in, but what can we do? We must have air. And if we are light sleepers and sensitive to light, we awaken early with the sun streaming through our windows. If we pull down the dark shades over the open windows to shut out the light, they flap in the breeze and get soiled by the rain. So we just let the sun stream in and wake up too early.

But we can remedy this by installing blind operators; simple little handles, like an old-fashioned clock key, that are attached through the wall to the lower hinge of the blind. We don't even have to open the window, just wind the little handle and in comes the blind. These devices can be installed in any house and can be financed through a loan from a private institution insured by the federal housing administration.

BUILDING RECORD ANTICIPATED FOR THE PRESENT YEAR

Commitments To Insure Mortgages Forecast Upturn In Business

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Complete reports from all over the country bear out the forecast of Federal Housing Administrator Stewart McDonald that at least three times as many dwelling units will be constructed in the United States during 1936 as in 1935.

Administrator McDonald announced that through the week ending April 25 home mortgages accepted for insurance numbered 63,118, with a dollar volume of $254,365,064.

"Commitments to insure mortgages," Mr. McDonald said, "have to a certain extent taken the place of building permits as the indicator of actual home building that is to come, since the commitment is often issued before the contractor applies for a building permit. The commitment to insure a mortgage starts the hammers and saws going. We cannot, of course, insure a mortgage on a building that doesn't exist, but when our experts have examined and approved the plans and specifications for a home, we issue a commitment to the lending institution agreeing to insure the mortgage on that structure.

"The lender, with that commitment in hand, turns the cash over to the builder, who immediately starts his men to work. Upon completion of the structure, which our experts have inspected at least three times during the operation, the mortgage is automatically insured. This is the reason for the gap between mortgages accepted for insurance and insured premium-paying mortgages. This gap is constantly widening, and hope it will continue to widen, for it is a very healthy sign and a real barometer to the intelligent business man as to the prospects for actual building in the immediate future. The more commitments we issue to insure mortgages, the brighter the outlook for the building-construction and durable-goods industries. Briefly, today's commitment is tomorrow's premium-paying mortgage."

Through this same period 94,371 mortgages, with a dollar volume of $367,287,482, had been selected for appraisal by the federal housing administration. One-third of this amount represents new-home construction and the remainder represents the refinancing of mortgages on dwellings already constructed and the change from the old multiple-mortgage system to the new insured single mortgage system of the federal housing administration.

In the large scale housing division commitments amounting to $32,642,158 had been made on 20 projects located in various sections of the country.

LARGE KITCHEN MAY FURNISH EXTRA ROOM

Large kitchens may be readily remodeled into any of the following units: Dining alcove, household office with planning desk and telephone extension, pantry, storeroom, downstairs lavatory, closets. It is frequently desirable to improve a home by making such changes and diminishing the size of the kitchen. Such conversions may be financed with funds obtained from private financial institutions operating under the federal housing administration's modernization credit plan.

FACADES OF HOMES TO REPLACE MODELS

BUFFALO, N. Y.—A new idea has been developed for the national home shows by John J. Wade, chief architect for the federal housing administration office here and president of the Buffalo chapter of the American Institute of Architects.

The facades of five houses are built, with rooms furnished in keeping with the character of the facade. In this way five model homes can be had, with the expense of building complete roofs and side walls eliminated.

NEW ELECTRIC BULB

A new type of electric bulb, or perhaps it would be more proper to say tube, is now available. It is cylindrical in form and is particularly suitable for the sides of mirrors or over kitchen sinks or ranges or other places where a long, even light is desired. The lights are about 16 inches long and fit into special sockets. The cost is not excessive, however.

MODERNIZATION LOANS ON FARMS GAINING STEADILY

Recent Spring Months Set Record For Rural Properties In U. S.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Modernization loans made to farmers by private financial institutions and insured by the federal housing administration during the month of March totaled 3,300 for $1,179,701, a new record.

Texas jumped from approximately twentieth to second place, California maintaining its lead. Washington remained in third place, while New York fell into fourth position. In this group a total of 1,040 loans were reported for California, amounting to $439,463. Texas loans totaled $90,000, Washington totaled $80,000, and New York $40,761.

Previous to March a record had been established in January, when loans totaled approximately $1,117,781. Since the inception of the program 33,061 loans have been made to farmers, amounting to $12,054,536.87.

FHA ASSISTANCE OFFERED TO VETS

Information Available To Those Who Have Not Yet Cashed Bonds

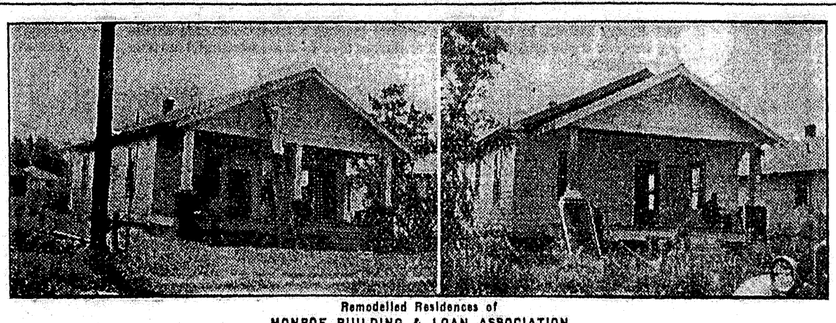

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Veterans of the World war who plan to invest the proceeds of their adjusted-compensation certificates in a home will receive every assistance from the federal housing administration.

Illustrated pamphlets are being sent to the commanders of American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Disabled American Veterans posts for distribution among members, explaining how they may benefit from the national housing act. Each commander is being requested to appoint a federal housing administration liaison officer to work with the administration in presenting the program.

Women's auxiliaries of veterans' organizations are being invited to participate in this program in order to bring the insured single mortgage system and the modernization credit plan to the attention of families of veterans.

BANK IN VERMONT WANTS MORTGAGES

DALLAS, Tex.—A representative of the Rutland Savings bank, the Rutland Trust Co., and Killington National Bank of Rutland, Vt., has announced that these institutions are anxious to take over federal housing administration insured mortgages amounting to approximately one million dollars. Properties within a radius of 100 miles and covered by insured mortgages will be eligible for sale, according to the representative.

Housing Question Box

Q. We would like to have windows with small panes put in our house in place of the large-pane windows we now have. Can we use the same windows and have them divided?

A. It is possible, but if the windows are of stock sizes, it would probably be less expensive to buy new window sash with the divisions in them.

Q. Some of the slates on our roof have come loose. The house is almost new, and I don't think the slates should fall off so soon, but what can I do to put them on again?

A. Sometimes a few slates come loose during the first year after the completion of the house, particularly if the slates are of a thin grade. The shrinkage of the wood frame and deck of the roof sometimes cracks the slates at the nail holes and they slip out of place. A roofer can replace them.

Q. What is the best kind of garbage container to use?

A. A container that is buried in the ground with a removable pail and an iron cover that is raised by pressing down a lever with one's foot is about as neat and satisfactory an arrangement as you can get.

Q. When you use brick as a veneer on the outside wall, is it necessary to put paper over the sheathing?

A. Unless some form of sheathing that is waterproof is used, paper should be erected. Even with waterproof sheathing, there should be paper and through-wall flashing to protect the wood members at the bottom of the wall, as water may penetrate the four-inch brick wall, run down the inside, and collect at the bottom. With paper and flashing, this possible collection of moisture will then be kept away from the wood and guided under the brick work to the outside.

Q. I built an addition to an old building and have stained the shingles on the roof and can't get the old and new shingles to look alike. What would you suggest?

A. Matching new stain to old or new paint to old is always a difficult job and can only be done by experimenting. The elements of time and weather that have operated on the old stain must be simulated in the new. Get the color as neatly matched as possible by staining the new and then give the whole roof a fresh coat, and in a short time the difference should be hardly noticeable.

Q. Is it practical to replace ordinary glass with plate glass in windows with small panes?

A. Yes, it is. It may be necessary to increase the size of the sash weights as plate glass is a little heavier than ordinary grades. If you use thin plate glass the difference may not be great enough to necessitate a change.

Q. I want to build a garage on my lot which is 50 by 100 feet, and I would like to know what you think is the best place to locate it.

A. Without having a plot plan or knowing the character of the surroundings, it is difficult to advise you. However, speaking generally, if it is possible, attach the garage to the house. This keeps the driveway short and leaves the back yard free for development. If this can't be done, try and locate it where it will interfere least with the yard.

Q. I have a hot water heating plant in my house that has no overflow tank but has some sort of relief valves in the cellar. When the fire is low there is no water in the third-story radiators. Can you tell me why?

A. Probably the pressure on the valves was not adjusted to a three-story house. Your third-floor radiators are acting as your expansion tank. Have the plumber adjust the valves.

Q. Is plywood suitable for recovering a plaster wall that has become badly cracked?

A. Yes, it makes a very nice wall. It can be left natural, or oiled and waxed, or painted. If it is painted it is well to size it with shellac to keep the grain from raising.

INSULATION HELPFUL WINTER OR SUMMER

Insulation of walls of a home provides benefits in all seasons. In the spring and summer, a well insulated home is materially cooler inside than one not so equipped. Numerous insulation materials are available in the form of wall board and can be installed in homes for small cost. Other types of insulation may be placed between walls and add to a marked degree warm weather comfort. Insulation projects may be financed with funds obtained from private financial institutions operating under the federal housing administration's modernization credit plan.

DOORS FOR DIGNITY

Many living, dining, and other principal rooms of the home are given additional dignity by having double doors at the entrance. Double doors also allow a wider opening and require only half the width of floor space necessary to swing them. Folded back against the wall, they make a symmetrical group.

HOUSING BILLS IN LEGISLATURE

New York Solons Consider Measures Clarifying Banking Procedure

These bills include measures removing restrictions concerning mortgage loans by the proposed mortgage banks if such loans are insured by the federal housing administration; measures making it possible to invest trust funds in insured mortgages and measures amending the insurance law to permit title and mortgage guaranty companies to loan upon and purchase for resale notes and bonds secured by mortgages or trust deeds insured by the federal housing administration.

A bill will be introduced amending the savings bank law specifically to permit savings banks to invest in notes and bonds secured by the federal housing administration insured mortgages, but limiting such investments to mortgages on real property located within the state.

SUPERVISION SLATED FOR FACTORY WORKER

NORFOLK, Va.—Fifty homes are being constructed in a subdivision known as Academy Terrace. These houses are to be built to meet the terms of the federal housing administration's requirements, and plans for the buildings have already been approved by the architectural section.

Plans are under way for the erection of 100 homes for furniture factory workers at Martinsville and for an additional 100 homes for the employes of a cellophane plant at Covington.

PITTSBURGH'S CHOICE

John C. Fisher, real estate editor of the Pittsburgh Press, finds that since the first of the year a little less than one-seventh of all money spent in construction in Pittsburgh went for single-family dwellings. The value of building permits in this period amounted to $2,847,743, of which $426,-180 was invested in new single-family homes. The average cost per home amounted to $7,356.

BUILDING LOAN GROUPS HANDLE FHA MORTGAGES

Large Percentage Of Insured Mortgages Made By These Associations

WASHINGTON, D. C.—From 20 to 67 per cent of the business being done in insured mortgages under provisions of the national housing act in 16 states is being handled by building and loan associations, according to Federal Housing Administrator Stewart McDonald.

Building and loan associations in Louisiana take the lead, handling 67 per cent of the total insured mortgage businesses in that state. Oregon with 64 per cent and Kansas with 55 per cent are next on the list, with the following states reporting a large volume of building and loan business:

Wisconsin, 51 per cent; Maryland, 42 per cent; Idaho, 40 per cent; Texas, 37 per cent; Washington state, 35 per cent; Massachusetts and Utah, 33 per cent; Arkansas, 31 per cent; New York, 30 per cent; Kentucky, 29 per cent; Ohio, 26 per cent; Oklahoma, 24 per cent; Montana and Minnesota, 23 per cent; Delaware, Wyoming, 21 per cent; Tennessee, 19 per cent; Connecticut, 18 per cent; Nevada, 17 per cent; Indiana, 16 per cent; Virginia, 13 per cent.

A total of 670 building and loan associations are active under the insured single mortgage system. Of this number, at least 90 per cent are members of the federal home loan bank system, and many are important federal savings and loan associations.

Central India is staging a "support the cow" movement. Thousands of "cow contribution boxes" are hung in conspicuous places, with placards appealing to Hindus to support their sacred animal.

White Reflects Greatest Light Science Finds

In all lighting tests, white is far ahead of other colors in reflecting value. According to scientific experiments, white's reflecting power is between 82 and 89 per cent. Cream rates at 73 to 78 per cent, while ivory comes next in the scale with a percentage of 62 to 80. Then comes light pink at around 66 per cent, yellow at 57 per cent, and flesh color at 51 per cent.

Buff and light gray also test at 51 per cent, while light green and aluminum gray rate at 45 and 41 per cent, respectively. Lower in the scale come light blue and sage green with a percentage of 36. Dark red reflects only 13 per cent of the light that strikes its surface, while dark green and dark blue soak up all but 9 and 8 per cent of the light that hits them. Black, at the bottom of the list, is rated close to zero in its reflecting qualities.

DOUBLE PROTECTION

It is very difficult to make in-opening casements absolutely water-tight. Metal weatherstrips are effective, and a projecting drip mold on the outside will also help to keep the rain away from the crack at the bottom of the casement.

In houses where casement windows are desirable, it would be well to use the out-opening type.

RESTAURANTS OF STARS REMODELED

Famous Gathering Places Of Hollywood Groups Enlarged, Redecorated

HOLLYWOOD, Calif.—Two of the most famous gathering places of the movie colony have taken advantage of the modernization credit plan of the federal housing administration to redecorate and renovate the buildings.

The Brown Derby and Sardi's restaurant, both names synonymous with the famous titles of the talking screen, have been completely modernized. Both projects cost in the neighborhood of $35,000, with a substantial amount of the total in each case being obtained from an approved lending institution under the housing administration's plan.

A building adjoining the Brown Derby was added to the restaurant, the main room was redecorated, and a new air-conditioning system was installed throughout both buildings. Sardi's restaurant was remodeled and redecorated, air-conditioning system installed, and the upper floors of the buildings have been converted into storage rooms and office space.

"LAGNIAPPE"
If you have ever visited New Orleans, regardless of how many years ago, you doubtless still vividly recollect your trip through the Old French Market.
As you wandered through the maze of shops and stalls, where for generations the choicest seafoods, vegetables, fruits and other produce have been offered the city's thrifty housewives, you possibly, like many others, there first grasped the real meaning of the word "lagniappe"—the practice of giving a little extra something over and above a fair value. It may be a bunch of extra tender radishes, a little garlic for seasoning, some parsley, or perhaps a bunch of soup vegetables: a generous old custom counted on to establish good will and bring repeat business.
"LAGNIAPPE" FROM "SUPERIOR"
In every order from Superior you will find that little extra something more than you expected. You will find a little better service, a little better materials: that little extra beyond a fair value which in New Orleans they call "lagniappe."

MODEL CONTRACT DOCUMENTS GIVEN IN NEW BOOKLET

FHA Pamphlet Tells What Information Is Desirable In FHA Plans

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A publication titled "Contract Documents for Small House Construction" has been released by the federal housing administration, as additional protection for private lending institutions as well as the mutual mortgage insurance fund.

Because experience has shown that it is difficult to obtain complete contract documents upon which commitments to insure mortgages in new construction cases can be made with confidence, the housing administration has felt that the need for a booklet outlining and describing "the type, kind, and the extent of the information which should be contained in a complete set of documents" submitted by mortgage applicants, was obvious.

The booklet goes into details concerning the agreement, general conditions, specifications, and working drawings. A form for small construction contracts, issued by the American Institute of Architects, is included in the booklet, together with a set of working drawings as an illustration of the type and kind of information to be presented.

This booklet is issued by the housing administration in order that proper specifications and contracts may be given so that it may assure itself that the dwelling and the security on which it makes a commitment to insure a mortgage will be built as agreed upon.

HOUSEWORK HELPED BY BREAKFAST NOOK

Breakfast nooks save many steps for the housewife and add greatly to home efficiency. Located adjacent to the kitchen, the breakfast nook minimizes effort in preparing the morning meal. It is also found desirable by many families to prepare and serve luncheon in the breakfast nook.

A section of a large kitchen may be converted into a nook with little expense. Colorful, built-in bench seats and a cheerful table in any number of color schemes brightens up the home and is decorative as well as utilitarian. Funds with which to finance the building of a breakfast nook may be obtained from financial institutions operating under terms of the federal housing administration's modernization credit plan.

Plans Under Way For Development Of Small Homes

HOUSTON, Tex.—A mortgage loan broker has plans under way for the development of 1,000 acres just outside the city limits. Each homesite will consist of not less than one and one-half acres and the houses, which will have four or five rooms, will range in price from $2,750 to $3,250.

Construction on the first houses will be started as soon as the federal housing administration approves plans for the project. The houses will be sold under the insured single mortgage system.

The subdivision is planned to attract office workers, craftsmen and industrial workers. The owners feel that an industrial worker on a 36-hour week basis will have plenty of of time to devote to the development of such a site.

SHOWS 700 PER CENT GAIN

WILLITS, Calif.—A 700 per cent increase during the last six months in the business of the Lillits Lumber company has been attributed by George Hayward, president of the company, to the program of the federal housing administration.

HOME HARDWARE SHOWS CHANGES

Old Styles Have Been Revived In Effort To Achieve Simplicity

Tastes in finished hardware for houses has changed materially, just as tastes in most other parts of the house have changed. The elaborately "decorative" embossed combination knob and key plates and large conspicuous brass butts, or hinges that protrude into the room in an important manner are no longer aufait.

It is no longer a crime to paint these butts. In fact, for inside work, small, unobtrusive steel or iron butts prepared for paint are now commonly used and painted with the doors. Hardware has "gone period" and in English, Spanish or Italian houses we demand wrought iron, either with a semi-polished finish or possibly a rust finish, to give the appearance of age.

In colonial houses we range from the wrought-iron thumb latches that our humbler ancestors beat out on the anvil for their little cottages to the exquisite brass and silver cut-work plates with their graceful drop handles of the manor houses of the gentry. In between are the various types of iron spring latches exposed on the surface of the thin doors they used and the same locks with iron or brass boxes to cover their "innards" that our nicer progenitors preferred. When thicker doors were used, mortised locks were installed with small round or oval brass knobs with neat brass rings or rosettes, to cover the hole in the door. With these, simple brass key holes were inserted in the wood—the whole giving a restrained, refined appearance.

All these styles have been revived and are used somewhat too indiscriminately. Try to keep your periods in hardware straight; you should no more put Old English wrought-iron locks on a Dutch Colonial house than you should put green blinds with owl cut-outs on an English manor house.

To use a paradox or two, you can modernize your house by replacing your old hardware with new "old" models, and all this may be done under the modernization credit plan of the federal housing administration.

SPIRAL STAIRWAY

When the recreation room is so located that it must be approached through other less attractive portions of the cellar, a spiral stair can sometimes be installed to connect with a room directly overhead. A trap door in the floor will serve as an entrance and will add a bit of glamour and excitement to the descent to the cave below.

New Device To Operate Blind Saves Trouble

The use of blinds as blinds and not just as decorations is unusual nowadays, not because such use is undesirable or unnecessary but largely because we have made it more difficult for ourselves to use them. We place screens in the windows which must be raised and held up while we lean far out to unfasten the catch. And more and more, we are installing full-length screens, so that, even if we are willing to go to the trouble described, these screens prevent it.

So we have become accustomed to leaving the blinds open. If it rains during the night, that is just to bad; it will rain in, but what can we do? We must have air. And if we are light sleepers and sensitive to light, we awaken early with the sun streaming through our windows. If we pull down the dark shades over the open windows to shut out the light, they flap in the breeze and get soiled by the rain. So we just let the sun stream in and wake up too early.

But we can remedy this by installing blind operators; simple little handles, like an old-fashioned clock key, that are attached through the wall to the lower hinge of the blind. We don't even have to open the window, just wind the little handle and in comes the blind. These devices can be installed in any house and can be financed through a loan from a private institution insured by the federal housing administration.

BUILDING RECORD ANTICIPATED FOR THE PRESENT YEAR

Commitments To Insure Mortgages Forecast Upturn In Business

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Complete reports from all over the country bear out the forecast of Federal Housing Administrator Stewart McDonald that at least three times as many dwelling units will be constructed in the United States during 1936 as in 1935.

Administrator McDonald announced that through the week ending April 25 home mortgages accepted for insurance numbered 63,118, with a dollar volume of $254,365,064.

"Commitments to insure mortgages," Mr. McDonald said, "have to a certain extent taken the place of building permits as the indicator of actual home building that is to come, since the commitment is often issued before the contractor applies for a building permit. The commitment to insure a mortgage starts the hammers and saws going. We cannot, of course, insure a mortgage on a building that doesn't exist, but when our experts have examined and approved the plans and specifications for a home, we issue a commitment to the lending institution agreeing to insure the mortgage on that structure.

"The lender, with that commitment in hand, turns the cash over to the builder, who immediately starts his men to work. Upon completion of the structure, which our experts have inspected at least three times during the operation, the mortgage is automatically insured. This is the reason for the gap between mortgages accepted for insurance and insured premium-paying mortgages. This gap is constantly widening, and hope it will continue to widen, for it is a very healthy sign and a real barometer to the intelligent business man as to the prospects for actual building in the immediate future. The more commitments we issue to insure mortgages, the brighter the outlook for the building-construction and durable-goods industries. Briefly, today's commitment is tomorrow's premium-paying mortgage."

Through this same period 94,371 mortgages, with a dollar volume of $367,287,482, had been selected for appraisal by the federal housing administration. One-third of this amount represents new-home construction and the remainder represents the refinancing of mortgages on dwellings already constructed and the change from the old multiple-mortgage system to the new insured single mortgage system of the federal housing administration.

In the large scale housing division commitments amounting to $32,642,158 had been made on 20 projects located in various sections of the country.

LARGE KITCHEN MAY FURNISH EXTRA ROOM

Large kitchens may be readily remodeled into any of the following units: Dining alcove, household office with planning desk and telephone extension, pantry, storeroom, downstairs lavatory, closets. It is frequently desirable to improve a home by making such changes and diminishing the size of the kitchen. Such conversions may be financed with funds obtained from private financial institutions operating under the federal housing administration's modernization credit plan.

FACADES OF HOMES TO REPLACE MODELS

BUFFALO, N. Y.—A new idea has been developed for the national home shows by John J. Wade, chief architect for the federal housing administration office here and president of the Buffalo chapter of the American Institute of Architects.

The facades of five houses are built, with rooms furnished in keeping with the character of the facade. In this way five model homes can be had, with the expense of building complete roofs and side walls eliminated.

NEW ELECTRIC BULB

A new type of electric bulb, or perhaps it would be more proper to say tube, is now available. It is cylindrical in form and is particularly suitable for the sides of mirrors or over kitchen sinks or ranges or other places where a long, even light is desired. The lights are about 16 inches long and fit into special sockets. The cost is not excessive, however.

Shirley Temple's New Picture At Paramount Today

Brought back again to the Capitol theater, the miracle picture of the season, "Magnificent Obsession," starring Irene Dunne and Robert Taylor. It plays for one day only, next Thursday. After seeing it you will never be the same again.

'Poor Little Rich Girl' Is Musical Hit

Child Star Supported By Stellar Cast; New Songs Introduced

IT'S ALWAYS an event when Shirley Temple comes to town, but according to advance reports, when "The Poor Little Rich Girl," the tiny star's new Fox hit, shows today at the Paramount theater, it will be something in a way of a celebration, an epoch, a new milestone in entertainment.

For, definitely, the talented Temple miss is said to give the performance of her life in this new film and, to top it off, she's surrounded by a veritable gallery of Hollywood's brightest stars including Alice Faye, Gloria Stuart, Jack Haley and Michael Whalen.

Add to the star and the cast a modern, stirring, romantic story and five bubbling new song hits by those ace composers, Mack Gordon and Harry Revel, and you have a few of the reasons why "The Poor Little Rich Girl" is being hailed so highly.

Shirley, of course, plays the title role. She is seen as the daughter of Michael Whalen, a wealthy young business man who is far too occupied making money to devote much time to his daughter.

Shirley persuades her daddy that she should be sent to boarding school where she can associate and play with other little children. Whalen agrees, but instead of attending to the task himself, delegates Sara Haden to accompany her to the school.

Waiting for the train, Shirley wanders off. The busy sidewalks of New York lure her on to adventure.

She is entranced by Tony, the organ grinder, and follows him to his home. Tony already has a large family but the new "bambina" so wins him that he lets her stay with his other children.

In the meantime, Miss Haden has been run over by an automobile and during the following days, Shirley's absence goes unreported.

Jack Haley and Alice Faye, an out-of-work vaudeville team, notice Shirley singing and dancing. Haley is inspired with the thought that she is just what the act needs, and despite Miss Faye's protestations, she is taken into the act.

Whalen has met Gloria Stuart and the two have fallen in love. She persuades Whalen to listen to Gillingwater's radio program and he is astounded to recognize Shirley's voice coming over the air.

Whalen doesn't just dash down to the broadcasting studio and bring Shirley home for several other complications enter the plot and there's a whirlwind of exciting events before the thrilling climax is reached.

Shirley is said to perform astonishing dances that top everything she has ever done before and she sings five new songs including "When I'm With You," "But Definitely," "You Gotta Eat Your Spinach, Baby," "Oh, My Goodness" and "Military Man."

Five per cent of Montana's population was employed in 1935 in distributing and retailing cars, trucks, tires, and other accessories.

New Cassidy Film Shows At Capitol

DYNAMITING saves the day in the latest of the thrill-packed "Hopalong Cassidy" films, coming today to the Capitol theater, and dynamite action runs through the entire story, taken from Clarence E. Mulford's novel, "Mesquite, Tumbleweed."

Hoppy and Johnny are far from their home ranch, the "Bar 20," in the picture; they have accepted jobs with an outfit run by a stranger, Big John Trumbull of the "Tumbling L." Arrived at the Tumbling L, they decide they don't like the looks of things and turn down the work.

Shortly after, they are drafted to work for a young easterner running an adjoining ranch, the "Three J." The owner, greenhorn but game, is Jim Jordan, played by Charles Martin. Jordan is having trouble with Trumbull, whose part is taken by Sidney Blackmer.

Hoppy and Jimmy discover a sinister reason behind Trumbull's objection to Jordan's plan to fence his grazing land. While they are aiding the easterner in upholding his rights, Johnny is finding romance in the company of Jordan's sister, Sally, played by Lynn Gabriel.

The story ends with the range pals heading out in search of new adventure; Jordan's troubles are over and the Three J is well on its way toward being a paying proposition.

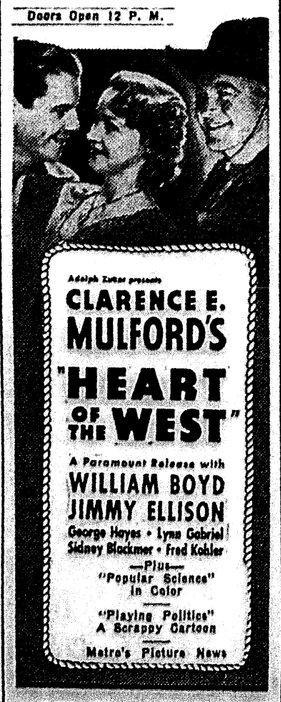

Included in the cast in support of Boyd and Ellison are such featured players as George Hayes, Warner Richmond, Fred Kohler, John Rutherford, Walter Miller, Ted Adams and Robert McKenzie.

Directed by Howard Bretherton, "Heart of the West" was adapted for the screen by Doris Schroeder, Sam Coslow and Victor Young wrote the music which serves as the theme song, "My Heart's in the Heart of the West."

CAPTAIN WEBB UNDERGOES OPERATION ON SATURDAY

Capt. R. P. Webb, for a number of years manager of the state department of conservation, minerals division, in Monroe, underwent an operation at St. Francis sanitarium Saturday.

His physicians said his condition is serious. His illness has extended over a period of many months, part of which time was spent in a hospital in Memphis, from which he returned some weeks ago in evidently improved condition, but it was decided best to perform an operation.

A blood transfusion was given Thursday in the hope of giving him additional strength to undergo the operation.

TYPHOID SERUM GIVEN

BERNICE, La., Aug. 8.—(Special)—Seven hundred and six residents of Bernice and 470 residents of the three miles east of here, were recently given "shots" of typhoid serum by members of the staff of the Union parish health unit.

MODERNIZATION LOANS ON FARMS GAINING STEADILY

Recent Spring Months Set Record For Rural Properties In U. S.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Modernization loans made to farmers by private financial institutions and insured by the federal housing administration during the month of March totaled 3,300 for $1,179,701, a new record.

Texas jumped from approximately twentieth to second place, California maintaining its lead. Washington remained in third place, while New York fell into fourth position. In this group a total of 1,040 loans were reported for California, amounting to $439,463. Texas loans totaled $90,000, Washington totaled $80,000, and New York $40,761.

FHA ASSISTANCE OFFERED TO VETS

Information Available To Those Who Have Not Yet Cashed Bonds

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Veterans of the World war who plan to invest the proceeds of their adjusted-compensation certificates in a home will receive every assistance from the federal housing administration.

Illustrated pamphlets are being sent to the commanders of American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Disabled American Veterans posts for distribution among members, explaining how they may benefit from the national housing act. Each commander is being requested to appoint a federal housing administration liaison officer to work with the administration in presenting the program.

Women's auxiliaries of veterans' organizations are being invited to participate in this program in order to bring the insured single mortgage system and the modernization credit plan to the attention of families of veterans.

BANK IN VERMONT WANTS MORTGAGES

Housing Question Box

Q. We would like to have windows with small panes put in our house in place of the large-pane windows we now have. Can we use the same windows and have them divided?

A. It is possible, but if the windows are of stock sizes, it would probably be less expensive to buy new window sash with the divisions in them.

Q. Some of the slates on our roof have come loose. The house is almost new, and I don't think the slates should fall off so soon, but what can I do to put them on again?

A. Sometimes a few slates come loose during the first year after the completion of the house, particularly if the slates are of a thin grade. The shrinkage of the wood frame and deck of the roof sometimes cracks the slates at the nail holes and they slip out of place. A roofer can replace them.

Q. What is the best kind of garbage container to use?

A. A container that is buried in the ground with a removable pail and an iron cover that is raised by pressing down a lever with one's foot is about as neat and satisfactory an arrangement as you can get.

Q. When you use brick as a veneer on the outside wall, is it necessary to put paper over the sheathing?

A. Unless some form of sheathing that is waterproof is used, paper should be erected. Even with waterproof sheathing, there should be paper and through-wall flashing to protect the wood members at the bottom of the wall, as water may penetrate the four-inch brick wall, run down the inside, and collect at the bottom. With paper and flashing, this possible collection of moisture will then be kept away from the wood and guided under the brick work to the outside.

Q. I built an addition to an old building and have stained the shingles on the roof and can't get the old and new shingles to look alike. What would you suggest?

A. Matching new stain to old or new paint to old is always a difficult job and can only be done by experimenting. The elements of time and weather that have operated on the old stain must be simulated in the new. Get the color as neatly matched as possible by staining the new and then give the whole roof a fresh coat, and in a short time the difference should be hardly noticeable.

Q. Is it practical to replace ordinary glass with plate glass in windows with small panes?

A. Yes, it is. It may be necessary to increase the size of the sash weights as plate glass is a little heavier than ordinary grades. If you use thin plate glass the difference may not be great enough to necessitate a change.

Q. I want to build a garage on my lot which is 50 by 100 feet, and I would like to know what you think is the best place to locate it.

A. Without having a plot plan or knowing the character of the surroundings, it is difficult to advise you. However, speaking generally, if it is possible, attach the garage to the house. This keeps the driveway short and leaves the back yard free for development. If this can't be done, try and locate it where it will interfere least with the yard.

Q. I have a hot water heating plant in my house that has no overflow tank but has some sort of relief valves in the cellar. When the fire is low there is no water in the third-story radiators. Can you tell me why?

A. Probably the pressure on the valves was not adjusted to a three-story house. Your third-floor radiators are acting as your expansion tank. Have the plumber adjust the valves.

Q. Is plywood suitable for recovering a plaster wall that has become badly cracked?

A. Yes, it makes a very nice wall. It can be left natural, or oiled and waxed, or painted. If it is painted it is well to size it with shellac to keep the grain from raising.

INSULATION HELPFUL WINTER OR SUMMER

Insulation of walls of a home provides benefits in all seasons. In the spring and summer, a well insulated home is materially cooler inside than one not so equipped. Numerous insulation materials are available in the form of wall board and can be installed in homes for small cost. Other types of insulation may be placed between walls and add to a marked degree warm weather comfort. Insulation projects may be financed with funds obtained from private financial institutions operating under the federal housing administration's modernization credit plan.

DOORS FOR DIGNITY

Many living, dining, and other principal rooms of the home are given additional dignity by having double doors at the entrance. Double doors also allow a wider opening and require only half the width of floor space necessary to swing them. Folded back against the wall, they make a symmetrical group.

HOUSING BILLS IN LEGISLATURE

New York Solons Consider Measures Clarifying Banking Procedure

These bills include measures removing restrictions concerning mortgage loans by the proposed mortgage banks if such loans are insured by the federal housing administration; measures making it possible to invest trust funds in insured mortgages and measures amending the insurance law to permit title and mortgage guaranty companies to loan upon and purchase for resale notes and bonds secured by mortgages or trust deeds insured by the federal housing administration.

A bill will be introduced amending the savings bank law specifically to permit savings banks to invest in notes and bonds secured by the federal housing administration insured mortgages, but limiting such investments to mortgages on real property located within the state.

SUPERVISION SLATED FOR FACTORY WORKER

NORFOLK, Va.—Fifty homes are being constructed in a subdivision known as Academy Terrace. These houses are to be built to meet the terms of the federal housing administration's requirements, and plans for the buildings have already been approved by the architectural section.

Plans are under way for the erection of 100 homes for furniture factory workers at Martinsville and for an additional 100 homes for the employes of a cellophane plant at Covington.

PITTSBURGH'S CHOICE

John C. Fisher, real estate editor of the Pittsburgh Press, finds that since the first of the year a little less than one-seventh of all money spent in construction in Pittsburgh went for single-family dwellings. The value of building permits in this period amounted to $2,847,743, of which $426,-180 was invested in new single-family homes. The average cost per home amounted to $7,356.

BUILDING LOAN GROUPS HANDLE FHA MORTGAGES

WASHINGTON, D. C.—From 20 to 67 per cent of the business being done in insured mortgages under provisions of the national housing act in 16 states is being handled by building and loan associations, according to Federal Housing Administrator Stewart McDonald.

Building and loan associations in Louisiana take the lead, handling 67 per cent of the total insured mortgage businesses in that state. Oregon with 64 per cent and Kansas with 55 per cent are next on the list, with the following states reporting a large volume of building and loan business:

Wisconsin, 51 per cent; Maryland, 42 per cent; Idaho, 40 per cent; Texas, 37 per cent; Washington state, 35 per cent; Massachusetts and Utah, 33 per cent; Arkansas, 31 per cent; New York, 30 per cent; Kentucky, 29 per cent; Ohio, 26 per cent; Oklahoma, 24 per cent; Montana and Minnesota, 23 per cent; Delaware, Wyoming, 21 per cent; Tennessee, 19 per cent; Connecticut, 18 per cent; Nevada, 17 per cent; Indiana, 16 per cent; Virginia, 13 per cent.

A total of 670 building and loan associations are active under the insured single mortgage system. Of this number, at least 90 per cent are members of the federal home loan bank system, and many are important federal savings and loan associations.

Central India is staging a "support the cow" movement. Thousands of "cow contribution boxes" are hung in conspicuous places, with placards appealing to Hindus to support their sacred animal.

White Reflects Greatest Light Science Finds

In all lighting tests, white is far ahead of other colors in reflecting value. According to scientific experiments, white's reflecting power is between 82 and 89 per cent. Cream rates at 73 to 78 per cent, while ivory comes next in the scale with a percentage of 62 to 80. Then comes light pink at around 66 per cent, yellow at 57 per cent, and flesh color at 51 per cent.

Buff and light gray also test at 51 per cent, while light green and aluminum gray rate at 45 and 41 per cent, respectively. Lower in the scale come light blue and sage green with a percentage of 36. Dark red reflects only 13 per cent of the light that strikes its surface, while dark green and dark blue soak up all but 9 and 8 per cent of the light that hits them. Black, at the bottom of the list, is rated close to zero in its reflecting qualities.

DOUBLE PROTECTION

It is very difficult to make in-opening casements absolutely water-tight. Metal weatherstrips are effective, and a projecting drip mold on the outside will also help to keep the rain away from the crack at the bottom of the casement.

In houses where casement windows are desirable, it would be well to use the out-opening type.

HOLLYWOOD, Calif.—Two of the most famous gathering places of the movie colony have taken advantage of the modernization credit plan of the federal housing administration to redecorate and renovate the buildings.

The Brown Derby and Sardi's restaurant, both names synonymous with the famous titles of the talking screen, have been completely modernized. Both projects cost in the neighborhood of $35,000, with a substantial amount of the total in each case being obtained from an approved lending institution under the housing administration's plan.

A building adjoining the Brown Derby was added to the restaurant, the main room was redecorated, and a new air-conditioning system was installed throughout both buildings. Sardi's restaurant was remodeled and redecorated, air-conditioning system installed, and the upper floors of the buildings have been converted into storage rooms and office space.

If you have ever visited New Orleans, regardless of how many years ago, you doubtless still vividly recollect your trip through the Old French Market.
As you wandered through the maze of shops and stalls, where for generations the choicest seafoods, vegetables, fruits and other produce have been offered the city's thrifty housewives, you possibly, like many others, there first grasped the real meaning of the word "lagniappe"—the practice of giving a little extra something over and above a fair value. It may be a bunch of extra tender radishes, a little garlic for seasoning, some parsley, or perhaps a bunch of soup vegetables: a generous old custom counted on to establish good will and bring repeat business.

In every order from Superior you will find that little extra something more than you expected. You will find a little better service, a little better materials: that little extra beyond a fair value which in New Orleans they call "lagniappe."

THE CONSPIRATORS

MAN AND BEAST WERE IMPRISONED OVERNIGHT, AND TARZAN WAS BROUGHT NEXT DAY TO THE ROYAL AUDIENCE CHAMBER.

JIM GORREY, ACCOMPANIED BY FLINT, WAS THERE TO PLEAD THAT THE DANGEROUS TARZAN BE CONDEMNED AGAIN TO DEATH.

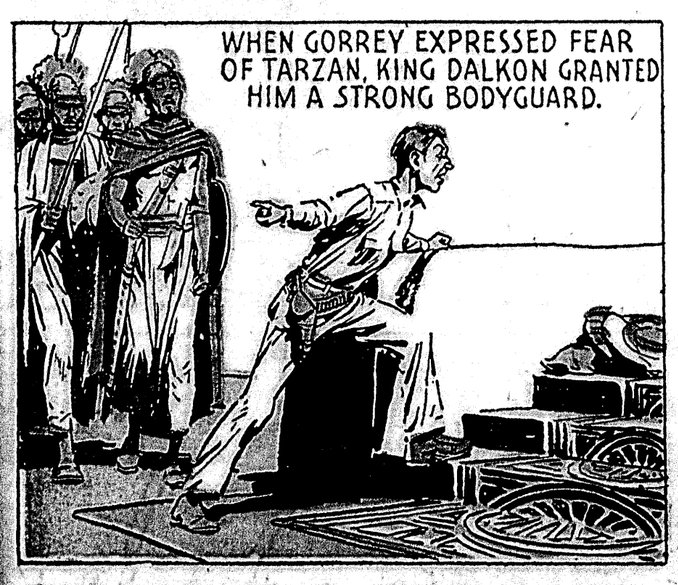

KING DALKON SMILED. "HE HAS BEEN OFFICIALLY EXECUTED. IN THE EYES OF THE LAW HE IS DEAD. HOW CAN I CONDEMN A GHOST?"

RUFUS FLINT, HOWEVER, WAS MORE FRIENDLY, FOR ALREADY HE WAS SCHEMING TO USE TARZAN FOR HIS OWN PURPOSES.

SOON FLINT DELVED INTO POLITICAL AFFAIRS AND FOUND A CENTAIN PRINCE GATRA, ROYAL BLACK SHEEP, WHO WAS HUNGRY FOR POWER.

"I WILL SHOW YOU HOW GORREY MAY WED PRINCESS NAKONIA, HEIRESS TO THE THRONE," SAID THE EVIL PRINCE.

"THEN," HE ADDED SARDONICALLY, "THE KING MIGHT FALL ILL AND DIE; AND GORREY WOULD BE VIRTUALLY THE RULER!"

Shirley Temple's New Picture At Paramount Today

Now playing at the Capitol theater, Clarence E. Mulford's "Heart of the West," another thrilling Hopalong Cassidy adventure starring William Boyd and Jimmy Ellison. In the picture Cassidy teaches a tenderfoot some thrilling western tricks and the tenderfoot makes love to the eastern girl in true western style.

Brought back again to the Capitol theater, the miracle picture of the season, "Magnificent Obsession," starring Irene Dunne and Robert Taylor. It plays for one day only, next Thursday. After seeing it you will never be the same again.

'Poor Little Rich Girl' Is Musical Hit

Child Star Supported By Stellar Cast; New Songs Introduced

IT'S ALWAYS an event when Shirley Temple comes to town, but according to advance reports, when "The Poor Little Rich Girl," the tiny star's new Fox hit, shows today at the Paramount theater, it will be something in a way of a celebration, an epoch, a new milestone in entertainment.

For, definitely, the talented Temple miss is said to give the performance of her life in this new film and, to top it off, she's surrounded by a veritable gallery of Hollywood's brightest stars including Alice Faye, Gloria Stuart, Jack Haley and Michael Whalen.

Add to the star and the cast a modern, stirring, romantic story and five bubbling new song hits by those ace composers, Mack Gordon and Harry Revel, and you have a few of the reasons why "The Poor Little Rich Girl" is being hailed so highly.

Shirley, of course, plays the title role. She is seen as the daughter of Michael Whalen, a wealthy young business man who is far too occupied making money to devote much time to his daughter.

Shirley persuades her daddy that she should be sent to boarding school where she can associate and play with other little children. Whalen agrees, but instead of attending to the task himself, delegates Sara Haden to accompany her to the school.

Waiting for the train, Shirley wanders off. The busy sidewalks of New York lure her on to adventure.

She is entranced by Tony, the organ grinder, and follows him to his home. Tony already has a large family but the new "bambina" so wins him that he lets her stay with his other children.

In the meantime, Miss Haden has been run over by an automobile and during the following days, Shirley's absence goes unreported.

Jack Haley and Alice Faye, an out-of-work vaudeville team, notice Shirley singing and dancing. Haley is inspired with the thought that she is just what the act needs, and despite Miss Faye's protestations, she is taken into the act.

The trio are successful in a radio audition and are hired by Claude Gillingwater.

Whalen has met Gloria Stuart and the two have fallen in love. She persuades Whalen to listen to Gillingwater's radio program and he is astounded to recognize Shirley's voice coming over the air.

Whalen doesn't just dash down to the broadcasting studio and bring Shirley home for several other complications enter the plot and there's a whirlwind of exciting events before the thrilling climax is reached.

Shirley is said to perform astonishing dances that top everything she has ever done before and she sings five new songs including "When I'm With You," "But Definitely," "You Gotta Eat Your Spinach, Baby," "Oh, My Goodness" and "Military Man."

Five per cent of Montana's population was employed in 1935 in distributing and retailing cars, trucks, tires, and other accessories.

New Cassidy Film Shows At Capitol

Hoppy and Johnny are far from their home ranch, the "Bar 20," in the picture; they have accepted jobs with an outfit run by a stranger, Big John Trumbull of the "Tumbling L." Arrived at the Tumbling L, they decide they don't like the looks of things and turn down the work.

Shortly after, they are drafted to work for a young easterner running an adjoining ranch, the "Three J." The owner, greenhorn but game, is Jim Jordan, played by Charles Martin. Jordan is having trouble with Trumbull, whose part is taken by Sidney Blackmer.

Hoppy and Jimmy discover a sinister reason behind Trumbull's objection to Jordan's plan to fence his grazing land. While they are aiding the easterner in upholding his rights, Johnny is finding romance in the company of Jordan's sister, Sally, played by Lynn Gabriel.

The story ends with the range pals heading out in search of new adventure; Jordan's troubles are over and the Three J is well on its way toward being a paying proposition.

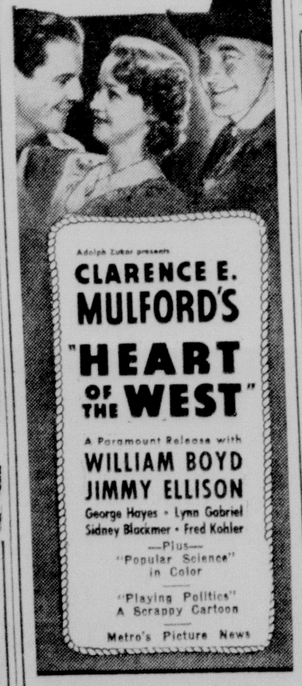

Included in the cast in support of Boyd and Ellison are such featured players as George Hayes, Warner Richmond, Fred Kohler, John Rutherford, Walter Miller, Ted Adams and Robert McKenzie.

Directed by Howard Bretherton, "Heart of the West" was adapted for the screen by Doris Schroeder, Sam Coslow and Victor Young wrote the music which serves as the theme song, "My Heart's in the Heart of the West."

NEW INSPECTOR ARRIVES

LAKE PROVIDENCE, La., Aug. 8.—(Special)—W. H. Childs of White Castle, La., has arrived in Lake Providence to work out of the East Carroll parish health unit, as parish sanitary engineer, succeeding Jack Dewees, who is leaving for Homer, La.

CAPTAIN WEBB UNDERGOES OPERATION ON SATURDAY

Capt. R. P. Webb, for a number of years manager of the state department of conservation, minerals division, in Monroe, underwent an operation at St. Francis sanitarium Saturday.

His physicians said his condition is serious. His illness has extended over a period of many months, part of which time was spent in a hospital in Memphis, from which he returned some weeks ago in evidently improved condition, but it was deemed best to perform an operation.

A blood transfusion was given Thursday in the hope of giving him additional strength to undergo the operation.

TYPHOID SERUM GIVEN

BERNICE, La., Aug. 8.—(Special)—Seven hundred and six residents of Bernice and 470 residents of Shiloh, three miles east of here, were recently given "shots" of typhoid serum by members of the staff of the Union parish health unit.

Tarzan

by EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS

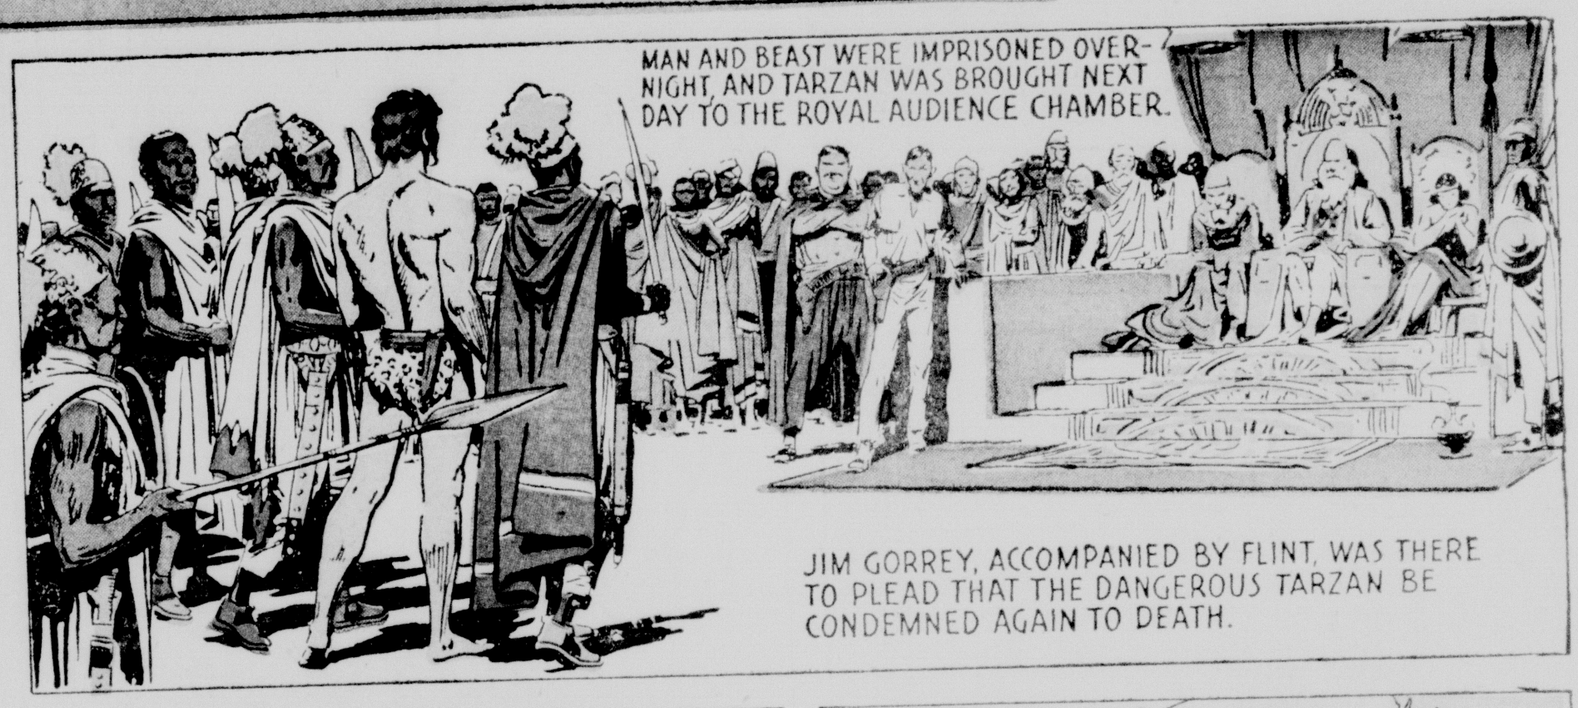

UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE, Inc.

THE CONSPIRATORS

MAN AND BEAST WERE IMPRISONED OVERNIGHT, AND TARZAN WAS BROUGHT NEXT DAY TO THE ROYAL AUDIENCE CHAMBER.

JIM GORREY, ACCOMPANIED BY FLINT, WAS THERE TO PLEAD THAT THE DANGEROUS TARZAN BE CONDEMNED AGAIN TO DEATH.

KING DALKON SMILED. "HE HAS BEEN OFFICIALLY EXECUTED. IN THE EYES OF THE LAW HE IS DEAD. HOW CAN I CONDEMN A GHOST?"

RUFUS FLINT, HOWEVER, WAS MORE FRIENDLY, FOR ALREADY HE WAS SCHEMING TO USE TARZAN FOR HIS OWN PURPOSES.

SOON FLINT DELVED INTO POLITICAL AFFAIRS AND FOUND A CENTAIN PRINCE GATRA, ROYAL BLACK SHEEP, WHO WAS HUNGRY FOR POWER.

"I WILL SHOW YOU HOW GORREY MAY WED PRINCESS NAKONIA, HEIRESS TO THE THRONE," SAID THE EVIL PRINCE.

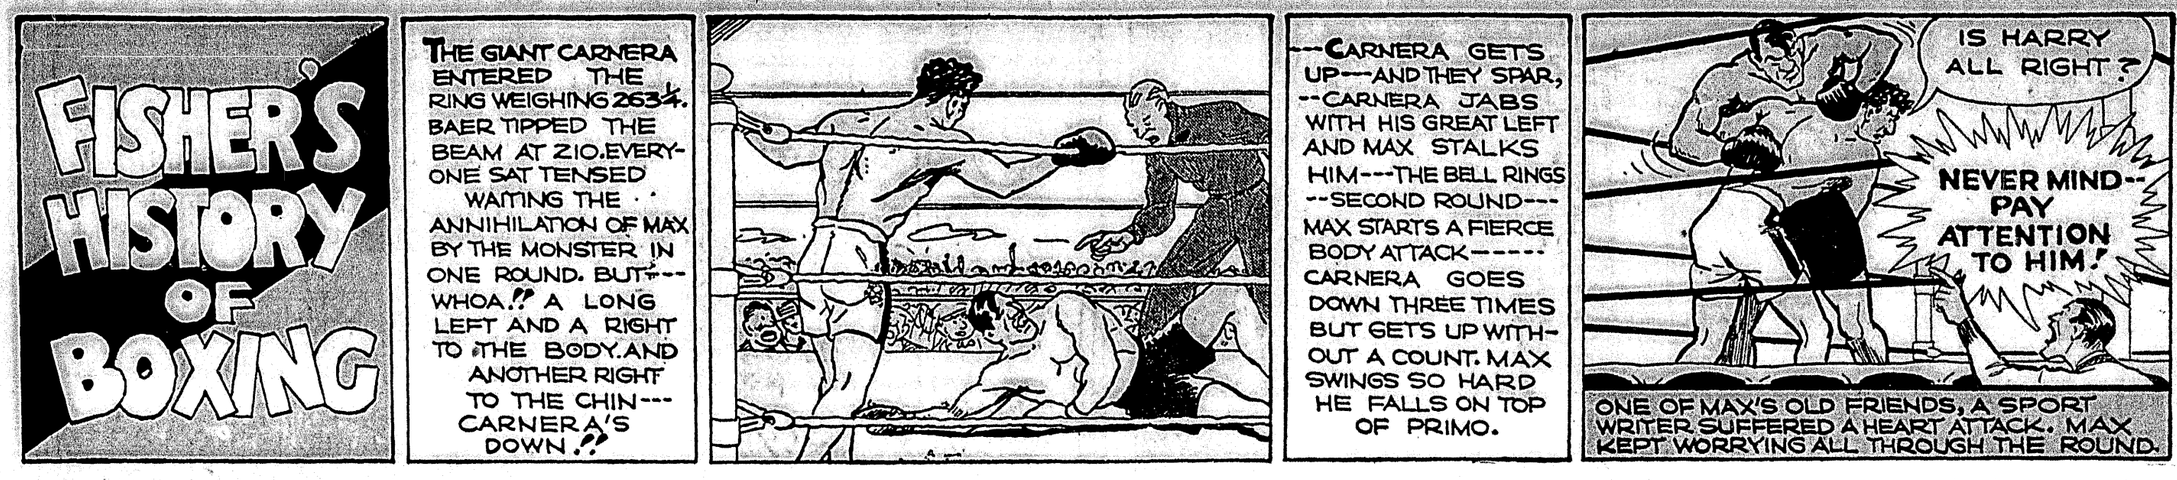

"THEN," HE ADDED SARDONICALLY, "THE KING MIGHT FALL ILL AND DIE; AND GORREY WOULD BE VIRTUALLY THE RULER!"

NEXT WEEK: The Unfortunate Princess

WEE WEE WEE!

AW, THAT'S NO WAY TO CALL A HAWG IN MY NECK OF THE WOODS, SISTER. I'M A BACON YODELER FROM A WAY BACK. LISTEN: POO-GIE! POO-GIE! PIG! PIG!

NAH, CLIP! YOU GOT TO GET THAT HUNGRY NOTE IN YOUR VOICE, LIKE THIS: SOO-EY! SOO-EY! SOOOO-a PIG! SOO-EEEEEEEEE!

HEY! WHAT'S COME OVER THESE PIGS?

HELP! THEY'RE BREAKING INTO TH' JAIL!

SOO-EEE!

OINK OINK!

OINK!

YOU SEE, HOSKINS, THE ONLY HOG CALLERS IN ALL HITAXIA ARE IN PRISON. SIMPLY BY RELEASING THE PRISONERS, THE DICTATOR COULD RID HIS COUNTRY OF PIGS.

MY WORD! I-I'LL SUGGEST IT TO HIM.

HALF AN HOUR LATER:

CLIMB ON THIS GARBAGE TRUCK, YOU YOUNG WHIPPER-SNAPPERS, AND LET'S HAVE THE OLD HOG-CALL—

OINK! OINK!

WHOOP-EE!

THERE, HOSKINS! YOU WERE WRONG WHEN YOU SAID I COULDN'T BUY MY DAUGHTER'S WAY OUT OF JAIL. A MILLION DOLLARS WORTH OF PIGS DID THE TRICK, AND I STILL HAVE THE PIGS.

8-9 EINSUNDER

RUSSIA'S staunch steamer Chelyuskin plowed slowly through ice along the coast of Siberia, in the winter of 1933-4. On board were 89 men, 10 women and two children, all under Prof. Otto T. Schmidt, explorer and scientist.

Three miles a day the ship moved, as the crew pushed and blasted away the ice floes. A little more and the Bering Sea, open water, would be reached. Slower and slower moved the ship. Then it stopped, ice jammed against it, its seams split, and it sank.

Escaped from the Chelyuskin, with food and shelter, the 101 Russians found themselves on a floating ice ridge, storms howling about them, freezing temperature numbing their bodies.

A radio set was saved, and through this the world heard of their plight. Soon airplanes, ice breakers, even dog teams converged toward the marooned camp, 150 miles from land, not far from Bering Strait, "death trap of the Arctic."

For an entire month the little group waited, in anxious agony. Then came the first airplane. It took off the women and children. A few days later came another, and took off Professor Schmidt, ill with fever. By the end of the second month, the last man was rescued.
